Repeal Wins First House Test by Vote Of 237-177

Neutrality Bill Goes To Conference; Final Margin Is Expected To Be Narrower

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday voted the Administration a preliminary but significant victory in an opening House trial of neutrality bill sentiment.

Isolationists were repulsed 237 to 177 in a brief but brisk fight to open the Senate-approved bill to amendments.

Members agreed instead to send the measure to conference. By a viva voce vote they upheld the leadership plan of procedure. The opposition replied with a motion to instruct the conferees to restore the arms embargo.

Three additional sets of opposition "instructions" to conferees were prepared for submission today. Some of these may go to a ballot today, but the final repeal vote is expected tomorrow.

The Administration's 60-vote margin against yesterday's attack on the conference rule gave repeal forces an initial advantage. While the issue was not a straightout test of repeal sentiment, leaders claimed it paved the way for repeal of the embargo. They said their victory might be smaller on the actual repeal vote.

Rules Confuse Opposition

Confused by the complicated rules procedure, opposition leaders appeared in doubt how to move on three other amendments after Representative Shanley (Democrat), of Connecticut, offered their original motion to restore the arms embargo.

Only two amendments are in order on the Shanley embargo motion, and opponents of the bill have three major changes they seek to propose in the bill. Although a substitute motion in addition is allowed by the rules, leading opponents said they feared a substitute move might sidetrack their earlier proposals.

After a conference last night with House Majority Leader Rayburn on the rules tangle, Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, announced he would offer today an amendment to the Shanley motion to insist on the limited arms embargo approved last session by the House. The Vorys amendment embargoes shipments of actual arms and ammunition, but permits sale of other "implements of war."

Two Major Amendments

Two other major changes on which opposition forces seek a House vote are:

A move by Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, to instruct conferees specifically to forbid any use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund or loans by the RFC or Export-Import Bank in aid of belligerents.

An attempt by Representative Corbett (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to instruct conferees to strike out any authority for the President to establish "combat areas" in which American ship or passenger movement would be barred.

Majority Leader Rayburn suggested yesterday that all votes on amendments go over until tomorrow for final disposition, and debate in the House be concluded today.

But Vorys said one or more amendments might have to be voted on today, if the opposition is to obtain action on all suggested changes.

"We were told this was a wide open rule, but it looks like we might get choked off," charged Vorys.

"We are under the regular rules of the House, and there will be no effort at choking," smiled Rayburn.

Fish Starts Skirmish

Yesterday's initial skirmish came on an opposition effort, led by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, to amend the rules and force the bill into the House foreign Affairs Committee for detailed amendment.

The test came on the usual "previous question" vote leading up to approval of the rule. Rayburn, Chairman Sabath and Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, were among key leaders figures who took the floor to Fish's charges of "gag."

The House verdict, preponderantly in favor of the Administration, ended any opposition hopes for defeating the bill in detail on the floor, but left them the opportunity of "instructing" conferees on as many points as they are able to word into their motion.

The test on the rule showed 231 Democrats, 4 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 American Laborite voting up with the Administration

20-Cent Volume of 130 Pages Expected To Stir Controversy

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

A little blue book which the Government Printing Office will sell for 20 cents rolled off the presses yesterday. It will probably start a controversy here and throughout the Nation.

"High Schools and Sex Education" is the title.

I nfact, the controversy over the 130-page book, sponsored jointly by the Public Health Service and Office of Education and outlining a sex education program for school children, already is under way.

"What the District schools are doing along this line is decidedly inadequate," said Ray Everett, executive secretary of the Washington School Hygiene Society. "Here is an excellent handbook, most of whose principles can be applied to local conditions, but whether they will be is something else.

"School administrators say they gloss over sex education because of parental opposition. Well, we've addressed and polled thousands of parents and 90 to 95 per cent of them say they are not only ready, but anxious, for the introduction of a good, sound program."

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, connected that sex education is taught in biology and certain other science courses. He reserved decision on the new book becaus he had not yet seen a copy.

Benjamin C. Gruenberg, special consultant to the Public Health Service, and J. L. Kaukonen, who is attached to the same agency, collaborated in the writing of "High Schools and Sex Education."

The book recommends against the establishment of separate courses on sex education on the ground that this would unduly emphasize the subject, advancing a plan, instead, for its integration with various courses in the curriculum.

Not only the biology, physiology and hygiene classroom are adapt-

$275,000,000 More Sought For Defense

Roosevelt to Ask For Current Year Increase to Meet Emergency Boost

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday he would ask Congress in January for an additional $275,000,000 for the current fiscal year to defray costs of emergency expansions of the defense forces due to the European war.

This sum, Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference, would pay for personnel increases in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and FBI ordered last month when he declared a limited national emergency to exist. It also would take care of the cost of refitting laid-up destroyers for the neutrality patrol and additional construction at posts of the armed forces.

Appropriation of the additional money would run the direct cash outlay for national defense during the current fiscal year close to $1,800,000,000. Including contract authorizations, the total will nearly reach $2,000,000,000.

Two Billions for 1941

At the same time, from Capitol Hill came further indications that next year's national defense bill would exceed $2,000,000,000 in direct appropriations. Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Military Affairs Committee said the Army would require expenditures in the neighborhood of $1,000,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning next July.

Last week Chairman Scrugham of the House Military Appropriations sub-committee estimated that naval costs next year would total approximately the same figure. Both estimates were made on the basis of existing authorizations for the two services, and do not include any further expansion which may be voted this winter, the Congressman made plain.

In making the announcement on emergency defense costs, the President said he had written to Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee on the matter in order that the group may begin studying details of the proposals at once. The money would not be required before February, however, the President said.

Navy Bill Heads List

Mr. Roosevelt also soid he had informed Representative Scrugham that next year's naval budget estimates would be submitted this month so that his subcommittee could begin work on them. The Navy bill will be the first of the supply measures brought before the House, under tentative plans for the regular session.

In another defense development, the War Department announced the formation of the first tactical air squadron under its plane expansion program. The unit, designated as the Twenty-seventh Reconnaissance Squadron, will be sent to Puerto Rico some time this month, giving that strategic island its first aircraft defense organization.

Maj. Dunton to Command

Nine two-engined B-18A bombers—first increment of the squadron—will fly from Langley Field, Va., to a temporary landing field on the island, it was said. A major Army air base, costing $8,000,000, is under construction there.

The department said Maj. Delmar H. Dunton would be in command of the squadron. The unit consists of 28 officers and 228 men.

Congress will be presented with an almost unprecedented situation in handling the $275,000,000 defense deficiency estimates. Normally the legislators pass on all expenditures before the executive departments can contract to spend money, but when these funds come up for consideration, much of it already will have been spent.

Witches, Goblins Keep Police Busy, but Rain Delays Parade

The Metropolitan Police Department last night staged Washington's only Halloween parade, a five-hour procession of squad cars to every corner of the District.

Postponement of the colorful parade which had been expected to draw a crowd of 200,000 to Constitution avenue "decentralized" the city's celebration, according to police. Complaints came over the police switchboard at the rate of nearly 100 an hour.

The traditional parade, called off yesterday after 36 hours of rainfall, is expected to begin at 7:30 p. m. tonight. The Weather Bureau last night gave the procession the green light with a cheerful prediction of "fair and slightly warmer" for today.

Metnwhile, the Capital took its cue from Winnie Porter, 18-year-old waitress chosen as Halloween Queen. The weather, said the philosophic Miss Porter, "just makes me Queen for another day."

Thousands of citizens who agree that two days of celebration are better than one, last night joined the gay promenade on downtown and neighborhood shopping thoroughfares. Confetti bordered F street from Tenth to Fourteenth streets northwest, as did a cordon of police, in a rough ration of one t oevery half dozen plate glass windows.

Duce Sweeps Out Pro-Nazis And Creates Neutral Cabinet

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Rome, Oct. 31.—In one of the greatest shakeups in Fascist history, Premier Mussolini tonight swept out six cabinet ministers, his army and air force chiefs of staff and the secretary of the Fascist Party.

His new appointees give the cabinet a strong group of champions of neutrality, fortifying Foreign Minister Ciano in his present policy and strengthening the armed force.

Those elements who had been considered strongly pro-German—Lieut. Gen. Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist Party, and Dino Alfieri, propaganda minister—are replaced by men who are nothing but pro-Italian. Edmundo Rossoni, who as minister of agriculture negotiated pacts with Russia and generally favored a friendly policy with Moscow, also has been removed. Aside from the armed forces, every new man is "a squadrista" belonging to the party since before the march on Rome.

Ferruccio Latini, Dino Alfieri, Felice Guarneri, Edmondo Rossoni, Antonio Benni, Cabolli Gigli, Gen. Alberto Pariani, Gen. Giuseppe Valle and Medici del Vascello have been removed.

Gen. Terruzi Elevated

The new ministers are Gen. Attilio Terruzi, who is advanced from undersecretary to Minister of Italian Africa; Renato Ricci, minister of corporations; Alessandro Pavolini, popular culture; Raffaelo Riccardi, foreign exchange; Giuseppe Tassinari, agriculture; Giovanni Host Venturi, communications, and Adelchi Serena, public works.

In addition, Rudolfo Graziani has been named chief of staff of the army; Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, undersecretary of state for war; Gen. Francesco Pricolo, chief of staff and undersecretary for air; Luigi Russo, undersecretary for the presidency of the council; Sergio Nannini, undersecretary for land reclamation, and Giuseppe Lombrassa, commissar for internal migration.

The most important and sensational change of all is the removal of Starace and his replacement by Ettore Muti, hero of the Ethiopian and Spanish wars.

Only four ministers keep their posts—Count Ciano, Giuseppi Bottai, Count Dino Grandi and Thaondi Revel. Mussolini gives up the portfolio of Italian Africa but still retains the premiership, war, navy, air and the interior—the key positions, which give him a grip on the government.

No Policy Change Indicated

Taking that into account and the fact that Ciano remains foreign minister, it is obvious that this shakeup, however spectacular it may appear at first sight, is administrative in nature and does not signify any change of policy.

It merely removes any possibility of friction or misunderstanding in

The War Today . . .

SOVIET PREMIER MOLOTOFF, addressing the Supreme Soviet, accused the Allies of prolonging the war, attacked President Roosevelt for "intervening" in behalf of Finland, and warned Finland and Turkey of Soviet anger over failure to accept Moscow's terms.

FINLAND'S ANXIETY grew as Molotoff's "bombshell" struck and prospects of complete failure of the negotiations were seen, with possibility a delegation en route to Moscow might be recalled.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI fortified Italy's neutrality by ousting pro-Axis cabinet members and staff chieftains in a sweeping government reorganization.

GERMANY'S PRESS claimed important victories over the French on the frontier, but military officials minimized the operations.

FRENCH REPORTED "marked activity" on the front, with Nazi heavy artillery shelling a border town and aircraft operating on a wide scale.

BRITISH REACTION to Molotoff's speech was that it left the situation unchanged, although some circles professed to see a rebuff to Hitler.

Prize Ship Takes on Provisions at Tromso; Flies German Flag

By the Associated Press

Bergen, Norway, Oct. 31.—The American freighter City of Flint, in command of a German prize crew, was feeling her way southward along the north Norwegian coast tonight followed by a Norwegian man-o-war.

The prize ship, on her way from the Russian port of Murmansk to a haven in Germany, was sighted off Lodingen Light this morning flying a German flag.

(In Berlin the United States Embassy called the attention of the German government informally to its responsibility for the safety of the 41 members of the captive American crew.

U. S. Asks Crew Be Spared

(The government in Washington asked both Britain and Germany to avoid any action which would imperil unnecessarily the crew members.

(In London, an admiralty spokesman, commenting on the United States request, said "we don't sink ships on sight. Naturally we won't expose the crew to unnecessary danger.")

Shipping circles gave the German prize crew an even chance to escape British detection on her blockade-dodging voyage along the rugged Norwegian coast.

Appearance of the City of Flint off Lodingen, on the inland route down one of the world's most broken coasts, was taken as an indication the German crew had ob-

Germans Report Invasion of Two French Villages On Maginot Line

By Louis P. Lochner.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 31.—DNB, official German news agency, late today published a report describing how German scouting troops invaded two hastily evacuated French villages lying before the Maginot Line and returned with war booty.

However, military experts authorized to give information said the report did not come from the high command.

The experts would not even admit that the report was the first evidence of Germans crossing into French territory, saying that at the French-German frontier it often was difficult to know exactly where the boundary line runs, with the result that inquisitive scouting units often get on the other fellow's ground.

(A French high command communique on October 16 said German troops had penetrated momentarily to the French frontier post of Apach.)

Soon after inquiries by correspondents began to pour in, DNB advised that the report concerned "an event which occurred some time ago at the Western Front."

"Offensive" Increasing

However, a report of the same occurrence, dated October 31, was front-paged by early editions of tomorrow's Voelkischer Beobachter, central organ of the Nazi Party.

The story, contradicting DNB's assertion that the event was several days old, bore the three-column headline "with the reconnoitering unit in the forefield of the Maginot Line.

Foreign observers noted that the word "offensive" is in increasing use among many Germans, and wondered whether DNB had not revealed perma turely the sort of reconnoitering activity which precedes major military activity.

DNB said scouts penetrated into French territory, where they soon discovered an unfinished trench and almost a mile farther on reached the first of two villages.

Reports Soft-Pedaled

The military experts also soft-pedaled DNB's report that army equipment, such as munitions, helmets, and remnants of crashed airplanes, were alleged to have been found.

When the French decided to retreat behind their line at these points, these experts said, poilus probably threw away some equipment that either was worn or defective, knowing they would get replacements in their next encampment.

Summing up, one spokesman said nothing was changed by the DNB report and that generally speaking all still was quiet on the Western Front.

Explanations Vary

This authorized explanation was at variance with the Voelkischer Beobachter's account by its special correspondent, Paul Dierichs, who asserted the "French must have left their positions in great haste. Had they seen ghosts? Much machine gun and grenade thrower munitions, steel helmets, army cars, pockets for instruments in the field, flasks, rocket pistols and other articles of equipment were left behind

"We packed everything and dragged it back home as booty in sacks, canvases and baskets."

Highlights of Molotoff Speech

By the Associated Press

Highlights from the foreign-policy speech of Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff today:

OF FINLAND

Russia asked a mutual assistance pact with Finland similar to those with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, but "did not insist" when Finland objected.

Finnish-Soviet negotiations now have turned to matters concerning protection of Leningrad, Russia's western metropolis.

OF THE UNITED STATES

Repeal of the arms embargo "may prolong and sharpen the war."

"Even the President of the United States has found it possible to mix" in the Soviet-Finnish negotiations "in contradiction of the United States' policy of neutrality."

OF POLAND

OF GERMANY

Russia's nonaggression pact with Germany is one of the most important new elements in Europe.

OF THE ALLIES

"Britain and France, which but yesterday were declaiming against aggression, are in favor of continuing the war" to protect their colonial empires.

Finns Stunned By Revelation Of Red Terms

Helsinki May Tell World Whole Story Of Kremlin Talks

By Lynn Heinzerling,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Helsinki (Wednesday), Nov. 1.—Premier Molotoff's unexpected revelations on the Russian-Finnish negotiations before the Supreme Soviet shocked officials in Helsinki and a foregn office communique early today said his address had "created a new situation."

Just what effect the Russian premier's address would have on negotiations between the two countries was not clear, but a delay was certain, observers said.

The communique did not say whether Finland's delegation to Mosco , which left Helsinki last night, would continue its journey or return here for new instructions. The delegation was scheduled to arrive in Leningrad today.

The Finnish government had kept the negotiations a matter of close secrecy.

At the same time the London Daily Sketch, quoting Paris radio dispatches from Moscow, said the Soviet has invited Sweden to send a delegation to the Kremlin to negotiate a trade and political treaty.

The first reaction in political circles was a belief that Finland would not yield to the demands which, as outlined in Moscow today by Premier Molotoff, involved an exchange of territory and the granting to Russia of the right to establish a naval base on Finnish territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland.

The Finnish negotiators, who entrained for Moscow tonight with their "final answer," were expected to leave the next step up to the Russians after registering their rejection of the Soviet demands.

[The government wired the mission en route to Moscow to halt at Viipura on the frintier and communicate with Helsinki for instructions.—Editor's note.]

It was generally expected that the Finnish government would now

Colonial Aims Held Cause of War; U. S. Action On Arms Scored

By Witt Hancock
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 31.—Premier Molotoff today chided President Roosevelt for lending Finland the "moral support" of the United States, in effect, warned the Finns to come to terms, and notified the world that Russia is drawing closer to Germany and Japan, once partners in the anti-Comintern pact.

In an exhaustive report on Russia's new foreign policy, the premier and foreign commissar told more than 1,100 Deputies attending the extraordinary joint session of the Soviet Council that the United States' move to repeal its arms embargo would "intensify, aggravate and protract" the European war.

Molotoff, in his 85-minute speech:

Struck at President Roosevelt for "intervening" in Russia's negotiations with Finland "in contradiction of the United States' policy of neutrality."

Poland Declared Dead

Declared Russia was unable to understand Finland's refusal of a mutual assistance pact similar to those which made the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania virtual protectorates.

Denounced Great Britain and France for carrying on the war with Germany for the purpose, he said, of safeguarding their colonial possessions.

Said "there can be no question of restoring Poland" and that it was "absurd to continue the present war" for such a cause.

Asserted that German and Russian relations are being placed on an increasingly solid and friendly basis.

Announced trade negotiations would be opened with Japan and opened the door for a move by Tokyo toward stronger cooperation—possibly a nonaggression pact.

Silent on Balkans

Avoided giving any hint of any possible Soviet aims in the Balkans, but said Turkey, which refused a pact with Russia and signed one with Britain and France, must take note of the offer of cooperation to Japan.

By her pact with Britain and France, he said, Turkey had moved into the "orbit of war" and he would not hazarad a guess whether Turkey would come to regret it.

Russia's dictator, Joseph Stalin, was given a tremendous ovation when he seated himself with other Soviet leaders.

Japanese Truce Cited

After referring to the eptember 16 truce which ended the "sometimes very sanguinary" war on the border between Sovietized Outer Mongolia and Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo, Molotoff said the 'possibility" had been established for starting Japanese-oviet trade negotiations.

"For our part I must say that we look with favor on Japanese overtures" for improvement of relations, he said, but added 'it is difficult as yet to judge how far we may reckon on the rapid development of this tendency."

Touching on President Roosevelt's plea on October 11 for Finland, Molotoff said near the end of his address:

"One finds it hard to reconcile that with the American policy of neutrality.

"In a message to Comrade Kalinin, chairman of the presiduum of the Supreme Soviet, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the hope that friendly and peaceful relations between the U. S. S. R. and Finland would be preserved and developed.

"One might think that matters are in better shape between the United States and, let us say, the Philip-

Lima, Peru, Oct. 31.—Commander Humberto Gal'Lino and Capt. Victor Gal'Lino, Peruvian brothers, long overdue on a projected 4,100-mile nonstop flight from New York to Lima, were forced down near Puna Island, in the Gulf of Guayaquil, the National Telegraph Co. was informed today.

They were forced down after the fuel supply of 1,150 gallons of gasoline was exhausted—650 miles short of their goal—because a leak in the tanks allowed 220 gallons to trickle away.

N.Y. Dock Workers Vote to Strike

New York, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The International Longshoremen's Union tonight voted to strike here in 48 hours unless ten coastwise shipping companies grant wage increases and shorter hours.

Longshoremen work 46 hours a week and receive 95 cents an hour. They are demanding a 40-hour week and $1.05 an hour. Their present contract expires at midnight.

Dies Witness Arrested Here In New Orleans Murder Case

By John B. Oakes

Charge and countercharge flew yesterday about the head of William C. McCuistion, important witness of the Dies Committee, who, at the conclusion of his testimony, was taken to jail by Metropolitan police and booked as a fugitive from justice.

Accused of murder in New Orleans, McCuistion was the central figure of a day's session involving recriminations between the Dies Committee and the National Maritime Union. Chairman Dies inferred that the head of the civil liberties division of the Department of Justice had hoped to discredit the evidence.

At the close of McCuistion's testimony, the committee adopted a resolution asking that the witness be permitted to describe to the Department of Justice "the various alleged attempts to deprive him of his civil rights by the National Maritime Union and by the Communists."

The National Maritime Union, C. I. O. affiliate from which McCuistion was expelled a few months ago, asserted that the committee was attempting "to protect the reputation of a man wanted for murder." The N. M. U. added that "the committee's obvious solicitude for McCuistion results, we have no doubt, from his connection with shipowners."

From New Orleans came word last night that Chief of Detective

Roosevelt Calls 3d Term Parley An Invention

Mine Workers to Raise $3,000,000 for Union Use in Campaign Year

President Roosevelt yesterday characterized as someone's invention a charge, contained in a public letter by John L. Lewis, that a proposed conference of Western Progressives was secretly panned to launch a third-term boom.

At the same time, Lewis' powerful union of mine workers, which gave much financial and other support to Mr. Roosevelt's 1936 campaign, levied assessments on its members that are expected to give the union a fund of about $3,000,000 by March 1 for the campaign year of 1940.

Lewis, head of the C. I. O. and chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League, Monday had ordered league branches in the West to refuse to participate in the reported conference. In a letter to Gov. Culbert L. Olson of California, he criticised the "surreptitious manner" in which the session was being organized, "the doubtful source of its finances" the "slight to Senator Burton K. Wheeler," Montana Democrat, and the "exclusion of labor" from the program drafting, as well as the "secret plans" for the third-term boom.

Conference Called Off .. ..

Questioned at his press conference regarding the Lewis letter, President Roosevelt said all he new of a conference was that last August there was planned a meeting of all parties to discuss liberal government, social welfare, old-age pensions, farm problems and such matters.
was not to be a political meeting.

Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized that it He planned to attend it on his contemplated trip to the West coast, if it was a truly non-partisan gathering. However, the conference was called off.

Lewis had charged that the conference now proposed was being organized by Norman N. Littell, assistant to Attorney General Murphy, and Marshall E. Dimoc, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Dimoc yesterday told reporters that he and Littell were not organizing the conference but, since both are from the West, their advice had been ased about it. He referred questions to Philip Dunne, of Los Angeles, who he said was provisional executive secretary of the conference.

Lewis' letter questioned the legality of the conference activities of Dimock and Littell under the activity by Government employes and officials below the policy-making ranks.

Claim Act Exemption

To this, Dimock replied:
the absence of the secretaries some-

"We are undersecretaries who in times serve in their stead. As such, we are exempted from the Hatch Act."

Lewis' United Mine Workers announced a $1 national assessment on each soft-coal worker during December and January and on all anthracite workers during January and February. It was estimated the assessment would yield $800,000, and give the union, by March 1, the largest fund in its history.

"It is evident," said a circular from the international executive board of the union, "that the groundwork is being laid for repressive, antilabor, antisocial legislation, and that it is necessary that the organization be in a position to meet every issue and challenge every adversary."

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the union, told the Associated Press that officials anticipated attacks on the Wagner labor relations act, the unemployment compensation provisions of the social security act and the WPA.

In 1936 the United Mine Workers supplied about $500,000 for various phases of the 1936 Democratic campaign, according to reports filed with the clerk of the House.

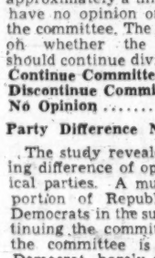
The Gallup Poll

Continuation of Dies Committee Inquiry Favored by Public

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 31.—With national discussion being stirred by the Dies Committee probes of foreign "isms," a majority of voters in a national survey believe the Dies investigation should be continued, with Congressional appropriations for another year.

The survey vote does not mean that the public approves everything which the Dies Committee has done. Some voters say they think the investigation is "just another form of witch hunt," that the committee is "anti-liberal," "unnecessary," and "hasn't accomplished anything."



GEORGE GALLUP

But the general feeling of the majority in the survey is that the committee is "uncovering facts the United States should know about," and that "putting the spot-light on un-American activities" is especially desirable in view of the war abroad. Thus, the general tenor of majority opinion is that, while the Dies committee may have its shortcomings, it fulfills a useful purpose at this time.

Survey Made Before Latest Action

The survey was completed, however, before Chairman Martin Dies revealed the names of 563 Government employes seized in the files of the League for Peace and Democracy, an organization which he alleges is a "front" for communism in the United States. The public's attitude toward this action, which provoked criticism of the committee in many sections of the press and was described by President Roosevelt as a "sordid procedure," is therefore not reflected in today's study.

A new survey will begin shortly to measure the public's attitude toward the committee since this latest action by its chairman.

In today's survey a cross-section of voters throughout the country was asked:

"Do you think Congress should provide money to continue the Dies Committee for another year?"

As the following vote shows, approximately a third of the voters have no opinion on the work of the committee. The actual answers on whether the investigations should continue divided as follows:

Continue Committee	53%
Discontinue Committee	14
No Opinion	33

Party Difference Noted in Vote

The study revealed an interesting difference of opinion by political parties. A much larger proportion of Republicans than of Democrats in the survey favor continuing the committee. Although the committee is headed by a Democrat, barely more than half of rank-and-file Democrats are for continuing its work.

	Democrats	Republicans
Continue Committee	52%	63%
Discontinue Committee	16	11
No Opinion	32	26

In explaining the reasons for their attitude, voters in the survey tended to make very definite, sometimes extreme, statements. Typical of those opposed to the committee are such voters' comments as these: "Dies is just a publicity hound," "It's just a trouble-making group stirring up animosities," "They're conducting a regular Spanish inquisition."

On the other side of the argument, among those voters who uphold the committee and think it should be continued, such comments as these are typical: "It's worth the cost to frighten un-American activities," "It's waking the American public up to some of the activities that are going on," and "We need to watch for spies now that war has come."

Special Army Drill To Be Held Saturday

Reserve officers of Washington and vicinity will be guests of the Twelfth Infantry at a special drill to be held at Arlington Cantonment Saturday morning.

A demonstration of the new infantry drill—minus "squads right, squads left"—will be staged from 8 to 8:30 a. m. on Saturday, instead of on Sunday, as reported in The Post on October 28.

Yachtsman Asks Aid; Police Help!

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—John Macauley's family was overcome by fumes from a charcoal heater aboard his yacht tied up in Curtis Creek here last night, and the Lake Worth, Fla., yachtsman tried out his new radio transmitter to ask for first-aid information. His new transmitter works just fine, and this is what happened:

Within 10 minutes two ambulances, three police radio cars and a United States Quarantine physician were at the scene and a police boat was heading up Curtis Creek full speed. Police were swamped with calls from excited radio amateurs, some from out of the State. The Coast Guard at Cape May called. So did somebody from Massachusetts.

The quarantine physician looked over the family—Mrs. Macauley, 25; Donald, 8, and Ardis, 4—and pronounced them out of danger.

GHA to Celebrate Birthday Tonight

Celebrating its second birthday, Group Health Association will hold an anniversary meeting tonight in the National Museum auditorium, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Treasury Borrows At 0.028 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announced yesterday that the tenders for $150,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated November 1 and to mature January 31, 1940, which were offered on October 27, were opened at the Federal Reserve Banks Monday.

The total applied was $457,678,000 and the total accepted was $150,499,000. The average price was 99.993, equivalent to a rate of 0.028 per cent.

Plans to Alter Civil Service To Be Heard

President's Committee On Merit System To Convene Today

Spokesmen for 16 national personnel organizations will suggest changes in the Federal civil service system at hearings today and tomorrow before the President's Committee on Merit System Improvement.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, will be the first witness, at 9:30 a. m. today, in hearing rooms in the Supreme Court Building. He is expected to urge extension of civil service status by nonecompetitive examination to positions in New Deal agencies now exempted.

Among others ot appear are former Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, jr., representing the National Lawyers Guild, and M. Elot Kaplan, executive secretary of the Civil Service Reform League. Representatives of the thre largest Federal employe unions also will be heard.

Justice Reed Heads Committee

The President's Committee, under the chairmanship of Supreme Court Justice Reed, was created last February to report on methods of recruiting and examining personnel to fill the Government's highest positions. It will convene in executive session Friday to plan a report to the President. A preliminary report, drafted by former Civil Service Commissioner Leonard D. White, is now in the committee's hands.

The committee's witnesses will be required to address themselves to seven phases of personnel administration—recruiting, selecting, testing, promoting, transferring, reinstating and removing—as these apply to five categories of positions.

The positions under discussion are confidential, mainly in the State, War and Navy Departments; professional, including lawyers, economists, scientists and technicians; administrative, below the grade of policy-forming jobs; investigative, such as Treasury and F. B. I. agents, and positions that the Civil Service Commission believes cannot be filled competitively, such as part-time employes and laborers.

Other Groups to Be Heard

Other organizations whose representatives will be heard today are the Central Statistical Board committee on civil service, National Resources Planning Board science committee, Virginia State budget bureau, International Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians; United Federal Workers of America, American Bar Association section on admissions to the bar, Agriculture Department organization of professional employes, and the Federal Bar Association.

Groups to be heard tomorrow include the National League of Women Voters, American Federation of Government Employes, National Federation of Federal Employes and the State Department employes association.

Members of the committee, besides Reed and White, are William H. McReynolds, personnel assistant to the President; Supere Court Justice Frankfurter, Gano Dunn, engineer; Gen. Robert E. Wood, of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Attorney General Murphy.

Roosevelt Urges Steel Plants on Pacific Coast

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Federal power facilities on the Pacific Coast provided an opportunity there for steel production.

The idea that steel companies might profitably erect plants on the coast, he said, is an old hobby with him. He said he had been trying since 1913 to persuade steel companies to do this.

Although there is an ample supply of ore on the coast, there is a shortage of coal, he said. But, with the electric furnace becoming more important in steel making, the abundant supply of cheap power on the coast enhances the opportunity for steel production. The President explained the Pacific Coast consumes great quantities of steel.

British Convoy Routs Nazi Plane

London, Oct. 31 (AP).—The Air Ministry announced tonight a British convoy was attacked today by a German seaplane but was not damaged.

The attack followed an engagement between Royal Air Force planes and a German seaplane off the north coast of Britain. The German plane escaped, "driven off by our aircraft and by fire from the naval escort accompanying the convoy."

Key Is Recovered From Ruth Judd

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 31 (AP).—The mystery surrounding the escape of Winnie Ruth Judd, trunk murderess, from the Arizona State Asylum was lifted slightly today by disclosures she had a hospital key and intended to seek refuge in Mexico.

Dr. Louis J. Saxe, hosptal superintendent, told a State investigator the key had been recovered from Mrs. Judd.

Rain Failed to Dampen Spirit of This Halloween Party

Fair Aides Hail Rain as Bar to Closing Pranks

Halloween Souvenir Hunters Kept Away On Last Day

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 31.—For the first time since the $156,000,000 show was thrown open to a hesitant public last April 30, exhibitors of the New York World's Fair welcomed a rain today as they closed up shop for the winter.

Rain usually meant bad business, but today they thought it spelled salvation.

Exhibitors had been perturbed over the prospect of prankish last-minute raids by souvenir hunters super-induced by the Halloween mood.

The 1939 finale of the most costly show on earth, which outdid Ringling, Ziegfeld and old Barnum himself, combined, was practically a private affair; the closing night crowd was negligible owing to the dismal rain.

A skeleton crew, including an Eskimo family living in an air-conditioned igloo, will stand guard over the fair's valuables through the winter. The 1940 opening is scheduled for May 25.

The fair produced many records, but failed by some 24,000,000 to come up to expectations in attendance. Then Grover Whalen & Co. offered bargains, cut admission prices to 50 cents from the original 75—and business boomed toward the end. The management will stress bargains next year.

Most of the countries already sounded out on exhibits for next year have agreed.

Two countries that have been liquidated are still represented—Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

The oue outstanding smash hit of the amusement area was scored by Billy Rose, whose Aquacade played to a total of more than 5,004,504, as compared with the fair's total attendance of almost 26,000,000.

Bruce's 'Unknown' Mural Show To Open; 5 Years' Work at Stake

Chief of U. S. Section of Fine Arts Believes 'Future of Governmental Participation Depends Largely on Reception' Given Exhibit

By Gerald G. Gross

Edward Bruce, successful painter who put down his brushes and palette to fight for the "unknown" artist and make Uncle Sam art conscious, is staking five years of effort on an exhibition opening here tomorrow.

Host at a press preview yesterday in the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the chief of the Federal government's section of fine arts swept his arm across hundreds of mural designs and said:

"I believe the future of governmental participation in art depends largely upon the reception this exhibition receives."

Center of attraction in the 456-item show, largest of its kind ever sponsored by the Government, is a group of prize-winning designs for 48 post office murals, one in each State, in addition to hundreds of other entries.

Admitting that many of the art works do not strike his fancy, Bruce, nevertheless, said he is supremely condent in having the exhibition represent a sample of the accomplishments of the Federal Works Agency's section of fine arts.

"You won't fiind any 'isms" in this show," he declared. "The subject matter is clean cut, refreshing. Here are no ladies in cheesecloth." (Bruce gave that phrase national circulation several years ago when he applied it to a symbolic mural in the Department of Agriculture Building.)

"In these Federal building murals the artists have attempted to depict a clear-eyed America and I think they have succeeded."

Bruce said he hopes the exhibition, which may be taken on a road tour after leaving the Corcoran November 21, will help dispel the notion—he says it is quite common—that Government structures are decorated by artists on relief.

Any American painter or sculptor, whether he is famous or unknown, rich or poor, is eligible to compete in the fine arts section's anonymous competitions, Bruce pointed out. True, he added, the Public Works of Art Project of 1933-34 was a relief program, but since then the Government's art objective has been to decorate its buildings while providing maximum opportunities to aspiring artists.

Two special "free nights" were announced yesterday by the Corcoran Gallery of Art in connection with the Federal art exhibition. The gallery will be open without charge on November 8 and 15 between 7:30 and 10 p. m. Meanwhile, the regular free days—Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday—will be observed.

Tolbert Hatfield, Friend of Feuding McCoys, Dies at 89

Ransom, Ky., Oct. 31 (AP).—Tolbert Hatfield, 89, who stayed friendly—and alive—while his kinsmen traded shots with the McCoys, died today.

Possibly the last Hatfield clansman to witness the Hatfield-McCoy "border war" of the 1880's succumb to pneumonia developing from a cerebral stroke 10 weeks ago.

Tolbert served as a justice of peace during the feud, which started over testimony at a murder trial.

A Hatfield was killed. A Hatfield sheriff went to arrest a McCoy and then sent back for reinforcements.

The late Anderson ("Devil Anse") Hatfield answered the call—and the feud started.

Rep. Smith Gains After Transfusion

Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), Virginia, was reported in "good condition by Alexandria Hospital attendants yesterday after a blood transfusion.

Smith entered the hospital about two weeks ago with a "slight case of influenza." Pneumonia developed and he underwent the transfusion Monday.

The Federal Diary:

Indians Petition Government For Return of Niagara Falls

Senecas Cite Treaty Ratified by Continental Congress, Tell Power Commission They Own River Land and Electric Projects

By Alfred Friendly.

The Indians yesterday petitioned the Government to give them back Niagara Falls.

Citing a treaty ratified by the Continental Congress, the Seneca Indians in up-State New York wrote the Federal Power Commission that they own the land on either side of the Niagara River, the falls itself and its power projects. They asked that the FPC licenses to the mammoth Niagara Falls Power Co. be canceled and that the works be given back to America's first citizens.

The contemplated transaction would involve only a few hundred million dollars. If the assets were divided among the Senecas, the tribe would become the sixty-first of America's Sixty Families.

The Senecas' modest claim is based on treaties made on December 16, 1786, with New York and Massachusetts, concerning lands occupied by the Indians at that time in the western parts of the areas.

A line was established 1 mile east of the Niagara River, running parallel to it from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario. A preemption agreement was included, under which Massachusetts had the right to purchase from the Senecas the lands east of the line and New York the lands west of the line, including the falls and the present site of the power concern's plant.

Massachusetts, the Senecas' petition continues, sold its right to none other than Robert Morris, famous financial figure of the American Revolution. In 1797 Morris exercised the preemption right and bought the lands to the east. But New York never did anything about it. As a result, the Indians claim, while New York may still have a right to buy the lands, it most certainly does not have the title to them. The Senecas, therefore, own all the land "and the waters now being devoted to power purposes by "Project 16," the Niagara-Hudson Co.'s huge development on the falls.

FPC officers yesterday professed to be undisturbed at the turn of events. They said that the Senecas had been sending in a similiar petition for years, whenever license matters of the Niagara Power Co. were under discussion, which is almost all the time.

Two top-rank Government executives are back in harness after long and disheartening illnesses. Both make a point of ignoring rumors that they will resign.

The first is Commerce Secretary Hopkins, not yet at his desk, but already engaged in the work of his department. He is reported to be completely cured after a long, incapacitating siege. The second is Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, back in the swing after a thorough hospital check-up.

If Col. Philip Fleming dislikes the anomalous position in which he finds himself—the actual, but not the titular head of the Wage-Hour Administration, he has another Army officer to thank for it. The fellow's name was Ulysses S. Grant.

Col. Fleming cannot sign the Wage-Hour Administration's papers because of a law providing that if an Army officer on active duty accepts a State or Federal Government post, his commission must be vacated. Col. Fleming has no reason to sacrifice the fruits of his long and distinguished climb up the Army ladder, and is therefore only "detailed" by the Army Engineers as "advisor" to the agency he really heads.

Grant's part in the story dates from the post Civil War years when he was president. He began stacking choice positions in the executive branch with his old cronies in the Army. Congress viewed with alarm and passed the law tha still stands.

Truck Dispute Renewed by Teamsters

A. F. L. Decision on Concrete Mixers Jurisdiction Opposed

Union teamsters fired another volley yesterday in a jurisdictional war which was believed ended, presaging a new stalemate in the A. F. of L. dispute over operation of concrete mixer trucks.

"You can quote Thomas O'Brien, national representative, and myself, as saying yesterday's decision gives the work in question to members of the teamsters union," said Charles J. Bell.

His reference was to a report Monday by a special A. F. of L. mediation committee in which jurisdiction over mixer trucks ostensibly was awarded to the operating engineers' union. That was the interpretation in government and building contractors' quarters. The A. F. of L. building and construction trades department, whose president, John P. Coyne, appointed the counciliators, withheld any explanation.

Bell's contention is that cement, even if mixed en route to the construction ob, comes under the head of building materials and its transportation is, therefore, the task of teamsters.

The A. F. of L. committee held that building materials shall be hauled by members of the teamsters union but "power-driven equipment . . . including any and all power-driven equipment that has been in dispute between the teamsters and the engineers comes within the jurisdiction of the International Union of Operating Engineers."

Representatives of the engineers' union declined to comment on the teamsters' argument.

Navy Plane Crash Off Coast Kills 1

The Navy Department yesterday announced that Oliver Ferdinand Modeen, aviation metalsmith, second class, was killed when a seaplane from the U. S. S. Chicago crashed after being catapulted Monday. The Chicago was operating off the West Coast. The plane sank, and Modeen's body was not recovered. The pilot of the seaplane, Ensign John Lissol, U. S. Naval Reserve, was uninjured.

Modeen was born in Bristol, Conn., October 29, 1910, and first enlisted March 17, 1930, at New Haven, Conn. His wife, Mrs. Georgia Modeen, lives in Elmwood, Conn.

Ensign Lissol's home address is listed as Long Beach, Calif.

Virginia Rains Aid Fall-Seeded Crops

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—State agriculture officials said today current rains reported yesterday and today in most sections of the State would be helpful to fall-seeded crops and pastures.

The United States Weather Bureau said the rain was "rather general" and probably would continue until tonight.

Henry M. Taylor, State co-operative crop reporting service director, and L. M. Walker, jr., acting agricultural commissioner, said that while dry weather had been prevalent throughout the State for the past few weeks it came at a time that helped farmers do their harvesting and do much of their fall planting.

U. D. C. Body Finds Mural Distasteful

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Members of the Richmond Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy viewed new Cadmus-French murals, depicting Confederate scenes, in the parcel post building and concluded today that they didn't like them.

"Some of the soldiers look like Yankees," they said.

Mrs. B. A. Blenner, president of the chapter, said she thought the Confederate period should "not be depicted in pictures unless the pictures are painted by Southern artists who know the spirit and traditions of the South."

Duce Sweeps Pro-Nazis From Cabinet

Italy's firm determination to keep neutral and avoid any foreign entanglements.

The chief importance of this move from the international viewpoint, therefore, is negative. It removes those whose record before the war and whose unwillingness to change since, have been embarrassing the government in its foreign policy. Internally, it is what Fascists call "the changing of the guard," which occurs from time to time so that important party figures can exercise their different talents and learn the workings of the government from different posts.

When one analyzes the changes, however, it is clear that there is more behind the shake-up than the newspapers admit. It is true, for instance, that Starace had broken all records by remaining secretary of the party for eight years and his removal has been reported pending for a long time. He has been loyal, energetic and enthusiastic, and one might think the present change quite normal, if it were not for the fact that Starace has taken a strongly pro-German attitude.

His successor Muti is an unknown quantity so far as administrative work is concerned, but he is a national hero, one of the earliest Fascists, intensely patriotic and has no embarrassing ideas about foreign policy. Moreover, he is only 37, and part of the reason for the shake-up was doubtless to get in younger blood.

One case which may well have involved dissatisfaction with the work done is that of Alfieri. He, too, was strongly pro-German and seemed to be insisting on continuing to orientate the newspapers in that direction, despite Ciano's neutrality policy.

There will be none of that with the new minister, Pavolini, who, like Muti, is a very close friend of Ciano besides being a man of considerable culture and himself, a journalist. It is an appointment that is highly popular with foreign as well as Italian newspaper men here.

The removal of Guarneri caused genuine astonishment, for he is one of Italy's best econocists and financiers, with a technical knowledge that would seem to have been irreplaceable.

When it came to the armed forces, questions of internal politics played no role, but international affairs naturally did. Pariani and Valle through their position, had been identified in the last few years with Axis policies. When Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, Air Marshal Goering and other German military leaders came to Italy, they had to receive them, make strong pro-German speeches and even visit Germany themselves. Actually, there is reason to believe that Pariani, at least, did not feel all that he said.

Neutrality Revision Wins House Test

on neutrality bill procedure. Only 20 Democrats voted with 155 Republicans and 2 Progressives opposed sending the bill to conference.

The subsequent move by Shanley, a Democratic member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, to restore a full arms embargo, came as an eleventh hour surprise. Fish, who had taken over opposition leadership, had been expected to present the initial motion to instruct.

Fish announced that the Shanley motion was "more comprehensive" than his own. Under a unanimous consent agreement obtained by Rayburn, the New York Republican was placed in control of opposition time for the day, while Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee allotted time for Administration speeches.

Seeks Embargo on Gas

Shanley's motion, while following in general the existing ban on arms sales, specifically named poison gas and flame throwers in the embargo, and added a clause against transshipment of arms from neutral nations to belligerent territory.

From 2 p. m. until House adjournment at 6 p. m., the House debated this motion, speeches following the familiar arguments for and against embargo repeal which have echoed in the Senate and over the radio for the last four weeks.

In his fight to block the leadership plan of procedure, Fish charged it was "one of the most vicious gag rules ever laid before the House" and declared it offered "a kiss of political death for all who vote to cut off debate." He conceded the rule called for "regular" procedure used in sending bills to conference, but declared the Senate had completely rewritten the House measure and it should be considered as new legislation.

"Phony," Says Vorys

Joining the attack, Representative Vorys called it "a phony rule on a phony bill," while Representative Horton (Republican), of Wyoming, said the House was being asked to consider "city slicker legislation." Boos from the Republican side had greeted a charge by Chairman Sabath of the House Rules Committee that Fish had "tried to deliver us to Hitler on his last visit to Europe."

Majority Leader Rayburn admonished members to keep House debate on the same "high plane" maintained by the Senate. Rayburn said there were "no boos, no accusations of phony bills or city slicker tactics" in the Senate. The leader said he stood for liberal debate and said the rule "was the most liberal that could have been reported."

Representative Warren, who later took the gavel from the Speaker to preside over the neutrality debate, told the House that opposition gag charges were "nothing but twaddle and tommyrot."

Opening the Administration assault on the Shanley embargo amendment, Representative Bloom denied that the bill would "take sides" in Europe's war. He said the United States was legislating for its own interest and security "and for the purpose of maintaining its peace." He said the existing embargo failed to prevent outbreak of war.

"In this legislation," said Bloom, "the United States does not abandon its rights, but for the sake of its own security and peace it requires citizens and ships to refrain from entering areas where there is danger. This is a voluntary concession to peace. It is a costly concession, but peace is worth the cost."

Shanley charged the President was asking Congres sto change the law "because he wants to help one set of belligerents." He said the neutrality bill was a move to enter the League of Nations by the back door, and declared, "If you want to chanage foreign policy, do so above board."

Representative Lanhom (Democrat), of Texas, speaking for repeal, told the House that no law could be conceived of "that would actually prevent war."

As if to fill in the gap between reports of Polish victories and daring submarine exploits and the present lull on the Western Front, Col. Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army, answered a series of questions put by the Labor Front's organ, Joy and Work.

Asked where Germany's military position differed today from 1914, the commander said "we are considerably stronger militarily than 25 years ago. That's true both as regards weapons and equipment as well especially as concerns the utilization of the entire fighting strength of the nation . . . the Westwall is the strongest series of fortifications in the world."

Long-Range Guns Batter French Town

Artillery Duels and Skirmishes Reported; Action Local, However

By the Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 31.—The French reported "marked activity" on the Western front today with a series of land skirmishes between French and German forces and brisk artillery duels in which the Germans were said to have used long-range heavy artillery for the first time of the war.

A general staff communique said both sides engaged in raids and ambushes in the Lorraine sector between the Moselle and Saar Rivers on a section extending from the Luxemburg border to Sarreguimines.

The high command also reported that "in the course of many flights" yesterday one bi-motored Nazi reconnoissance plane was downed in French territory and two fell out of control in German lines on the Saar front. The report said all French planes returned safely.

One Village Battered

Military commentators said at least one French village, 6 miles behind an unidentified area of the front, was battered by German long-range guns.

The day's activities, however, were said to appear to be no more than localized or preliminary attempts to test each other's strength.

The first line, observers said, remained unchanged, following almost exactly the frontier. Exceptions were said to be several strategic outposts inside Germany in the Warndt Forest. These positions have been attacked sporadically by increasing larger German patrols, which the French claim have been repulsed.

Four Downed, Says Berlin

In the air, French observers said, French planes made seven flights over enemy territory and acquired valuable information.

(A Berlin communique said four enemy planes had ben shot down..

On the home front, Premier Daladier called a cabinet meeting for tomorrow.

Police, continuing their inquiry into Communist activities, arrested four women and two men for circulating secret pamphlets.

Twenty-nine former Communist deputies, imprisoned October 8 by military authorities after their party was banned, were notified that their request for release no bail had been denied.

Veterans Urged By Gen. Hines to Avoid Capital

Winter always brings an increasing number of war veterans with compensation claims to Washington and the weather multiplies their difficulties, Veteran's Administrator Hines said yesterday.

"Veterans contemplating trips to Washington should not come unless they have sufficient funds to maintain themselves and to defray the cost of transportation home," he said.

He urged them to press their claims through proper regional channels and not to think that a personal appearance before the Board of Veterans Appeals would speed their causes.

But veterans have made a practice of coming in large numbers, hoping for Government employment, among other things.

An Odyssey of Adventure: Chicago Boy, 14, Goes to War

Youth Stows Away, Tries to Escape in North Sea; Tossed in Jail

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., Oct. 31.—Getting in dutch with the Dutch was fun, 14-year-old Charles Marlowe Conner declared today, even if he did fail in his efforts to be a soldier.

The bright-eyed young Chicagoan told his story to reporters from his small detention-stateroom on board the Holland-America liner Statendam upon its arrival from Rotterdam, from which Dutch authorities shipped him.

Charles' adventures included stowing away on the liner Zaadam eastbound, jumping overboard in the North Sea in an attempt to swim ashore, and spending three days in a Rotterdam jail.

With capital of 50 cents, Charles arrived in New York late in September and sought to enlist in the Army. His age was too evident so he couldn't fool recruiting officers. He hid aboard the Zaandam.

In the North Sea a British patrol halted the Zaandam, Charles related. He decided to swim two and a half miles to shore. His legs cramped, so he paddled to the nearest ship, a Dutch freighter, the Towa.

A British boat took him off the Towa and back to the Zaandam and thence to Rotterdam where his cellmates, he said, were a Spanish leftist refugee, a German spy and a Polish soldier.

"I wanted to be a soldier," said the sturdy 5-foot 7-inch youth. "I thought I might become a spy, because nobody would ever have suspected me."

33 Testify Against Spy Suspect

By the Associated Press

Geneva, Oct. 31. — Thirty-three prosecution witnesses, including workers in arms factories and counter-espionage agents, were reported to have testified today at the trial of a pretty-dark-eyed dancer charged with espionage and treason.

Reports leaking from the closed courtroom said the dancer, known in continental night clubs as "Ninia" and whose name is Virginia Capt Rota, 35, smiled scornfully as a friend, Roger Joel, testified on charges that she had had models and copying designs stolen from a Swiss arms factory for her.

Miss Rota and Joel face 3 to 20 years in prison each on a double count of espionage and treason. They were arrested, police said, when they attempted to cross into France with plans for an anti-aircraft gun and other military data.

On trial with the dancer and Joel are Paul Rochat and his wife, charged with organizing an information service for an Italian consul general under the dancer's orders.

The dancer was reported to have remained coldly silent, while Mme. Rochat became so voluble she had to be cut short by the court. She denied all connection with the case, although admitting she knew Miss Rota.

Rochat was said to have denied receiving any money from the dancer, declaring that the information service was economic and in no way violated Swiss law.

Trusty, 70, Felled By Fleeing Felons, Gravely Injured

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Charles E. Lamb, 70-year-old trusty who was struck on the head with an iron bar yesterday in the escape of four prisoners from the city jail, was reported in a serious condition tonight by hospital attendants, as city, county and State officials carried on a search for the fugitives.

Lamb underwent an operation for a fractured skull and severe brain injury. He was struck down as he went into a corridor where the prisoners were permitted to exercise.

The prisoners who fled were Eugene Mawyer, under an 18-year sentence for attempted robbery, and three colored men, Clifton Johnson, Charles Hunter and James Garfield Camp, who were awaiting trial.

British Object To Strict War Rules in House

Chamberlain Says Cause of Grievances Will Be Dealt With

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 31 (AP).—A long list of grievances against Britain's wartime economic setup and restrictions imposed as war measures was aired today in the House of Commons.

Prime Minister Chamberlain disposed of one question as having "too large a variety of complaints" to deal with in a single answer.

He assured the House, however, that grievances would be removed "where this can be done consistently with the paramount objective of winning the war."

Col. J. Baldwin-Webb, Conservative, had demanded that the government considered the "growing adverse feeling" in the country over "bureaucracy" and mentioned instances of "interference with daily life."

Marketing Control Opposed

Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, Conservative, spoke of "widespread and increasing complaints" over government control of marketing and distribution of a number of commodities.

Laborite Albert Alexander declared that "complaints are being made all overd the country in regard to the shortage of butter and bacon" and asked when rationing would start.

Food Minister W. S. Morrison said he hoped to be able to make a statement on rationing tomorrow.

U. S. Ship Holding Scored

Lengthy delays of American ships by the British contraband control were criticized in the House of Lords by Laborite Lord Strabolgi, who asserted that "it annoys neutrals to have their ships treated like this."

He said in one case it had taken 24 days to clear an American ship and that inquiries were made by the American consul general.

Meanwhile heavy naval and warplane concentrations along Great Britain's east coast, military observers said, indicate the British are prepared for a gigantic North Sea battle.

Much of the British feeling that the North Sea will be one of the big battlegrounds of the war comes from German pronouncements that appeared in Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter.

Air Raids Expected

The paper asserted if "England persists in throwing overboard one after the other all conceptions of international rules, then it must reckon with inevitable intensification of war against its commerce."

British tacticians expect the "serious" bombing raids to be conducted in waves of probably six planes each.

Aerial experts hinted Britain is prepared for such attacks as follows:

The raiders would be met over the North Sea by fast fighting planes.

They would encounter Britain's balloon barrage and antiaircraft batteries.

Heavy fighters, strongly armed, would meet the raiders near their objective.

tained permission to move in Norwegian territorial waters.

The Norwegian naval watch-dog was believed to be the 1,170-ton destroyer Sleipner, which followed the captured American vessel out of Tromso waters yesterday. The Norwegian boat was said to be nearby, not as an escort vessel, but to guard and protect Norwegian interests and to see that the City of Flint complied with rules laid down for her passage through Norwegian territorial waters.

It was understood if there was any violation of the rules, the vessel would be halted and both ship and crew interned.

Provisioned at Tromso

(Reports, reaching Copenhagen from Tromso said the City of Flint was in Tromso waters three hours yesterday and took on fresh meat and water from a motor launch which cruised slowly alongside. The City of Flint as a prize ship did not enter the harbor. Some Tromso residents believed armed German cargo boats were convoying the prize ship since one preceded the City of Flint and another followed by short intervals.)

Observers believed the City of Flint would follow the Scandinavian coast until she reached the Baltic where an adequate German escort might see her into port, with Hamburg considered a likely objective.

Radio Operator's Story

New oYrk, Oct. 31 (AP).—The German crew now in possession of the American freighter City of Flint apparently didn't intend at first to take the vessel to Russia; James G. McConnochie, the radio operator who fled the vessel in Norway, said today in a radio interview from London.

In a detailed story of the capture of the American ship on October 9 by the German raider Deutschland, McConnochie, a Scot, said on two occasions officers of the German prize crew told him they intended to take the ship to Germany and made no mention of Russia.

"After discovering that we were carrying machine oil for England, the officers in charge of the German boarding party said they were sorry, but they would have to take us to Germany," said McConnochie.

"The Germans carried machine guns, hand grenades and revolvers and threatened to throw a grenade among us if there was trouble. They threw one in the sea to show us how it exploded.

"Several oft he Germans spoke English, one officer speaking it very well," he continued. "The sailors wore cap ribbons of various ships, several from the Emden. I understand they were names of vessels from which they were drafted to form prize crews.

"They said they came up to us from Spanish waters and had previously sighted two United States Coast Guard cutters."

"When the Norwegian pilot came aboard at Tromso he was so shocked to find Germans in charge that he almost fell off the boat," McConnochie said.

Dies Witness Arrested in Murder Case

Probe Chairman Says U. S. Official Trying To Discredit Evidence

John J. Grosch, who Monday wired District police to apprehend McCuistion, took exception to insinuations of committee members that McCuistion had been "framed" to discredit the committee.

Grosch declared New Orleans police had been looking for McCuistion since September 19, two days after the murder of Philip Carey, N. M. U. official. He said a warrant for McCuistion's arrest was on its way to Washington.

Justice Issues Statement

The Department of Justice issued a statement denying that Henry A. Schweinhaut, head of the civil liberties division, or "anyone else in the department," had requested McCuistion be apprehended.

The department pointed out, however, that McCuistion has been "the subject of several complaints by the National Maritime Union, which charged in effect, "that McCuistion and others were depriving members of the union of their civil rights in various gulf ports."

Angered by efforts of the N. M. U. Monday to cause the arrest of McCuistion, Dies asserted the union "obviously sought to persecute this man." The chairman declared that the witness had "no disposition at any time to hide from any officers," and McCuistion himself testified that he had been in touch with F. B. I. officials in New York since Carey's death.

Call to Police Cited

Asserting Schweinhaut had inquired of Washington police Monday if McCuistion had been arrested, Dies said:

"Now, this is the head of the civil liberties section of the Department of Justice, calling the Police Department to find out if they had heard anything from New Orleans with reference to this man's arrest—of course, the chair believes, for the purpose of undertaking to arrest him here, or shortly after he left the committee room, is to discredit his testimony, or in an attempt to discredit the evidence."

(The Justice Department statement declared that "because of the numerous complaints involving McCuistion which had been received, Schweinhaut called the chief of detectives of the District of Columbia and said the department would be interested to know whether McCuistion was wanted in New Orleans.")

Starnes Condemns Action

Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, followed Dies' comment with the observation that "that details surrounding this matter are not only sordid but they are contemptible and scurrilous, and I think the committee should take further action to ascertain what groups in this country are attempting to discredit a duly-accredited Congressional committee . . . and whether or not they have any official support for such action."

"Speaking of damnable procedure and reprehensible procedures," Starnes went on, "I think this passes the limits of the English language to express condemnation." His phraseology recalled words of President Roosevelt and Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, in denouncing committee action in publishing the names of Federal employes of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

In his testimony yesterday, McCuistion declared that after his split with the National Maritime Union because of its alleged Communist control, some union leaders told him his life was in danger if he maintained active opposition.

Curran Pressure Charged

After McCuistion returned from Spain in September, 1938, Joseph Curran, NMU president, made "a special trip to Norfolk to put pressure on me," the witness stated, adding that Curran 'told my mother I'd better line up" with the Communist Party. McCuistion's mother, Mrs. D. M. Crawford, of 4 West Church street, Frederick, was in the audience.

Curran, a witness before the committee last week, said that he was not a Communist and that the NMU was not Communist controlled.)

Washington police said that McCuistion was to spend the night in the Eleventh Precinct jail, Anacostia. They indicated that he would be taken to the Department of Justice today.

place its case before the world with a complete exposition of the hitherto secret negotiations.

Informed political circles were of the opinion that the answer being taken to Moscow was a firm refusal to yield to the Russian territorial demands.

The foreign office said counter-proposals were being submitted. The Russian demands were believed to be so firm and inflexible, however, that little hope for agreement was held in informed circles.

The attitude expressed was that Finland cannot meet present Russian demands and still maintain independence and neutrality. However the government still was proceeding on the theory that agreement was possible.

No Armed Strife Expected

While the general feeling was that there would be no agreement, informed observers believed there would be no armed conflict.

As determined as they have been from the day Moscow's invitation to negotiate was received October 5, the Finns went busily ahead with preparations to defend the republic from any attack.

Frontier districts were crowded with troops. Almost all territorial waters along the southern coast have been mined.

The Diet hurried bills to passage which will give the government a clear hand in case of war. One bill would give the government broader powers to execute work decrees and handle private property for military purposes.

Millions for Defense

Gifts to a new defense fund reached the equivalent of $1,000,000. The government announced it would offer about 2,000,000 pounds of coffee for sale outside rationing restrictions at increased prices. This measure is expected to raise $800,000 in Finnish markkaa.

A crowd of some 4,000 Finns bade farewell to the delegation tonight, showing by its silence that the fateful possibilities of the journey were appreciated.

Lectures to Mark 25 Years' Service By Dr. Johnson

The completion of 25 years of service by the Rev. Dr. Gove G. Johnson, of the National Baptist Memorial Church, will be marked this week by a series of religious lectures delivered by the Rev. Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, past president of the Baptist World Alliance.

pines or Cuba, who have long been demanding freedom and independence from the United States and cannot get them, than between the Soviet Union and Finland, who has long ago obtained both freedom and political independence from the Soviet Union."

Of the negotiations with Finland, he said that the Soviets had urged Finland to agree to a pact similar to those recently concluded with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which gave Russia extesive rights to station troops, warships and planes on the soil of her Baltic neighbors.

Talks on Leningrad Safety

Molotoff said Russia "did not insist" on her position when Finland objected. He disclosed that Finnish-Soviet negotiations now have turned to matters concerning the protection of Leningrad, Russia's western metropolis.

After Finland's rejection of the proposed mutual assistance pact, Molotoff said, negotiations were proceeding on Finnish cession of "several dozen kilometers" of soil on the Isthmus of Karelia, north of Leningrad, the lease of a small section of Finnish territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland for a Russian naval base, and the exchange of some islands in the Gulf of Finland.

He declared Russia has no designs on the strategic Aaland Islands and was not preparing demands on any other northern nations.

An indication of what Russia expected was given when Molotoff said "it should be clear that, granted good will, the Finnish government will meet our proposals, which are minimal ones and which—far from militating against the national and state interests of Finland—will enhance her security and form a broad basis for further extensie development of the political and economical relations between our countries."

Demonstrated Grenades

Referring to the war between Germany "and the Anglo-French bloc," he said the ruling circles of Britain and France have been "lately attempting to depict themselves as champions of the democratic rights of nations against Hitlerism and the British government has announced that its aim in the war with Germany is nothing more nor less than "the destruction of Hitlerism.'"

"One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system," he said. "But everybody would understand that ideology cannot be destroyed by force, that it cannot be eliminated by war.

War Termed Senseless

"It is, therefore, not only senseless but criminal to wage such a war . . . camouflaged as a fight for 'democracy.'"

Turning to recent unsuccessful negotiations with Turkey, Molotoff said that nation has "entered the orbit of developing European war" by concluding a pact of mutual assistence with Great Britain and France.

"This is highly pleasing to Great Britain and France," he said. "Whether Turkey will not come to regret it we shall not try to guess."

Molotoff disclosed that the subject at issue during the protracted negotiations with Turkey in Moscow was a pact for mutual assistance limited to the regions of the Black Sea and the Straits.

"The U. S. S. R.," he said, "considered firstly that the conclusion of such a pact could not reduce it to actions which might draw it into armed conflict with Germany; secondly, that the U. S. S. R. should have a guarantee that, in view of the war danger, Turkey would not allow warships of the non-Black Sea powers through the Bosphorus to the Black Sea. Turkey rejected both these stipulations of the U. S. S. R., and thereby made conclusion of the pact impossible."

The premier-foreign commissar said Russia was confident the policy of peace which she has been consistently pursuing holds out the best prospects for the future . . . and this policy we wil pursue in the region of the Black Sea, too.

Molotoff Criticizes Roosevelt for Meddling; Blames War on Allies

Premier's Talk Warns Finland To Make Terms

Repeal of Embargo By U. S. to Prolong Conflict, He Says

Moscow, Oct 31.—The following are excerpts of the principal points of Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff's speech today:

. . . Since conclusion of the Soviet-German nonaggression pact on August 23, the end has been put to abnormal relations that have existed between the Soviet Union and Germany for a number of years.

Instead of enmity which was fostered in every way by certain European powers, we now have rapprochement and the establishment of friendly relations between the U. S. S. R. and Germany.

Further improvement of these new relations, good relations, found its reflection in the German-Soviet treaty on amity and frontiers, signed in Moscow September 28.

Events Confirm Significance

This radical change in the relations between the Soviet Union and Germany, two of the biggest states in Europe, was bound to have its effect on the entire international situation. Furthermore, events have entirely confirmed the estimation of the political significance of the Soviet-German rapprochement. . . .

Secondly: Mention must be made on such facts as the defeat of Poland in war and the collapse of the Polish state.

Ruling circles of Poland boasted quite a lot about the "stability" of their State nad the "might" of their army. However, one swift blow to Poland, first by the German army and then the Red army, and nothing was left of this ugly offspring of the Versailles treaty which had existed by oppressing non-Polish nationalities.

The (Polish)" "traditional policy" of unprincipled maneuvering between Germany and the U. S. S. R., and playing off one against the other, has proved unsound and has suffered complete banruptcy.

War Changes Picture

Thirdly: It must be admitted that the big war that has flared up in Europe has caused radical changes in the entire international situation.

This war began as a war between Germany and Poland and turned into a war between Germany on the one hand and Britain and France on the other.

The war between Poland and Germany ended quickly owing to the utter bankruptcy of the Polish leaders. As we know, neither the British nor the French guarantees were of help to Poland. To this day, in fact, nobody knows what these "guarantees' were.

The war between Germany and the Anglo-French bloc is only in its first stage and has not yet really developed. It is, nevertheless, clear that a war like this was bound to cause radical changes in the situation in Europe, and not only in Europe. . . .

Today, as far as the European great powers are concerned, Germany is in the position of a state which is striving for the earliest termination of the war and for peace, while Britain and France, which but yesterday were declaim- against aggression, are in favor of continuing the war and are opposed to the conclusion of peace. The roles, as you see, are changing.

Conflict Termed Absurd

The efforts of the British and French governments to justify this new position of theirs on grounds of their undertakings to Poland are, of course, obviously unsound. Everybody realizes that there can be no question of restoring old Poland.

It is therefore absured to continue the present war under the flag of the restoration of the former Polish state. Although the governments of Britain and France understand this, they do not want the war stopped and peace restored but are seeking new exsuses for continuing the war with Germany.

The ruling circles of Britain and France have been lately attempting to depict themselves as champions of the democratic rights of nations against Hitlerism, and the British government has announced that its aim in the war with Germany is nothing more nor less than "the destruction of Hitlerism."

It amounts to this: That the British, and with them their French supporters of the war, have declared something in the nature of an "ideological" war on Germany reminiscent of the religious wars of olden times. . . .

War Termed Unjustified

Is it back to the Middle Ages, to the days of religious wars of superstition and cultural deterioration that the ruling classes of Britain and France want to drag us?

In any case, under an "ideological" flag has now been started a war of even greater dimensions and fraught with even greater danger for the peoples of Europe and the whole world. But there is absolutely no justification for a war of this kind.

One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system. But everybody would understand that ideology cannot be destroyed by force, that it cannot be eliminated by war.

It is therefore not only senseless but criminal to wage such a war . . . camouflaged as a fight for "democracy." . . .

Is it not clear that the aim of the present war in Europe is not what it is proclaimed to be in official statements intended for the broad public in France and England? That it is not a fight for democracy but something else of which these gentlemen do not speak openly?

"Real" Cause Is Given

The real cause of the Anglo-French war with Germany was not that Britain and France had vowed to restore Old Poland and not of course that they decided to undertake the fight for democracy.

The ruling circles of Britain and France have, of course, other and more actual motives . . . These motives do not lie in any ideology but in their profound material interests as mighty colonial powers. . . . It is fear of Germany's claim to these colonial possessions that is at the bottom of the present war . . . It is the fear of losing world supremacy that dictates to the ruling circles of Great Britain and France a policy of fomenting war with Germany.

Thus the imperialistic character of this war is obvious to anyone who wants to face realtiese and does not close his eyes to facts . . .

The nonaggression pact concluded between the Soviety Union and Germany bound us to maintain neutrality . . . consistently pursued this course, which was in no wise contradicted by the entry of our troops in the territory of Poland. . . .

It is known that our troops entered the territory of Poland only after the Polish state had collapsed and actually ceased to exist. Naturally, we could not remain neutral toward these facts, since as a result of these events we were confronted with urgent problems concerning the security of our state.

Own Dangers Cited

Furthermore, the Soviety government could not but reckon with the exceptional situation created for our brothers in western Ukraine and western Byelorussia (white Russia) who had been abandoned to their fate as a result of the collapse of Poland. . . .

Relations between Germany and other western bourgeois states have in the past two decades been determined primarily by Germany's efforts to break the fetters of the Versailles Treaty whose authors were Great Britain and France with active participation of the United States. This was which, in the long run, led to the present war in Europe. . . .

We have always held that a strong Germany is an indispensable condition for durable peace in Europe. . . .

Total casualties of the Red army (in Poland) were: 737 killed, 1,862 wounded. . . .

Our relations with Finland are of a special character. This is to be explained chiefly by the fact that in Finland there is a greater amount of outside influence on the part of third powers. . . . The same problems concerning the security of the Soviet Union and particularly of Leningrad, which figured in the negotiations with Estonia, also figured in the negotiations with Finland.

Problem Is Held Acute

In a certain sense it may be said that in this case the problem of the Soviet Union's security is even more acute inasmuch as Leningrad, which after Moscow, is the most important city of the Soviet state, is situated only 32 kilometers (about 20 miles) from the Finnish border.

This means that the distance of Leningrad from the border of a foreign state is less than that required for modern long-range guns to shell it.

On the other hand, approaches to Leningrad from the sea also depend to a large extent on whether Finland, which owns the entire northern shore of the Gulf of Finland and all the islands along the central part of the Gulf of Finland, is hostile or friendly toward the Soviet Union.

In view of this, as well as in view of the present situation in Europe, it may be expected that Finland will display necessary understanding.

Finn Freedom Guaranteed

What has been the basis of relations between the Soviet Union and Finland during all these years? The basis of these relations has been the peace treaty of 1920 which was on the pattern of our treaties with our other Baltic neighbors. Of its own free will the Soviet Union insured the separate and independent existence of Finland.

It must be said that none but the Soviet government in Russia could tolerate the existence of an independent Finland at the very gates of Leningrad . . .

There is scarcely any need to dwell on the tales spread . . . about the Soviet Union's proposals in the negotiations with Finland. Some assert that the U. S. S. R. "demands" the City of Viipuri (Vyborg) and the northern part of Ladoga. Let us say for our part that this is sheer fabrication and a lie. Yet others assert that the U. S. S. R. demands cessation of the Aaland Islands. This also is fabrication and a lie.

Proposals Called Modest

Actually our proposals in negotiations with Finland are extremely modest and are confined to that minimum without whihc it is impossible to safeguard the security of the U. S. S. R. and to put on a firm footing friendly relations with Finland.

We have begun negotiations . . . proposing conclusion of a Soviet-Finnish pact of mutual assistance approximately on the lines of our pacts of mutual assistance with other Baltic states, but inasmuch as the Finnish government declared conclusion of such a pact would contradict its position of absolute neutrality, we did not insist on our proposal.

Territory Offered Finns

We then proposed that we proceed to discuss concrete questions in which we are interested from the standpoint of safeguarding the security of the U. S. S. R. and especially of Leningrad, both from the sea, in the Gulf of Finland, and from land, in view of the extreme proximity of the border to Leningrad.

We have proposed that an agreement be reached to shift the Soviet-Finnish border on the isthmus of Karelia several dozen kilometers further to the north of Leningrad. In exchange for this we have proposed to transfer to Finland part of Soviet Karelia, double the size of the territory which Finland is to transfer to the Soviet Union.

We have further proposed an agreement be reached for Finland to lease to us for a definite term a small section of her territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland where we might establish a naval base. . . .

We have no doubt that establishment of such a base would not only be in the interests of the Soviet Union, but also of the security of Finland herself.

Claims Obectives Lacking

Our other proposals, in particular our proposal as regards exchange of certain islands in the Gulf of Finland as well as parts of Rybachi and Sredni peninsulas for territory twice as large in Soviet Karelia evidently do not meet with any objections on the part of the Finnish government.

Differences with regard to certain of our proposals hae not yet been overcome, and concessions made by Finland in this respect, as for instance the cession of part of the territory of Karelia, obviously do not meet the purpose.

We have further made a number of new steps to meet Finland halfway. We declared that if our main proposals are accepted we shall be prepared to drop our obections to fortifications of the Aaland Islands. . . . We made only one stipulation: That the fortification is done by Finland's own national forces without the participation of any third country inasmuc has the P. S. S. R. will take no part in it.

We have also proposed to Finland to disarm fortified zones along the entire Soviet-Finnish border on the Isthumus of Karelia which should fully accord with the interests of Finland.

We have further expressed our desire to reinforce the Soviet-Finnish pact of nonaggression with additional mutual guarantees.

Lastly, consolidation of Soviet-Finnish political relations would undoubtedly form a splendid basis for rapid development ef economic relations between the two countries.

Thus we are ready to meet Finland in matters in which she is particularly interested. In view of all this, we do not think Finland will seek for a pretext to frustrate the proposed agreement. . . .

Vienna Jews Being Moved To Polish Area

Property Assigned To Community Fund In Evacuation Order

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 31.—At least 4,000 Jews have left Vienna in the last two weeks for a Jewish reservation in former Polish territory and local authorities have told the Jewish community Vienna must be "Jew free" by March 1, 1940.

When Germans from Estonia and Latvia were moving "home into the Reich," several thousand Jews of Vienna and Maerrisch-Ostrau were given three days to "depart from the Reich."

They were ordered to move and settle somewhere near the new western frontier of Soviet Russia between the San and Vistula rivers in former Polish territory, with Lublin as the center.

Other Cities Likely

The first contingent of 2,000 men between 18 and 50 left Vienna October 18. They were followed October 27 by 2,000 more, mostly men, but including women and children over 16. The first contingent left Maehrisch-Ostrau early last week and a second contingent, all women, October 25.

Fear was expressed among Jews in Berlin, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Breslau and other cities that they might be the next to beordered to leave for the reservation.

Vienna Jews htdoa aonabnd mm

Vienna Jews had to abandon their homes and turn the keys over to the Jewish community. They were permitted to take 110 pounds of luggage and 300 marks (about $120) worth of tools and machinery "if not too bulky."

The deportees were davised further to take non-perishable food, warm wearing apparel household necessities and tools.

Women in Second Group

Instructions to the Jews of Maehrisch-Ostrau were much like those to the Viennese. Instructions for the second contingent directed all single women between 17 and 55 to get ready for transport.

Children were left behind in charge of the Jewish community charged with erecting children's homes.

The homes and business houses will either be administered or sold by the Jewish community and the proceeds "devoted to social purposes."

Whatever the deported Jews could not take with them apparently was confiscated.

Axis Broken As War Tool, French Believe

Britain in Effect Recognizes Italian Conquest of Albania

By the United Press

Paris, Oct. 31.—French diplomatic circles believed tonight that the Rome-Berlin axis has broken down completely as a military instrument.

Their opinion was based on the Italian cabinet shakeup, in which all Italian ministers except Count Ciano who had a hand in framing and enacting the German-Italian military alliance were replaced by men known for their neutrality stand.

Significance was seen in the close friendship of some of the ousted with prominent Nazi leaders. Propaganda Minister Dino Alfieri was a close friend of Propaganda Minister Gobbels, Fascist Secretary Achille Starace was a friend of Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess.

Gen. Alberto Pariani knew Col. Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch intimately, and Gen. Giuseppe Valle enjoyed cordial relations with Marshal Goering.

Valle's frequent boasts that the Italian air force could smash every other air force in Europe were remembered. It was recalled that the outgoing minister of agriculture, Edmondo Rossoni, laid the foundation for the Rome-Berlin coalition because he went to Berlin and did all the preparatory work for the negotiations from which came the Rome-Berlin axis and the anti-comintern front.

French circles recalled that Pariani, as Italian chief of staff, was author of the Italian version of the "blitzkrieg" and advocate of a lightning-like smash on France from three frontiers—German, Italian and Spanish.

Removal of Starace recalled that h gave the signal for the Italian chamber's noisy "Tunisia, Corsca, Nice, Djibouti" demonstration during a Ciano speech on foreign policy.

(Official comment was not forthcoming in Berlin, but authoritative sources denied that the summoning home Sunday of the Reich's ambassador to Rome, Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, was in any way connected to the cabinet shift.)

The shakeup came at a time when Italian relations wth Britain, as a result of both the war and Mussolini's own nonbelligerent stand, were better than some months ago.

Britain today, in effect, recognized Italy's conquest of Albania by arranging to establish a consulate at Tirana.

Mead Offers Plan For Little Business

Senator Mead (Democrat), New York, introduced a new proposal yesterday for extending Government credit to "small and intermediate-sized business concerns" through an industrial loan corporation, to operate under the Federal Reserve system.

He said his bill "follows along the line of recommendations made by Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve" and probably would be supported by Chairman Jerome Frank of the Securities Commission.

Mead suggested use of $139,000,000 now available in the Treasury for industrial loans under the Federal Reserve Act, to provide $100,000,000 capital and $39,000,000 surplus for the proposed corporation.

Manganese Ore Bought by U. S.

By the Associated Press

A Cuban and a West Virginia company shared contract awards yesterday for stocking up the Army and Navy on manganese.

The Cuban American Manganese Corporation, New York City, was given a contract for 25,000 tons of manganese ore at $765,000, and the Greenbrier Mining Corporation, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., 5,000 tons at $180,000.

The Treasury rejected an offer of Russia to supply $5,000,000 worth of the ore. The bid surprised observers because of Russia's avowed intention to sell materials to Germany.

Canada to Supply Food, Arms

By John MacCormac
Copyright by New York Times.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 31.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King tonight told Canadians their role in the war would be less to provide men than food and munitions and money to finance their production.

An exception would be airmen, who would rank in importance with Canada's expeditionary force proper. So important was the air training scheme, of which Canada would be the center, said the prime minister in his broadcast address, that it might well decide the war.

"In 1914," he said, "governments still were mainly concerned about the number of men they could place in the field. What happened in 1914 should not be blindly repeated in 1939. New weapons demand a new technique of warfare.

May Serve as Arsenal

"Newfoundland and the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon stand at our very door. Their protection is not less imperative to Canada's security than to their own. We must, also, be prepared to do our share in convoying shipping."

Canada's contribution to economic warfare, he continued, might easily prove most important. It had been suggested in Britain, that as well as a granary, Canada might become Britain's arsenal.

Canada's expeditionary and reserve force, it was revealed, totaled more than 42,000 men, her navy 6,000. Her Atlantic naval vessels were participating in convoy work, and to date not a single ship leaving Canada had been lost.

Shipyards Near Capacity

"Our dockyards are and our shipyards soon will be working to capacity," King said. "Our naval forces are cooperating with the British navy in the protection of Newfoundland and the West Indies."

The most important development, continued the prime minister, was the agreement to establish advanced air training facilities in Canada.

"This may well mean that the final victory will be shaped on Canadian soil. We shall naturally follow with the keenest interest the achievements of the military forces we send overseas. However, in this war our effort will be concerned at least in equal measure with the fighting forces on the sea and in the air."

London Finds Nothing New In Speech of Molotoff

By Raymond Daniell.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 31.—The speech of Premier Molotoff "contributed so little that was new" that the foreign office did not feel called upon to make an immediate retort.

Insofar as the speech indicated a continuance of Russian neutrality in the European conflict, however, even of such partial nature as the Soviets have displayed thus far, the Soviet commissar's words were reassuring.

So, too, was his failure to fall in with Fuehrer Hitler's supposed desire that Russia sponsor a definite new move toward a peace conference which would enable the Nazis to hold onto the fruits of its aggression.

Nevertheless, while there was no indication of any joint Russo-German military action against the Allies, Molotoff's speech was regarded as an indication of closest co-operation between Russia and Germany in economic and political spheres to attain their separate objectives.

Such comment as appeared in the press emphasized the disappointments to Hitler that were implicit in the foreign commissar's address, rather than his confirmation of belief here that Germany and Russia really intend working together to the detriment of the democracies.

Molotoff's emphasis on the statement that the Russo-German non-aggression pact bound the Soviets to neutrality in the event of German participation in war was regarded as significant. On the other hand, there was little comfort in his remarks on how absurd it was to continue the war for the restoration of Poland, nor in his assertions that fears of Germany's colonial claims were at the "bottom of the present war."

Molotoff's announcement of steady improvement in Russo-German relations and his declaration that friendly co-operation was being extended through "practical cooperation" and "political support" for German efforts toward peace, were not especially encouraging here. However, the speech generally was regarded as a restatement of the Russian position, leaving most of the questions about the quality of her neutrality still unanswered.

The Daily Express expressed the poinion the speech must have been disappointing to the Nazis, from whom had come hints that he would announce a Russo-German joint campaign against the democracies. Actually, Molotoff made it clear, the newspaper said, that Russia was looking after her own interests, and, while ready to give Hitler moral support, would not go so far as to give military assistance.

Roosevelt Says He Has No Alaska Trip in Mind

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had heard what he termed a wild story about the Army's buying a yacht to take him to Alaska. He said he had no plans for a trip and if he did go it would be on a 10-000-ton cruiser.

the Army bought a vessel formerly

What happened, he said, was that used as a yacht for survey operations.

Hoover Frowns On Spy Hunters

By the Associated Press

A "National Protective League," which posted placards in Toledo yesterday offering $500 rewards for spies and saboteurs, was disapproved by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Harry B. Kirtland, general counsel for the league in Ohio, said it was organized by Ohio businessmen to protect industrial plants from sabotage.

Although he requested in recent speeches public cooperation in gathering information, Hoover said there was "no need for vigilantes or private organizations to hunt out spies."

Roosevelt Asks If Cotton Loans Are Necessary

Wallace Ordered to Give Reasons for Backing Program

By Felix Cotten.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had asked Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who has recommended a loan program for the 12,000,000-bale 1939 cotton crop, to show why such a program is necessary.

The announcement confirmed reports that the Administration wished to avoid additional loans for the new cotton crop, particularly in view of improved prices nad increased demestic consumption and exports.

Responsible Administration sources have predicted, in fact, that loans will not be made this year.

Asked at his press conference to comment on the situation, the President said Wallace had been asked to prove his case. He wanted to find out, he said, why loan money is wanted for the 1939 crop.

14-Million Bale Carryover

Before the new cotton crop came on the market, the Government, through loans made by the Commodity Credit Corporation, had in its possession about 10,500,000 bales of cotton. This constituted the greater part of a huge cotton carryover of about 14,000,000 bales.

It is estimated that domestic and export requirements this year may be nearly 2,000,000 bales in excess of the 1939 crop. In that case, the Government's surplus would be drawn down.

Reports in Administration quarters yesterday were that the Budget Bureau had sent a report to the White House recommending that a new loan program not be approved as long as the present "favorable" cotton situation exists. Budget Director Harold D. Smith would neither confirm or deny the report.

Higher Farm Income Seen

Meanwhile, commodity market analysts, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Chicago, estimate that agriculture's 1939 income will be the greatest of any year in almost a decade with the exception of 1937.

Farmers throughout the country, Government and private statisticians calculate, will receive about $8,300,000,000 for their year's toil. This includes Government benefit payments. In 1937 they receive $8,988,000,000. This was the best year since 1930, when their cash income totaled $8,451,000,000.

Buying power of farmers in 1939, analysts say, is about equal to 1937 since prices of things the farmer buys are not as high this year as in 1937.

Until September, farm income was running slightly below 1938, when farmers received $8,020,000,000. At the start of the war, however, commodity prices skyrocketed, and this is partly responsible for the improved income prospects.

No Program Planned

The Agriculture Department had not planned a cotton loan this year, it was revealed.

The new loan proposal is the result of complaints from cotton producers that prices for high grade, long-staple cotton are out of line with prices for middling seven-eighths inch staple cotton. Loans would be made, under the proposed program, at 8.3 cents per pound for seven-eighths inch middling, the rate that prevailed for the 1938 crop.

If a loan program should be authorized, officials explained, it would entail differentials for the longer staple cottons. Thus, prices for better grade cotton would receive support, although the price for seven-eighths middling has ranged recently between 8.7 and 9 cents per pound, or appreciably above the proposed loan rate.

Government cotton loans are made mandatory by law only when the price of seven-eighths inch middling drops to 52 per cent of the parity price in the ten spot cotton markets. This is not the case at present.

Hull Strikes Back at Critics Of Reciprocal Trade Pacts

Secretary Predicts Program Will Outlive Opponents in Congress; Rhode Island Governor and Borah Ask Court Test

By Arthur Hachten,

International News Service Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull yesterday struck back at mounting Congressional demands for repeal of the reciprocal trade agreement program.

After several Senators, including Borah (Republican), of Idaho, savagely assailed the Sevretary's favorite project, Hull at his press conference predicted that unless the United States and other nations go to a lower level of existence, the progra mwill survive the political lives of its foes.

Widening opposition to the trade treaties, which are not subject to Congressional approval, flared when negotiations with Argentina and other South American nations began recently.

Court Test Asked

Publication of correspondence between Gov. Vanderbilt of Rhode Island and Assistant Secretary of State Grady, disclosing the Governor's demands for a court test of constitutionality of the program, gave fuel to the controversy.

The Administration's authority to make reciprocal trade agreements expires next June, and Hull left no doubt that he would battle any efforts to modify the system.

In the Senate, Borah said that "it seems to me that these trade agreements are treaties and the question should be presented when the case goes to court."

Then, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, attacked the proposed pact with Chile, saying inclusion of copper, coal, oil and lumber for concessions by the United States would be illegal.

McNary Predicts Defeat

"I respectfully suggest to the State Department that it has no authority in law to touch the existing excise taxes on copper, coal, oil and lumber," he said. "The department has no legal right to consider concessions on copper in connection with the pending Chilian trade agreement."

The Senator explained, however, that he did not know that such concessions were planned.

Senators King (Democrat), of Utah, and Republican Leader McNary, of Oregon, joined in the attack. "When the act expires June 12, there will not be found in this body a majority to continue it," McNary predicted.

American farmers are being "sold down the river" in the proposed trade agreement with Argentina, Representative Forest A. Harness (Republican), of Indiana, charged on the radio tonight.

Argentine corn, beef and other farm commodities will flood the United States, if proposals being considered by the State Department are finally approved, he said.

C. A. Douglas Rites to Be Held Today

Services Arranged in Washington Heights Presbyterian Church

Funeral services for Charles A. Douglas, Washington attorney and co-author of the treaty by which the United States purchased the Nicaraguan Canal route, will be held at 3 p. m. today in the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church.

A former member of the Georgetown University law faculty and one-time legal adviser of the Mexican, Nicaraguan, Cuban and Panama governments, Douglas died early yesterday at his home, 2141 Wyoming avenue northwest. He was 77 years old.

Once a law associate of William Jennings Bryan, President Wilson's Secretary of State, he was senior member of the firm of Douglas, Obear, Morgan & Campbell and a director of the International Bank.

Pallbearers include Dr. Sterling Ruffin, Conrad H. Syme, Wade H. Ellis, Robert A. Cooper, Dr. Howard Fisher, Col. Wrisley Brown, Clifford K. Berryman, Edmund D. Campbell, Jo V. Morgan, Elwood H. Seal, Jacqueline A. Marshall, Joseph P. Tumulty, Berkley L. Simmons, A. Owsley Stanley, Rice Hooe, Charles M. Galloway, Charles W. Warden, Carl A. Joerissen and Pierre M. Pealer.

A committee of 11 was selected by the District Bar Association. It consists of George E. Hamilton, sr., chairman; Levi H. David, Sefton Darr, Louis A. Dent, J. Spalding Flannery, John E. Laskey, William E. Leahy, Guy Mason, Benjamin S. Minor, Joseph T. Sherier and Leon Tobriner.

When the revolution of 1913 began in Mexico, Douglas was retained by the successful revolutionary faction, headed by Gen. Carranza, and participated in negotiations that brought about recognition of the Mexican government by the United States and other countries. For the next ten years, he served as American consul in the United States for the Mexican government.

For many years he was the American counsel for the Nicaraguan government, and with Robert Lansing drafted the Nicaraguan Canal Treaty.

His legal career began with admission to the District bar in 1881, when 19. From 1884 to 1890 he was a member of the South Carolina State Legislature and in 1888 he was president of the State Electoral College.

Born in Fairfield County, S. C., on January 31, 1862, he was graduated from Erskine College, studied constitutional law at Georgetown University, and in 1920 received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Erskine.

Surviving are four children, Charles Simonton Douglas, of Miami; Alexander Talley Douglas, of New York; Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, of 2139 Wyoming avenue, and Mrs. James E. Webb, of New York. There are also three grandchildren. Burial will take place in Elmwood Cemetery, Columbia, S. C.

Progressive Justice

The significance of the new rules adopted by judges of the Municipal Court is that they enhance the poor man's chance of securing protection of his legal rights through this tribunal. At present the simplified writs and reduced charges will be applied only in the Small-Claims Branch of the court. But, as Judge Cayton noted in presenting these proposals to his colleagues, there is no reason why similar improvements cannot be made in other branches of the court as well.

With the lower fees in effect, citizens who have heretofore considered resort to judicial procedure, too costly will be able to seek adjudication of their complaints. The court thus becomes more than ever an instrument of social service. In approving Judge Cayton's suggested writ of attachment, the court has also abolished confusing terminology in favor of simple language that anyone can understand without the aid of an attorney. Mystery and awe are being eliminated from the process of justice in favor of better understanding and the simplest possible adjustment of differences.

The social conscience which the court has acquired is evidenced by its vote to make a practice of informing employers that they may claim an exemption from garnishment of wages for any employe earning less than $100 a month if he is the head of a family. Under the leadership of Judge Cayton, the court has demonstrated a progressive and public-spirited attitude. It is not content to adjudicate cases in the traditional way, but is now actively inquiring into the social effects of its work.

The Spending Power

Several members of Congress have expressed concern over President Roosevelt's order to the War and Navy departments to anticipate deficiency appropriations in order to house, feed, clothe and hospitalize men added to the armed forces by executive order. No one has questioned the desirability of strengthening the country's national defenses at this time. But the method used by the President is of questionable validity.

Under the national defense act the President has authority to increase the strength of the Army, National Guard, Navy and Marine Corps in times of emergency. The Administration has assumed that it also has power to spend money on facilities for the new armed forces, relying upon Congress to increase Army and Navy appropriations at some later date. On its face that assumption does not appear unreasonable.

But members of Congress have called attention to the antideficiency act designed to prevent the expenditure of funds not appropriated by Congress. This act provides that "no executive department or other Government establishment of the United States shall expend . . . or involve the Government in any contract or other obligation for the future payment of money in excess of such appropriations unless such contract or obligation is authorized by law."

Senator Taft contends that if the President's order is followed, the Administration will act in clear violation of this statute. "Whatever may be condoned in time of war," said Mr. Taft, "there is certainly no emergency justifying any such usurpation of authority, particularly when Congress is in session and could act very quickly if the expenditures appear to be justified."

Several weeks ago the President revealed that he had discussed this legal issue with two justices of the Supreme Court and with Comptroller General Fred H. Brown. The latter requested that he should not be asked for a formal ruling, since Congress would undoubtedly vote a deficiency appropriation in its regular session. It is probable, of course, that Congress will make available any funds necessary to assure adequate national defense. But that is beside the point. The question is whether the Chief Executive has a right to anticipate the action of Congress in so vital a matter as the spending of public money.

It may be that the statute giving the President emergency power to increase the armed forces is in conflict with the antideficiency act. Or Congress may have thought that mere power to enlist a larger number of men in the armed forces was sufficient—that there would then be time enough to summon Congress for the appropriation of any funds needed for barracks and hospitalization. Regardless of what interpretation may finally be placed on the law, however, the fact remains that Congress is in session and can readily act upon any deficiency appropriation that may be desirable.

Congress gave the President broad powers under the emergency public works act, but it later refused to appropriate funds for the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing venture and the Florida ship canal because the Administration had anticipated future appropriations for completion of these projects. The need for scrupulous respect for Congressional control over the public purse strings has not diminished. Where there is ground for any reasonable doubt as to the spending power, that doubt should always be resolved in favor of the established policy of letting Congress decide.

Neutrals Have Rights

Certain conscientious members of the House who strongly favor repeal of the arms embargo as a matter of national self-interest are nevertheless in doubt as to the propriety of such action at this time. They argue that repeal involves a change in national policy in the midst of an international conflict and is, therefore, "unneutral."

If neutrality is regarded as a straightjacket, fettered upon a nation at peace by the action of belligerents, that contention would have a measure of plausibility. Actually neutrality has never had any such meaning in international law.

If neutrality implied wholesale surrender of rights by a nation at peace it would follow that in time of war only belligerents possess freedom of action. As Secretary Hull has pointed out, belligerents have never hesitated to "change their rules, practices, methods and policies in various directions during the progress of hostilities." In making such changes, combatant nations are properly guided by reasons of national self-interest. It is well to remember that this standard is an equally valid guide for neutrals. The only restraint imposed upon the latter by international law is that their rules and regulations regarding neutrality should apply to all combatants.

On that score there is no room for any criticism of the Administration bill. President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull sought modification of the existing Neutrality Law many months before war broke out in Europe. When thwarted by the failure of the Senate to act during the closing days of the last session, notice was given that modification of the law would be urged when Congress reconvened. The repeal of the embargo and the other proposed changes in the neutrality law thus follow a line of policy advertised to the world long before Germany invaded Poland.

Even if no such prior notice of intent had been given, the United States would not be precluded from changing its neutrality policy whenever national interest seemed to make such change desirable. Statutes defining that policy are a matter of domestic legislation. And to suggest that we have no right to change our laws because Hitler or Stalin might not like the alteration is equivalent to saying that, in this particular field, Hitler and Stalin control the policy of the United States.

Obviously under existing circumstances, the lifting of the arms embargo would operate in favor of Great Britain and France. It would permit them to make use of the traditional advantages that arise from the possession of superior sea power. It is equally true, however, that the so-called cash-and-carry provisions are certain to operate to the disadvantage of Great Britain and France.

At a time when their shipping is being subjected to the hazards and depredations of submarine warfare, the British and French will have to divert merchant vessels to transport supplies purchased in the United States. The new law also drastically changes the rules regarding credit in their disfavor. But there is nothing unneutral about this, since these restrictions apply theoretically to Germany, just as the advantages of embargo repeal are also theoretically available to the Nazis.

Both embargo repeal and the cash-and-carry provisions constitute a change in American policy, both changes to be made applicable in wartime. If the one change were "unneutral," so would the other be. If international law opposed modification of the ban on the sale of arms it would similarly oppose any and all other changes in the existing neutrality law. But the fact is that no such restrictions are imposed on neutrals by international law.

There is also the argument of those who agree that there would be nothing at all unneutral in repealing the embargo if the intent behind that action is neutral. But the intent, these critics assert, is to assist France and Great Britain at the expense of Germany.

Since the Allies would have to pay cash down for any munitions and then transport them in their own ships, it cannot be said that the "intent" of helping the Allies is very pronounced. It might with equal reason be said that there is an unneutral intent to help Germany in hedging the sale of munitions with restrictions which are in no way necessary in a policy of real neutrality.

Even in the simplest of private cases the question of motive is difficult to establish. It is all but impossible to prove in the complicated field of international law. Certainly in the present debate this artificial complication need not bother the most scrupulous of Congressmen. His conscience will be clear if his intent is to vote in the way he thinks America's interests lie. Whether Hitler or Stalin or Chamberlain or Daladier dislikes that vote need not for a moment concern him.

Shake-Up In Rome

From its inception a few years ago to its eclipse at the outbreak of the war the Berlin-Rome Axis was much more an alliance between like-minded parties than one between like-minded nations.

It was never any secret that the Italian people as a whole find little satisfaction in their nation's enforced partnership with the Third Reich. Enthusiasm for the Axis has been limited to Fascist Party circles and has been particularly pronounced in the high-placed triumvirate of Achille Starace, secretary of the party; Dino Alfieri, the minister of propaganda, and Count Ciano, the foreign secretary.

As long as the Axis gave promise of achieving advantages for both its partners by mere intimidation, Mussolini was willing to give the pro-Nazi faction in Rome considerable leeway. But despite the terms of the German-Italian alliance neither the Italian Duce nor the Italian army, nor the Italian people were prepared to go to war in Germany's behalf.

On the contrary, Italy's position from the outbreak of hostilities has been one of neutrality, and there has so far been no indication of any intention of abandoning that status. This has inevitably involved a loss of prestige and power for the pro-Nazi element in the Fascist regime and a parallel subordination of party views to national interests.

A symptom of the latter was the recent decree equalizing the pay of the Fascist militia and of the army, thus eliminating the preferred status which the militia had hitherto enjoyed. Now the Duce has removed from their key positions two of the leading pro-Nazi leaders, Starace and Alfieri. The former has been named chief of the general staff of the Fascist militia, a post now more honorary than important, while Alfieri has been placed on the ambassadorial waiting list.

It is perhaps too early to say that this "changing of the guard" marks a definite cleavage between Rome and Berlin. If, at any time, revival of the Axis would suit his purposes Mussolini can be expected to renew the ties now loosened. For the moment, however, the Axis would appear to be a spent force. Italian policy is now concerned with national interests, of which avoidance of war is paramount, rather than party ideology. From now on we may hear more of pax Romano—Roman peace—than of the paseo Romano—the Italianized version of the German goose step.

Cold Water

While heartily supporting the efforts of the Department of State to achieve a better understanding with the nations to the south of us, Secretary Wallace is not optimistic concerning the prospect for immediate trade expansion with that part of the world. "The difficulty in building two-way trade relations with South America," he told the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco, "is that a number of South America's exportable commodities are the same as those of which we ourselves have a surplus. Our problem is to encourage South America to produce more of those commodities we need and are accustomed to import."

Mr. Wallace suggested that we might expand our Latin-American trade by helping to stimulate the production of various metals and tropical plants in no way competitive with the output of our own farms and mines. It must be confessed that his list of such products, which ranged from tin and antimony to the cinchona plant and flavoring extracts, was not very impressive. He laid special emphasis upon the possibility of devoting the United States scientific resources and capital to the development of disease-resisting rubber plants, and thus reducing our dependence upon East Indian supplies. But the developmental process would, he admits, be a "slow job."

The fact that Mr. Wallace is eager to promote mutually advantageous trade between this country and the other American republics calls attention to the modest character of his recommendations designed to increase the flow of such commerce. His first concern is obviously the American farmer who is already producing more wheat, pork and various other agricultural staples than consumers in this country can buy. But, not wishing to dissent from any move to liberalize trade restrictions, he has chosen an indirect method of throwing cold water on extravagant hopes of sudden trade gains in Latin America.

A 9-year-old girl in Colorado sees everything upside down. It's a great pity she is too young for appointment to a Federal administrative office.

Oh, well, the way things are going now, we'd probably have more to be thankful for on November 23 than we would on November 30.

President Roosevelt should take another shot at the calendar and abolish April. That's the month in which the United States declares wars.

"Dizzy Dotty"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson says "And there will be Communists in this country as long as grievous social problems are not energetically dealt with by our democratic Government. To name just one, there is the problem of the migratory farm worker."

I wonder just how much the skyscraper-raised Dorothy knows about migratory farm hands. I happen to know that a lot of migratory workers live the life they do from choice. They like roaming the country, working a while here or there, and then taking a rest by camping and fishing in some quiet place. It's the "gypsy" in them.

Does Dorothy mean that unless the "gypsy" spirit is stamped out of people we must hace communism? Perhaps Dotty gets a little dizzy at times from looking out of high windows.

Worth Trying?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Maybe we men have over-complicated this war business.

Two women have come forward with suggestions that certainly deserve consideration.

There is the English lady, who plaintively wants to know "why that Hitler doesn't marry and settle down."

And one of our own sweet Southern girls opines that she thinks "if people would just quit talking about the war, why folks would forget it."

More Opinions On The Dies Committee

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of October 27 you published a letter from "A Member of the League" (American League for Peace and Democracy). This letter is such a perfect example of the type of muddy thinking that our parlor pinks indulge in that it deserves some comment.

He starts off by claiming to be persecuted. The "persecution" complained of is nothing more than being labeled a "sucker" intellectually, if not financially. The testimony before the Dies Committee has been to the effect that the "front" organizations of the Communist Party were for the purpose of furthering the foreign policies of the Russian Soviet and that such "fronts" were to avoid any visible connection with the Communist Party, let alone use this league to "preach their propaganda."

The testimony further showed that the "fronts" were organized and dominated by the Communist Party and that funds collected for the purported purposes of the league were, in fact, fraudulently diverted to uses of the Communists.

The complaining member reminds me of an "innocent investor" who, having invested in a phony corporation and having her name in the paper for promoting the stock among her friends, cries persecution and indignantly upholds the integrity of the officers whom she is sure have been falsely arrested. What are the strong-arm tactics of which he complains?

Let your league member reflect that "a man is known by the company he keeps" and let him investigate next time before he invests his time and money in an organization "For Peace and Democracy" which actually plays the game of its totalitarian backers in America while they wage war and foster dictatorship in Europe.

PARKE PAYNE, JR.
Arlington, Va., Oct. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the shouting and the tumult dies regarding the Dies Committee and the League for Peace and Democracy, suppose we just look at the record.

The league has officially admitted that the Communists provide some of its funds, these same funds to be used, no doubt, to entertain and flatter susceptible law makers.

They also have been represented officially at many meetings of doubtful sponsorship. And at a book shop here in midtown which, with the exception of the front windows, is a little bit of the U. S. S. R. itself—and where all Communist literature is for sale and rent—there is a bulletin board on which the A. L. P. D.'s activities are prominently displayed. At the rear of the shop is a hall where the fellow travelers and pinks come to report and celebrate the ease with which they hoodwink the dumb Americans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To The Washington Post is due great commendation for its handling of news on the Dies Committee, and for its apparent refusal to co-operate with the un-American tactics of that committee in attempting to "smear" Government employes who are members or on the mailing list of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

More than that, the editorial "Mr. Dies Explains" and the interviews of Federal administrators by Alfred Friendly point out the damage which may be done, even in a democracy, where power is so lightly turned over to incompetent and uncritical forces.

LILLIAN ROSENTHAL.
Washington, Oct. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your editorial of October 26 and cannot refrain from making a reply to it.

You take the stand that the Dies committee is very un-American in disclosing the names of those persons now having membership in a league known as the American League for Peace and Democracy. I do not agree with you.

In my opinion, no person, be he or she an American or any other national, should be ashamed to have his or her affiliation to any upright organization made known to the public. The writer of this article is a member of the American Legion and would not consider it a disgrace or a "shameful act" if his name was publicly listed as a member of that activity.

Newspapers and other publications in this country may do what they wish to disparage the Dies committee and discourage it in ferreting out the slimy, subversive activities that are trying to undermine the democratic principles of this Nation by distributing anti-American propaganda for dissemination by those who are so weak as to be misled by such, but I warn you that the true Americans are 100 per cent behind the Dies committee, and it need have no fear that its good work to rid these United States of such "muck" will be thwarted.

I think it would be more fitting if newspapers and other publications would co-operate whole-heartedly with the Dies committee to this end if they are truly 100 per cent American. It would make this Nation a safer place in which to live.

There is room in this Nation of ours for only one "ism"—that is Americanism. Those persons, be they of high or low station in life, who have sympathy for or membership in any organization other than that which has the seal of 100 per cent Americanism have no place in America. Their place is where their sympathies are.

Mr. Havenner Has Labor's Support

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As if the experience of being obliged to be 3,000 miles away from the scene of his campaign for mayor during its crucial period were not enough of a handicap for a candidate, my attention has been called to a misleading story about my candidacy, appearing in The Post of Sunday, October 29, under the heading "Off Year Voting." The story contains the statement that I have been indorsed by the C. I. O., while A. F. of L. leaders are said to have divided their support between me and the incumbent mayor.

The facts are that the Union Labor Party of San Francisco, a regularly organized political party which has been in existence for many years, consisting exclusively of delegates from A. F. of L. unions, in the regular secret ballot which its constitution calls for, indorsed me for mayor by a vote of more than 3 to 2. The Union Labor Party is now engaged in sending out literature to the voters of San Francisco, in accordance with this official action, stating that I am the duly elected nominee of the party and urging all A. F. of L. voters to support me.

The fact that a handful of labor officials, all holding municipal offices under the incumbent mayor, endeavored to stage a walkout when I received the nomination and succeeded in getting 17 out of 300-odd delegates to follow them, does not justify the kind of political reporting which this story contained.

The feature news about the labor support in my campaign is that I am one of the fortunate individuals who has been indorsed by all branches of organized labor in my community.

Censorship?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This letter is to point out the potential danger in the seemingly self-imposed code of the National Association of Broadcasters.

The actual effect of this policy is to give the members of the N. A. B. censorship over public questions in that they can control distribution of free radio time more than paid time to political speakers.

It is true, under the former system sheer economic power could present a one-sided argument; but, since this evil has existed since the birth of radio broadcasting, is it not significant that this situation has been discovered since the beginning of the present war?

Beginning At Home

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Over 2,000,000 workers in interstate commerce are now on a 42-hour week, due to the wage-and-hour law. Through the New Deal, our Government has brought many benefits.

May we point out that employes of the Marine Hospital, a Government institution, work as many as 60 and 72 hours per week. Surely the Government should bring to its own employes those benefits which it brings many million American workers.

The "I Am" Activity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I enjoy reading The Washington Post. But I cannot understand why you would permit such a degrading article to appear in your paper of October 25 as I find written by Westbrook Pegler on "The I Am" Activity. Please permit me to say that should Mr. Pegler investigate this activity (not cult), he would find it patriotic of the highest kind to our America, with no political or money scheme back of it, but only that of justice and good will to humanity and for the constructive way of life.

The Post Impressionist

Lady Barbarians

THERE WAS a time, not so many years ago, when a wrestler trying to earn an honest living only had to worry about his opponent while plying his trade in the squared circle. But in recent years, with the ladies forming a goodly percentage of those present at all wrestling shows, our leading contenders are beginning to complain that they must not only concentrate on their opponent, but must keep a wary eye on members of the "gentle sex" gathered at the ringside, lest one in her excitement take things into her own hands and decide to deal out a little punishment to the grappler who has gained her displeasure.

"I think that a policeman should be stationed in every corner to keep the women from attacking us while we are in the ring," complained a certain well-known pachyderm to me recently. "Why, look what happened to poor 'Jumping Joe' Savoldi recently. The former Notre Dame fullback is having a tough time subduing Stan Sokolis, and it is necessary for Joe to bash him around a bit.

He is intent on his work when he is hit twice on the head with a stick and sent sprawling to the canvas. Not only is it a woman who hits Joe, but it's Mrs. Jane Bradley, mayor of the town. But Joe gets even with her a few minutes later when he catapults through the ropes after missing a flying tackle and his 200 pounds land firmly in her ample lap."

I expressed my sympathy to the worried grappler and, while I was surprised that so dignified a person as the mayor of a town should enter into the fray, the conversation recalled many similar incidents I had seen around the rings of sports palaces, not only at wrestling matches, but also at prize fights. At one match in particular did a member of the "gentle sex" conduct herself in a manner which was alarming, to say the least.

The bout was staged at a well-known club in New York between Rudy Dusek, toughest of the family of professional wrestlers bearing that name, and Paul Boesch, a wrestler who had recently returned from Hollywood, where I understood he had been much in demand as an escort by the frivolous young ladies of that city.

Paul is a tall, dark, handsome, well-muscled athlete. Just the type any football coach would like to see some fond "old grad" deliver in the fall. Dusek appears to be short, although he is actually six feet, but he is so broad and powerful he creates this illusion. Both of his ears are delightfully scrambled. Deep scars dot his body. Adhesive plaster is on several recent cuts and rope burns.

The match is a rough one from the outset. Every hold is used, the orthodox ones of the ancient Greek and the flying tackle, the butt, the knee to the groin, and the drop-kick, brain children of the enlightened youth who come to the wrestling business clutching sheepskins from America's leading universities in their hands.

Fifteen minutes after the match commences they have been out of the ring a dozen times. Boesch's nose is bleeding freely. Dusek's right thigh has been deeply gashed where it came in contact with the telegraph instrument as he was thrown through the ropes into the press row. The referee, bending low so as not to miss a possible "pin" when the wrestlers are on the canvas, is a sight to behold. His shirt resembles that of a student barber after his first day shaving panhandlers in a Bowery barber college.

I have always noted with interest the actions of the ladies at the ringside, but have been watching the match so intently that I have neglected to observe them until now. I now turn my attention to them when a shrill voice, right in my ear, screams, "Kill him, Paul! Kill him!" The first row of ringside seats is a good 12 feet back of the press row, but this sweet, demure young bud, dressed in a gorgeous evening gown, has been so saddened by the bloody proceedings that she can no longer keep her seat, and despite the startled pleas of her escort, is right up at the ring yelling for the "kill."

Dusek continues to rough up his opponent and as the finishing touch of her display of anger the sweet young thing whips a slipper off her well-shod foot and with the same motion "Dizzy" Dean uses when throwing his "hard-one" throws it in the direction of the ring. Her intentions are good but her aim poor and the slipper comes very close to severing one of my ears. Her escort finally prevails on her to resume her seat as he retrieves the shoe.

But she is not the only member of the "gentle sex" who is excited and, as my glance travels on, I spot many who are content just to hurl abuse at the wrestlers. One lady, the kind that is described as a stately dowager in society columns, is on her feet, peering at the butchering business through a Rue de la Paix lorgnette. Gowned by Paquin, customed-shod, fat fingers bedecked by Cartier, perfumed by Chanel. What is the dear sweet old lady doing at such a bloody brawl? Why, she has in her patrician eyes the look of a jolly basilisk and under that elegant lavalliere beats a heart as tender as the case-hardened chromium-plated hubcap on the high front wheel of her Rolls-Royce town car.

Does she cry for peace, gentle peace? She does not. Does she implore brutal men around and about her to remember that the quality of mercy is not strained? She is shrieking for further mayhem, another dash of tabasco in the ghastly assault and battery.

The rough, unfeeling men about—men are brutes, of course—say, "Stop it!" "Have a heart!" "Do you want that guy killed?" and so on. But the shrill piercing voices of the delighted ladies are for bloody battle until death do them part. The Gentle Sex! Oh, yeah?

War Boom Dangers

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Neutrality Loophole

WITH ALL THE DEBATE in the Senate over neutrality, one great danger to us has received only the scantiest discussion—the effect of a war boom on our economic, social and political future.

With or without an embargo on the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war, we are a base of war supplies for the Allies. They have the money with which to buy our products and the ships in which to carry them away. Neither in existing law nor in the Pittman bill as it passed the Senate, is there any effective brake on a war boom. Literally we have put our economy at the mercy of the Allies.

Many leaders of business have warned of the dangers of a war boom. John L. Lewis has declared, in substance, that labor does not want the false prosperity of a war boom. A milder warning has come from the A. F. of L. through its monthly economic survey. Some of the soundest minds in the Roosevelt Administration are extremely fearful of the effects, immediate and more distant, of a war boom induced by the Allied war orders.

La Follette Urges Limit On Exports

FOUR YEARS AGO, when the first of the neutrality acts was passed, this question of a war boom was recognized as of vital importance. Yet in the Senate debate it was touched upon only in passing, except for the brief direct discussion forced by Senator La Follette's proposal to put a ceiling on exports to the nations at war.

La Follette's proposal was simple, flexible and lenient. He proposed to separate our exports into each category to the nations at war. The limit was to be the average for any four consecutive years during the last 12 years. This formula would permit the upper limit of the high-export years of 1927-30, inclusive.

The La Follette "quota" scheme is somewhat more generous than the plan to restrict wartime exports to peacetime quantities which was advanced in 1936 by Secretary Hull and supported by Senator Pittman. But it would put a ceiling on a war export boom.

In 1936 Secretary Hull said to the Senate Foreign Relations committee:

"Our view was that fron the standpoint of keeping out of the war, no nation has a right to go out and get into a war, no matter who is responsible for it, and then turn around to a friendly neutral and demand of it that it be furnished with the necessary war supplies to carry on the war under penalty of being unneutral.

War Boom Perils Are Threefold

"WITH A VIEW to keeping the country out, we felt that nobody can object to a nation carrying on normal trade; but whenever any nation demands of a peaceful neutral nation that it go further, and single out and segregate purely war materials and war supplies, and feed them out to the warring nations, we said that there is not and never has been any international law or any other kind of law or reason that would compel a peaceful nation to do that regardless of the dangers involved."

The dangers of a war boom are threefold. First is the danger which comes from giving us an economic stake in the war, especially in one side in the war. The economic stake in an Allied victory which we built up through loans during 1915-17 certainly was not the sole reason for our entry into that war. But it was an influence which cannot be ignored. The Allies now have a great amount of cash and of assets which can be converted into dollars. But if this turns out to be a long, hard-fought war, they will begin to clamor for credits, and we will face again the cruel dilemma which Woodrow Wilson faced; to permit loans to be made or to precipitate a depression by the abrupt cutting off of war exports.

The second danger from a war boom is in pushing up the cost of living in this country.

The third danger is in the after-effects. Eventually a war boom must collapse. And when it does we probably will have a worse economic headache than we now have. We have not yet recovered from the 1916-1918 war boom in certain American agricultural products, notably wheat.

Sympathy Seems On Allied Side

THE ADMINISTRATION seems to have lost all interest in averting a war boom. Why? Partly because its sympathies are so strongly with the Allies. In 1936 it was interested in restricting exports to Italy, which had ships and a small amount of cash, whereas Ethiopia had neither. Now if anybody would be hurt by the restriction of exports it would be the Allies.

The second reason is more sordid, namely, that with a national election near at hand, the Administration and the Democratic Party need all the improvement in business which they can get. As a result, they will be grateful for every dollar's worth of war boom that can be generated—regardless of the subsequent ill effects on our economy.

At present there are only three checks on a war boom. One is the reluctance of many businessmen to expand their facilities to take care of temporary war demands from abroad. The second is the failure of Hitler to launch a great air war—a war which would destroy French and British factories. The third is the policy of the Allies: To fight a quiet war, and to rely as much as possible on their own resources and those of their dominions and colonies.

In other words, whether we have a war boom, with its serious consequences, has been left to the decision of foreign nations and of individual businessmen. On this vital matter of national policy, in which every citizen has a stake, the President, his New Deal lieutenants and the Democratic leadership in Congress, are abysmally silent.

Old Axis And New

By Barnet Nover

Italy, Germany And Russia

LITTLE IS happening on Europe's battlefields; but a great deal is happening in Europe's chancelleries. The military stalemate has had no counterpart in the political sphere, where the really decisive battles of this strangest of all wars are being fought.

Two significant indications of the way this diplomatic struggle is shaping up are to be found in the news out of Rome and Moscow.

In Rome, Premier Mussolini indulged yesterday in one of his periodical purges of Italy's administrative machinery, but one more drastic and far-reaching than any that has occurred in the past.

Because of the individuals involved in this shake-up, notably Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist Party, and Dino Alfieri, the minister of propaganda, it is possible to assume that Italy is now anxious to pursue a less pro-Nazi policy than she has done hitherto.

Starace and Alfieri have been among the most enthusiastic admirers of the Nazis and supporters of the Berlin-Rome Axis. Their displacement at this time, coupled with Italy's evident determination to remain neutral, indicates that the once powerful pull of Berlin is losing its force.

BUT IF the Berlin-Rome Axis is rapidly becoming a disembodied entity, the Berlin-Moscow Axis is beginning to take on form and flesh.

There were many obscurities in the speech of Premier Molotoff to the Supreme Soviet. For instance, it contained no indication regarding the extent of the support, military or economic, which Russia is prepared to give Germany. Russia, apparently, is to remain neutral, that is stay out of the actual fighting, but her neutrality is to be inclined in Germany's favor. The speech also contained no clear indication of the policy which the Soviet union is planning to follow in the Baltic and the Balkans.

But one point the speech did make clear—in the political and diplomatic spheres, at least—Soviet Russia is now Nazi Germany's full-fledged partner. So much so, in fact, that the Russian leaders appear anxious to prevent the downfall of the Nazi regime.

IN THEIR repeated statements regarding Allied war aims, British and French leaders have emphasized the point that they are not fighting Germany and the Germans but Hitler and Hitlerism. In other words they would be prepared to make peace tomorrow with a Reich that had eliminated Hitler, Goebbels, Ribbentrop & Co. and was prepared to pursue a decent international policy. Until that occurs, they have made it very clear, the war will go on.

What does Molotoff say to that? Reverting to an earlier theme he accuses the Allies of waging an ideological war on the Reich reminiscent of the religious wars of the past. And since they insist on fighting, he brands the Allies aggressors.

NOW THIS MAY simply be a verbal sop to Berlin to ease the hurt that may be felt there over Russia's occupation of eastern Poland and her penetration into the Baltic. It is probable, however, that it is more than that.

When Hitler made terms with Stalin, the Fuehrer gave hostages to fortune. He sacrificed his principal ideological weapon and in so doing cut the ground from under those who had viewed him and Nazi Germany with some favor because, as they believed, the Third Reich was a "bulwark against communism." The German-Russian deal also meant the sacrifice of Japanese, Italian, Hungarian and Spanish friendship.

But Stalin, too, gave hostages to fortune when he accepted the friendship of a man who for years had been trying to overthrow him and his regime. He, too, sacrificed his ideological allies and disgusted the millions of people everywhere who, however great their dislike of communism, regarded Russia as a potential bulwark of peace and a possible ally against aggression.

Rusian now has only one ally—Nazi Germany. And should the Nazis go under, Russia would find herself in an extremely isolated position. It is this consideration which helps explain Moscow's imperialistic moves in eastern Europe and the Baltic. But the same consideration operates to make Russia fearful of Hitler's downfall.

IT IS BEING said in many quarters that Russia "has won the war," that she alone will come out of the conflict stronger and more powerful than before.

The surface indications would seem to bear out this theory. Without firing a shot, Russia has been able to annex a considerable stretch of territory along her western border and establish protectorates over Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania. There is also a possibility of further political and even territorial gains in other areas adjacent to the Soviet Union.

But war is a poker game in which nothing counts but the final pay-off. If Russia emerges from the war entirely isolated, and that is a real possibility should Hitler be defeated, her present gains may prove of little value.

That is why the Soviet government, speaking through Molotoff, now opposes any reconstitution of Poland, opposes the overthrow of the Nazi system and opposes the continuation of the war by the Allies. Having made his bed with Hitler, Stalin now finds that he has no alternative but to sleep in it. He is also discovering that the bed is a hard one.

Pittsburgh Steel Output at Peak

Monessen, Pa., Oct. 31 (AP).—Production of the Pittsburgh Steel Co. is at "an all-time peak" President Henry A. Roemer reported, with much new business from South America since the war began.

Meeting in Monessen for the first time in the plant's history, the board of directors were told by Roemer that the company was "not producing any war material" at either its Monessen or Allenport plants.

A backlog of orders sufficient to insure capacity production "for months" was cited by Roemer as the chief reason the plant was operating at about 94 per cent of capacity.

Thanksgiving Is Proclaimed

Peace Hope Keynote

Proclaiming Thursday, November 23, as a day of general thanksgiving, President Roosevelt asked yesterday that thanks be offered "for the hope that lives within us" of the coming of an eventual world peace.

The proclamation designated the next to last Thursday instead of the last Thursday in accordance with Mr. Roosevelt's decision to move up the holiday for business reasons. Some States, however, have decided to celebrate November 30.

The proclamation follows:

I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the 23d of November, 1939, as a day of general thanksgiving.

More than three centuries ago, at the season of the gathering in of the harvest, the Pilgrims humbly paused in their work and gave thanks to God for the preservation of their community and for the abundant yield of the soil.

A century and a half later, after the new Nation had been formed, and the charter of Government, the Constitution of the Republic, had received the assent of the States, President Washington and his successors invited the people of the Nation to lay down their tasks one day in the year and give thanks for the blessings that had been granted them by Divine Providence.

It is fitting that we should continue this hallowed custom and select a day in 1939 to be dedicated to reverent thoughts of thanksgiving.

Our Nation has gone steadily forward in the application of democratic processes to economic and social problems. We have faced the specters of business depression, of unemployment, and of widespread agricultural distress, and our positive efforts to alleviate these conditions have met with heartening results.

We have also been permitted to see the fruition of measures which we have undertaken in the realms of health, social welfare and the conservation of resources.

As a Nation we are deeply grateful that in a world of turmoil we are at peace with all countries, and we especially rejoice in the strengthened bonds of our friendship with the other peoples of the Western Hemisphere.

Let us, on the day set aside for this purpose, give thanks to the Ruler of the universe for the strength which He has vouchsafed us to carry on our daily labors and for the hope that lives within us of the coming of a day when peace and the productive activities of peace shall reign on every continent.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 21st day of October, in the year of Our Lord, 1939, and of the independence of the United States of America, the 164th.

Rails to Continue Low Coach Fares Of 'Grand Circle'

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The railroads will continue for another year the $90 coach fare for the "grand circle" which was fixed to encourage travel to the New York and San Francisco fairs, it was announced.

A spokesman for the Trunk Line Association representing Eastern roads said the decision was due to the "very satisfactory results of the low fares" on the carriers' revenues.

Under the circle tour tariff a passenger may start at any point in the United States, visit either the East or West Coast and return to the point of departure at a total cost in coaches of $90 or in Pullmans at $135. The Pullman company has extended until October 31, 1940, the $43 tourist rate for space in their cars.

The Philosophy Of Pius XII

THE FIRST ENCYCLICAL of Pope Pius XII is more than a message to Catholicism. It is a message to a world which has lost its moorings and moves in chaos and despair to an unknown destiny. It is more than a great testament of faith. It is a political manifeso and a call to reason.

The Pope's message is in the great tradition of Catholic intellectuality. One might say that it is in the "Augustinian" tradition. Students of the Middle Ages say that with St. Augustine a new age began, in which the highest type of philosophical thinking was that of the theologians. The church has always had those, like Tertullian, who found an irreconcilable antagonism between Christianity and philosophy, between faith and reason. But it has also had great social and political philosophers like St. Augustine, St. Anselm and St. Thomas Aquinas, men who sought to combine religious faith with rational speculation, and who, in the words of St. Augustine, believed that "understanding is the reward of faith. Therefore, seek not to understand that thou mayest believe, but believe that thou mayest understand.

This understanding, born of faith, Pius XII has brought to bear upon our age, which he truly describes as one which, "preoccupied with the worship of the ephemeral, has lost its way and spent its forces in a vain search after earthly ideals," and one which, "for all its technical and civic progress," is tormented by spiritual emptiness and deep-felt inner poverty."

Unerring Finger On Modern Heresies

TO THIS AGE his words come with sorrow and with sternness, but also with faith, and hope, and moral beauty. The encyclical is a modern document. A faith in eternal and transcendental values does not presume the changelessness of institutions. "No one of good will and vision will think of refusing the state, in the exceptional condition of the world today, correspondingly wider and exceptional rights to meet popular needs . . . goods, and blood, it can demand."

But the Pope puts his finger unerringly upon the heresies in modern society, heresies which are not heresies of the church; not only heresies according to the words of Christ, but heresies against the natural order, against both the revealed truth, eternally comprehended by the saintly and against reason and experience as well.

Both of these heresies have to do with nationalism, and with the claims of the state. The first, "the pernicious error," is the one that denies the basic unity of mankind, "imposed by our common origin and by the equality of rational nature in all men."

This faith and belief in human solidarity are expressed in both religious and philosophical terms. All men are children of God. That is a religious concept. But the Pope calls attention further to "that unity of nature, in which every man is equally composed of material body and spiritual soul; in the unity of the immediate end and mission in the world; in the unity of the dwelling place, the earth, of whose resources all men can by natural right avail themselves to sustain and develop life . . ."

THESE ARE WORDS of a profound political and economic connotation. To students of the political philosophers of our own democracy they have a not unfamiliar ring. For the justification of democracy, in the Declaration of Independence and in the words of many another of this Nation's founders, notably William Penn, was precisely the inviolability of the human person, as a being sacred, the fundamental equality of men because they are endowed with reason, and the concept of the earth as the possession of all, no part of it to be monopolized for selfish ends by an individual, a nation, or a race.

The encyclical gives small comfort to those who hope for a restoration of that period of the unbridled scramble of individual interests which called itself "liberal."

But in the clear rejection of rascism the denunciation of Nazism is also implicit. Each people cherishes its characteristics, says the encyclical, "with jealous and intelligible pride," but nations "are not destined to break the unity of the human race, but rather to embellish and enrich it by the sharing of their own peculiar gifts and by that reciprocal interchange of goods which can be possible and effective only when a mutual love and a lively sense of charity unite all the sons of the same Father." . . .

The ideal toward which humanity must strive is expressed by the Pope in the words of the Apostle of the Gentiles: "Putting of the new man, him who is renewed unto knowledge, according to the image of him that created him, where there is neither Gentile nor Jew, barbarian nor Scythian, bond nor free . . ."

HIS IS THE eternal search for unity with diversity, in harmony with universal standards.

WITH BRIGHT CLARITY, the Pope reveals that the rejection of moral principles of transcendental validity has plunged the world into chaos, divisions, slavery and war. "They spoke of progress when they were going back, of being raised when they groveled, of arriving at man's estate when they stooped to servility."

The moral principles which, revealed in religion, are supported by human reason and human wisdom, are not held, by the Pope, to apply to individuals. They apply to all groups and organizations and to the sovereign state itself. As a political philosopher, proceeding from Christian ethics and ideals, the encyclical categorically denied the unlimited sovereignty of the state. The state, also, may not commit crimes. This very old doctrine was once revolutionary. It was revolutionary in this country in 1787 when the Constitution was signed, and in a world which now calls itself revolutionary but would better call itself convulsionary—a world in the convulsions of a dying era—this concept is again revolutionary. It belongs to the future as much as to the past.

Not only must the individual tame his appetites and discipline his pursuits to the welfare of the community, expressed in society, and in the state, but the state, too, must discipline its power to the individual and to the welfare of the other states.

Thus, the Pope denounces the error "contained in those ideas which do not hesitate to divorce civil authority from every kind of dependence upon the supreme being . . . and from every restraint of a higher law . . . thus they accord the civil authority an unrestricted field of action that is at the mercy of the changeful tide of human will," and ". . . the civil authority as an inevitable result tends to attribute to itself that absolute autonomy which belongs exclusively to the Supreme Maker."

Document Raises Eternal Question

PIUS XII IN THIS great document raises again the eternal question of the philosophers as well as of the theologians: Why are we born? For what end do we live? And the answer throws a devastating light upon the utopias that men have tried to set up without first answering that most urgent and cogent question.

An age which has relegated both religion and philosophy to obscure places and has concerned itself almost wholly with economics and technical progress can no longer afford to scoff. To what use is this technique being put? How constructively, for the whole of mankind, or any large portion of it, is the wealth being used? Where, after a century of its indiscriminate distribution, is freedom—and what is the meaning of freedom? Where is the happiness that has been so feverishly and individually pursued?

Will the mere reorganization of the form effect the renovation of society, if the content is disregarded?

Will the liberal state, or the Communist state, or the Nazi state take us anywhere, unless we know where we want to go and why?

Are not the new forms taking us, rather, only with increased tempo into chaos?

One of them, the Nazi, even glorifies tempo as an end in itself, and preaches "dynanism"—The a-moral and a-philosophical idea that rapid revolving, the absence of direction, the movement itself, is the ideal: God is perpetual motion. The cross is not lifted up that all men may be drawn into it, but is twisted into the spokes of the ever-revolving wheel, which is the swastika . . . the cross become a pinwheel.

MORE THAN THE Catholic world will be arrested by the words of the Pope. All who are tired of being on their way to a rendezvous with an unknown destiny vaguely labeled "progress" will be arrested by them.

They challenge mankind to ask itself for what it lives and works. They call mankind back to the old and eternally new and proper study of mankind: man himself.

They point the way to the synthesis that the human mind is seeking everywhere, between individual freedom and social discipline, between liberty and authority, between material needs and more than material ends, between the past and the future, and out of the anarchy and frustration of the present.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Thoughts On War

This is the war that is keeping Europe out of war. It is Armageddon dotted with "No Shooting" signs.

Everybody thought it would be the most horrible and unrestrained war in history. So far, on land, it has been the gentlest and most restrained. Man was supposed to have reached the limit of his capacity for cruelty and baseness. So far he looks considerate and a little lofty.

Great cities were thought to be doomed to destruction and the populations constant victims of brutal warfare. The cities are unmarked and the populations bored.

Man was assumed to be ready to sink into savagery. In no war in history has he behaved for the first two months on land more like a gentleman.

What's the explanation? Has man turned brave, chivalrous and considerate all of a sudden? Not at all. He's scared stiff. For the first time in history large scale war has become so horrible nobody has a real appetite for it.

It would appear that for the first time the world agrees with Sherman.

Even war lords look before they leap.

The armies of three nations have been face to face on the Western Front for two months, and little has disturbed the quiet except an occasional command, "Come up out of those trenches. You're apt to get hurt down there!"

If the soldiers in No Man's Land want to know about the war they have to await letters from home or get a portable radio.

A soldier of the legion
Stood on the Maginot;
He knew there was a war on—
For he had a radio!

"Well, mom," a soldier can write home, "It is safe and quiet out here, but I keep worrying about the dangers to you and pop back there in all the heavy traffic."

Instead of "Forward!" "Over the top, men!" and "To the attack" the only order heard is "Answer the phone, corporal. It may be for us."

Of course, trouble may break loose any minute. But there is a wonderful chance this will be ended by the general realization that there is no percentage in mass slaughter.

Boy, wouldn't it be grand if the question, "Who won the war?" could be answered within a few weeks by the simple statement, Everybody. It was called off on account of intelligence."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wirl Is Three Years Older and Half a Head Taller Than Man She Loves; Should She Marry Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps you can help me with my problem. I am going with a boy who loves me very much and who wants to marry me. He is three years younger than I am, and also half a head shorter. Do you think his being younger and shorter would prevent our being happy together? We share the same tastes and love each other very much. May I have your opinions? Sincerely, ROXANA.

DEAR ROXANA: Once upon a time there was a quaint theorem that every woman is a clinging vine and every man a sturdy oak. When people believed this to be true, they likewise reasoned that, because of it, every girl's husband should be both older and taller than she, if they were to be happy together playing their appointed roles of (a) dear little nitwit clinger, and (b) great big wise and wonderful supporter.

However, this view of the essential relationship of woman to man has "gone with the wind," and in its place has risen the newer and sounder theory that marriages which endure happily through the years are built on a premise of psychological compatability. According to this theory, it is far more important for husbands and wives to be true friends, to be bound together by ties of sympathy, understanding and shared aims, interests and points of view, than it is for the man to outstrip his wife in either age or stature.

Since you two "love each other very much and share the same tastes," my advice is to ignore the difference in height and forget about the negligible difference in age. The incident of a woman being a few years older than her fiance is essentially unimportant if and when she belongs chronologically to the same "age group" as the man. And certainly a girl who is merely three years older than her husband belongs very definitely to his generation. In their adult social experience it is inevitable that each will form friendships with persons ranging in age from a few years younger to a few years older, all of whom will mingle on a so-called contemporary-age basis. Against this background, their individual age difference will automatically erase itself. M. H.

Where Find Psychiatrist For Bad "Case of Jitters?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like your advice about where and how I can get in touch with a psychiatrist. I am 23 years old and apparently in good health. For the past six months I have not been able to go out socially without contracting a terrific case of jitters. My hands shake so from nervousness at dinner parties, teas, etc., that it is an effort for me to eat or drink anything. This behavior has produced, in turn, a mental strain of such proportions that I dread offering or accepting hospitality.

Recently I had a complete medical examination, but the doctor said definitely that there was nothing in the world wrong, physically. Naturally, I conclude that the trouble is mental. I have an interesting position but unfortunately my salary is not enough to allow me to pay very much for the services of a psychiatrist. I would be very grateful if you could recommend someone who does clinical work.

I have tried to overcome this situation by sheer will power but I have come to the point where I feel the need of authoritative advice. Always before I was perfectly at ease wherever I went and, therefore, I cannot understand this ridiculous state of mind.

Sincerely. J.

Diagnostician Is Needed To Isolate Ailment

DEAR J.: It is easy enough to "get in touch with a psychiatrist" or, for that matter, to obtain clinical treatment of a psychiatric kind. Apply to the Washington institute of Mental Hygiene, located at 1464 Columbia road northwest (telephone ADams 1033). If you are able to pay a reasonable fee (and I have heard it said that the patient who pays "something," however little, for psychiatric treatment derives more benefit than the person who obtains the service gratis)—if you can pay a reasonable fee, ask the Institute to give you the names of established psychiatrists who can afford to take you for what you can afford to pay. However, if paid psychiatric treatment would run you hopelessly into debt, make this fact known to the Institute and I am sure your needs will be met free of charge.

It seems odd, to put it mildly, that your examining physician would have dismissed your case without recommendation simply because he found no organic explanation of your "terrific case of jitters." According to my knowledge of the diagnostic procedure of Grade-A medical men, the elimination of the possibility of organic infection would have led immediately to further and equally ertinent inquiry—into your glandular functioning, emotional history, social or environmental pressures, etc., etc.

In concluding that your trouble is "mental" you are really making a slap-dash diagnosis of your own condition and guessing at the healing prescription. In my opinion, it would be well to see a diagnostician who is competent to say what ails you, before proceeding with highly specialized treatment. Don't hesitate to go to the finest man in the city. The "big name" medical men are possessed, generally, of a humanitarianism which is commensurate with their scientific prowess, in that they generously adjust their fees to fit the purse of the patient whose means are limited. M. H.

When 'The Rains Came'

As right as the rain that deluged Washington yesterday are the two stormy weather fashions pictured here. Culled from local stores that did a thriving business in raincapes, umbrellas and overshoes, yesterday, the little rain hood, above, and the reversible raincoat, sketched, suggest permanent additions for the rainy day wardrobe. The youthful hood, called the "Raindear," adds a gay yet practical note of cheer to campuses, club grounds, or drenched city streets. Of waterproofed silk, it has a back frill to keep curls dry. Obtainable locally in scarlet, royal, white or brown. The combination topcoat and raincoat is of smart brown and white flecked tweed, lined in waterproofed gabardine plus an amusing hood to button on or off. The double-breasted styling is refreshing in this type of double-duty coat.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

I Have No Things

I

Alas, I have no Mexican glassware, no Arizona sun-baked pottery,
No rare curios brought from old Spanish missions in California,
No hammered silver jewelry, nor woven baskets made by Indians,
To show my friends.
But I have fluttering mysteriously past my living room window,
Delicate golden leaves that drop gracefully to form mosaics
On the green grass, and later stiffen and scurry noisily
Before the wind.

II

I have no Currier and Ives prints, nor first editions discovered in the attic,
No daguerrotypes of ancestors, no grandfather's clock, no andirons,
No Bristol bottle, no tulipwood table, no "priceless old silver," no auction bargain,
To exhibit with pride,
But I have some very old brown leaves clinging gallantly
To my oak tree and refusing to fall and be buried and forgotten,
Continuing to rustle defiantly and at times to sing softly
The requiem of summer.

III

I have no Chinese screens, bowls, wall hangings or vases,
No temple gongs, no piece of jade, no mellowed embroideries,
No Japanese etchings or silks, no mementoes brought from pagan pagodas,
To make callers exclaim.
But whenever I wish I have an illimitable tapestry of forest,
In colors that never get caught and imprisoned in things for my mantel,
But that sheathed in Indian summer's blue haze are kept unchanging, unfading
Forever in memory.

IV

I have no diamond dinner ring that my husband gave me on our anniversary,
No latest model wrist watch, no silver carving set, no console piano,
No trailing negligee, no expensive perfume in a stunning cut glass container,
To describe at bridge parties.
But I have the glisten of raindrops on my window watched from the sanctuary
Of my fireside, and I have the scent of far-off bonfires, the aroma of fall grass,
I have the secret and quickening expectation of the first snow crystals,
The miracle of winter.

V

I have no porcelain shepherdesses, no china cats, no dainty figurines.
No lamps with Swedish glass bases, no dashing futuristic mirrors,
No miniatures, no collections of this or that, no interesting objects d'art,
To make conversation.
But I have the bold caress of the West wind on my face to challenge and stir me,
The kindly warmth of the far Southward sun to engulf and to soothe me,
And the perpetual vision of beauty—Nature in the glory of its seasoned maturity—
I have autumn.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 31.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Nearly a full hundred head of current debutantes have just been tossed carelessly to the social lions at the annual Tuxedo Ball, held in Tuxedo Park, that just-out-of-town haunt of the exclusive. Just imagine, 100 of these hapless dollbabies! If a bomb had fallen on that dance hall, the United States might have shut up shop then and there.

Veronica Dengel, local expert on diet and weight reduction, has a big son who has just had a leg busted playing high school football. Thus her house is infested with his pals, who drop in to commiserate with the hurt hero, and to write snippy sentiments on his plaster cast. Now associated with a famed local beautician, Veronica estimates that she has removed seven and a half tons of blubber from local ladies in the past year. Nice going, kid.

Joan London has just published an interesting life of her famed writer-father, Jack. Joan herself is an interesting woman. We first met her in Moscow, where her-then-husband, the talented Charles Malamuth, was acting as head of a big American press association there. A handsome girl she was, and very forthright and definite. I seemed to see a lot of her colorful papa in her.

BRENDA DUCKY DARLING FRAZIER'S mama, Mrs. Frederick Watriss, is big in the social picture this fall. Some call her "Big Brenda." A handsome woman, Canadian by birth, I saw her at a cafe opening wearing a flesh-colored chiffon evening dress embroidered with silver maple leaves, the Canadian touch. Big Brenda does a classy rhumba, and daughter is certainly not hogging the family pitcture.

With the weather cooling, the town's exclusive little club of chinchilla wearers is bursting out. The club's prexy, Hope Hampton, was the first to trot out her costly pelts at a recent theater opening. She and her husband, Jules Brulatour, are premiere landmarks. Never miss.

ANGELLA TAYLOR, beauty shark, has been in town. Now she's a real cutie, having shed no less than 70 pounds in two years. She's maddest at mothers who allow their daughters to have permanents before they're 16, saying the kids' hair hasn't got full strength till then. "It's a mortal sin," avers Agnella.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Let's Call It Slimming Instead of Reducing, Expert Proposes

Let's not talk about reducing any more . . . let's call it slimming. Reducing usually connotes a drastic weight loss without the trimming and slimming most figures actually need.

Take any group of women of assorted shapes and sizes. Some of them will be above normal weight, it is true, and they need to reduce. But the majority merely will have an extra pound here and a couple of extra pounds there. They are out of shape more than they are overweight. All of them would look slimmer and have much better figures with exercise.

Dieting is another overworked term and it should be replaced by "correct eating." Instead of saying, "I'm going on a diet," you should say, "I'm eating correctly now." Or, if you wanted to be so frank, "I've stopped overeating."

Slimming is Better Term

Eating correctly means eating what you need and leaving off what you don't need, which will probably aggregate one-third less calories. Dieting, however, has come to mean privation. Now, when you eat correctly daily you have lean meat, fish or fowl; cheese or milk; eggs, fruits, vegetables, bread and butter. You are not depriving yourself of anything!

Slimming seems to be better term for the whole business. It suggests weight control without deprivation and it also conveys the idea of lovlier lines . . . and the latter depends on your muscles.

The difference between a well-toned muscle and a stretched flabby muscle is the difference between a good figure and a poor one.

Husband Won't Object

The movie stars are shining examples of slimming. Many are beautifully slim. You wouldn't object to having a figure like Joan Blondell or Claudette Colbert or Anne Sheridan! And you couldn't say that any of these girls are too thin. They are streamlined and the secret is well-toned muscles.

Anything that increases muscle tone will give you better lines. Massage is very valuable in your slimming program. It is not reducing—it won't take off any weight—but it increases muscle tone, and is slimming. Exercise does more. It increases muscle tone, and being that it also increase your calorie expenditure, it is reducing.

Women in War-Torn Nations Cherish Their Facial Beauty

Helena Rubinstein, Recently Returned From Abroad, Does Not Believe Masculine Clothes Or Coiffures Will Develop From Conflict

By Carolyn Abbott.

PLAIN CLOTHES— not plain faces—are the vogue among European women whose countries are involved in war. These women have cast aside their finery for more subdued frocks, but they are not giving up their cosmetics. If anything, they are trying harder than ever to be beautiful. This is the observation of Mme. Helena Rubenstein, international beauty authority, who has just returned from England and France.

"European women feel that it is more important now than ever before to keep their faces and bodies beautiful," said Mme. Rubenstein, who was in Washington recently. That is one of their many contributions to the morale of the soldiers. Staying as lovely as possible is one way of keeping up the spirit of the men. And regardless of how shabby their clothes may becomee, the women will continue to take excellent care of their bodies, faces and coiffures."

Wear Upswept Coiffure

The majority of the French women still wear the upswept coiffure. They do not object to looking grown-up and feminine. In fact, womanliness and femininity are qualities that have not been banished with the war. However, the French women are not dependent entirely upon beauty salons and hair dressers for they learn to dress their own hair and to apply cosmetics expertly themselves. But the English are not quite so fortunate for, like the Americans, they have left much of their beauty to hair stylists and cosmeticians, according to Mme. Rubenstein.

Mannish hair-dos will not be the result of this war as was the case in 1920, Mme. Rubenstein believes. She thinks women will be more sensible than to adopt severe masculine clothes and severe unbecoming coiffures.

Contrasting European with American women, she said, "young American girls are naturally more beautiful, but their beauty does not wear as well or as long as that of the French, English or Italian women. The foreign women do not spend more money on beauty preparations but they do spend more time. They are more particular and more thorough in caring for their skins. Therefore at 45 they look 26, and at 60 they are still beautifully young in appearance."

Gives Beauty Tips

"Women can do much to make themselves more beautiful," explained Mme. Rubinstein," if they will learn to do things for themselves. Exercise and proper diet are essential to body loveliness. And the first requisite of a good complexion is to know the skin. Not only should women know what is best for their skins but they should do the things regularly that will keep it in good condition.

Here are a few beauty tips given by Mme. Rubinstein:

"Beauty attainment is not an overnight accomplishment. It must be worked for consistently and meticulously.

"Feet often control the expression of the face. Aching feet put a sour, unpleasant look if not wrinkles in the face. Change shoes two or three times a day.

"Brush hair at least 20 minutes a day. The more sheen and gloss to the hair the more youthful and brighter the eyes look.

"Throat and jawline are the dead-give aways to age and neglect. Correct posture, exercise, massage and lubrications with creams are the corrective measures.

Avoid Purple Cosmetics

"Purple cosmetics are seldom becoming to any woman and are never flattering in winter. Natural (blood) or (ruby) red are the most becoming shades of rouge and lipstick.

"Sallow, brown patches or blotches should be removed from the skin by a skin clearing cream. When the skin is dry and tissues thin a youthifying cream should be used nightly.

"Facial exercises that uplift the muscles should be performed regularly."

Fashion Art Self-Taught

HOW OFTEN it happens that the girl who was good in drawing at school looks back regretfully to those days, wishes she had gone on.

And what a shame to let talent get "rusty," when with the aid of simple instructions, charts, you can learn fashion art at home, go on to a profitable, glamorous career.

Using the simple "Visual" or "Blocking In" method, you begin drawing the human figure by sketching in straight lines from point to point. You use definite proportions for the face and parts of the body.

Draw, for instance, the head in profile. The face—from hairline to chin—you use as a measurement. Draw a square, each side one "face" long. Notice you now have the width of the head at two points. A vertical line through the center of the square locates the correct position of the ear. The eye is located halfway between top of head and chin.

"No Experiments for Me When My Child CATCHES . . . COLD!"

NOTICE TO MOTHERS...Today 3 out of 5 mothers—knowing how foolish it is to experiment or constantly dose delicate stomachs—use this home-approved external poultice-vapor treatment to relieve distress of colds.
WHEN a cold makes your child feel miserable, all stuffed up—causes muscular soreness or tightness, irritation in the upper bronchial tubes or spasms of coughing—let the experience of other mothers help you to relieve the distress.
Here's what you do: At bedtime, rub the child's throat, chest and back with Vicks VapoRub. And see what morning brings!
ACTS 2 WAYS AT ONCE...Almost immediately VapoRub starts stimulating like a good old-fashioned poultice. And, at the same time, pleasing—helpful—medicinal vapors are released by body heat and breathed direct into the cold-irritated air passages.
Then for hours this poultice-vapor action continues. It invites refreshing sleep. And when you see how it relieves distress you will understand why Vicks VapoRub is a family standby in 3 out of 5 homes. WHY TAKE NEEDLESS CHANCES!

Mother Sues Bergdoll, Wife For $334,800

World War Draft Dodger May Lose Funds Due From U. S.

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World War draft dodger, tonight was threatened with loss of his $300,000 return on property confiscated by the Federal Government.

Bergdoll and his German-born wife, Berta, were named in a suit filed in behalf of his mother, Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, claiming $334,800 of his fortune, which once totaled more than $500,000.

The Bergdoll properties were confiscated by the Government in the World War under the "trading with the enemy" act and the restitution was ordered last week by Attorney General Murphy.

The elder Mrs. Bergdoll's suit was filed in Federal Court today by Grover's brother, Charles A. Braun, who changed his name assertedly because of the prewar escapades of the Philadelphian.

Braun, who lives at Pala, San Diego County, Calif., was named trustee for his mother in a deed of trust filed December 12, 1938.

The suit listed 13 items. It included loans totaling $92,000 which Mrs. Bergdoll assertedly made to Bergdoll while he was a fugitive. Another item was a $125,000 "Christmas present" which he allegedly intended to give his mother in 1924, but was prevented from doing by the Government's seizure of his property. Another major claim listed $23,300 in fines paid by Mrs. Bergdoll for herself and others for "conspiring" to aid her son's military service evasion.

Mrs. Berta Bergdoll was named specifically in a $25,000 claim for stock which the elder Mrs. Bergdoll bought in Grover's wife's name, allegedly with the understanding that an accounting would be given on demand.

The court allowed 20 days for the Grver Bergdolls to reply. Bergdoll is serving an eight-year term at Governors Island, N. Y., for evading military service. His wife, who gave birth recently to her sixth child, is here.

Cardinal O'Connell Urges All Faiths To Pray for Peace

Boston, Oct. 31 (AP).—William Protestants and Jews last night to "get down on their marrow bones" and pray for restoration of peace in the world.

The dean of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States deplored as "hideous deception" the ideology of nations which would "put God from His universe."

"If the leaders of nations would think not of their own vanity, but of the welfare of the people," he asserted in an interview, "they would clamor for religion and for God's word."

He termed the recent encyclical of Pope Pius XII "a far-reaching doctrine of Christian justice and amity on which true peace must be based."

strolled through the crowd. Guests startled by a "skeleton," moving inthe Willard Hotel lobby were under its own power.

Away from brightly lighted streets the Halloween spooks appeared in familiar shapes. From the Sixth Precinct came 15 complaints of children removing gates. A householder asked police to remove six gates from her backyard.

Elmer Mahoney, 21-year-old grocery delivery man, was robbed of $30.80 and $1.70 worth of food by a man wearing a Halloween mask. Mahoney had been asked to bring an order of groceries and change for a check to 1106 Columbia road northwest. The masked waiting outside the apartment building threatened him with a gun.

Vandals Throw at Home

At 6307 Seventh street northwest, vandals smashed a bird bath and threw chunks into the back door o fthe home of United States Marshal Charles H. Knight. One fragment narrowly missed Richard Robinson, Knight's 82-year-old father-in-law.

John E. Davis and his wife, about to enter their home at 641 Silver Spring avenue, were preceded by a pear, thrown from across the street through the door window.

Arlington Engineer Confers on Lee Highway Widening

C. L. Kinnier, Arlington County engineer, yesterday conferred with Col. H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, on plans for the widening of Lee Highway in the vicinity of Cherrydale.

The program has been prepared by the State Highway Department and calls for a two-way road around the Old Dominion Bank at Cherrydale as a result of failure to have the bank building removed.

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan said the State has allocated $82,200 for the widening to the highway from Rossyln to Cherrydale. The allocation includes $7,200 for purchase of the Old Dominion railway right-of-way from Cherrydale to Lee Heights.

Book Tells How To Teach Sex

able for this purpose, but also the courses in home economics, sociology and English literature, according t tohe authors.

"There has been a persistent feeling that blundering humans should not discuss sex lest they corrupt and spoil it," said Surgeon General Thomas Parran in a foreward to the publication. "Because discussion has been avoided, many people see sex dimly through a mist—dangerous but mysteriously attractive."

Sex Held Important

In a separate foreword, Commissioner of Education John W. Studemaker said:

"The processes of sex are fundamental to life and the social relations involved in, or with, this function are of the greatest importance to the welfare of the individual. Yet education in this field is largely obtained by chance or mschance and there seems to be litle objection to such haphazard learning from unreliable and undesirable sources. Otherwise, long ago we would have done more about it in the programs of our schools."

"Flower and animal studies make a fine basis for sex education in the District schools, but why should biology stop with frogs," said Everett. "Human beings are tremendously more important.

"The modern generation of parents is ahead of the school heads in its thinking on this subject. Even if the argument were true that parents are opposed to sex education in the schools it would not justify the present taboo. Suppose fathers and mothers complained against the teaching of botany. Would that subject be barred? No, but this other matter is far more fundamental than botany."

Cancer Victim Dies After 9 Days Of Hibernation

Pryor, Okla., Oct. 31 (AP).—A 46-year-old farm wife died today of a blocked gall bladder as she sought, through hibernation, to prolong her life against the ravages of cancer.

Her nine-day hibernation period would have ended tonight. Her body temperature was reduced to 85 degrees.

Dr. E. A. Leach, of Tulsa, who with Dr. V. D. Herrington performed an autopsy, said he did not believe the hibernation treatment aggravated the bladder condition.

The autopsy also showed cancer had infected the patient's entire abdominal cavity, affecting the liver, gall bladder and lungs, but Dr. Leach said the cancer was not responsible for her death.

Dr. Leach said the autopsy showed "the cancer mass had been reduced about 75 per cent and was becoming soft."

300 Junior Leaguers Open Season At 20th Anniversary Luncheon

Even Highlighted by Speeches, but Not The Dull Kind; Miss Cecil Jones, President, Introduces Others; Dr. McCartney Talks

By Hope Ridings Miller,

Not as Lady Bountifuls but as bountiful ladies, almost 300 members of the Junior League gathered for the twenty-sixth anniversary luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel. The annual event that officially opens the season was highlighted by speeches (but not the dull kind) and frequent references to welfare work done by the Leaguers, a surprising number of whom carry full-time jobs in connection with civic and charity organizations. Anybody who thinks this group is not seriously interested in helping to care for the needy, the lame, the halt and the blind, would have had his eyes opened yesterday when mention was made from the floor of the work done the last year, when the league served 65 civic groups in Washington.

The West Ballroom of the hotel was the scene of the luncheon, at which Miss Cecil Lester Jones, president of the Washington Junior League, made a brief introductory speech and introduced others who were on the program. Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, gave the principal address, which was preceded by a short talk from Mrs. John Twohy 2d, of Norfolk, Va., director of Region III, Junior Leagues of America.

Drawing on some of his recent experiences and observations gathered on a 5,000-mile automobile trip through Europe, Dr. McCartney pointed out that soon the temptation would be great for women interseted in welfare work to turn their attention from their duties in the local field to "more cloroful channels of work." In this connection he urged his listeners to remember that people around us in distress now will be just as greatly in need, probably more so, if the cauldron of war continued to boil; and that the first duty of such organizations as the Junior League is to help those closer home.

Mrs. Twohy Brings Greetings

Mrs. Twohy, who like Dr. McCartney originally hailed from Ohio, confined her brief remarks to greeting the members and to expressing her pleasure at being present. She and Miss Jones, who sat next to her, had chosen their attire from an autumnal chart, with Mrs. Twohy wearing dark brown suit with a snuff-colored turban, and Miss Jones appearing in a dark green ensemble. Both wore gardenia corsages.

Ten members of the Junior League and Dr. McCartney were seated at the long head-table on one side of the room, facing a cluster of round table at which other members were placed. A seasonal note, with a Hallowe'en accent, was carried in the decorations, which featured centerpieces of grapes, apples, pumpkins, pears and squash artistically arranged on cushions of autumn leaves.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., wearing a becoming black hat and frock, trimmed in red, sat to the right of Dr. McCartney. Others at the head table included Mrs. Louis E. Jeffries, jr., who was chairman of the arrangements committee for the luncheon; Mrs. Charles D. Hayes, Miss Marion Shouse, Mrs. P. Lahdon Banfield, Mrs. W. W. Mackall, jr., Mrs. G. Howland Chase, Mrs. William North Sturtevant and Miss Anne Carter Greene.

Miss Dulany Heads Ushers

Shortly before the luncheon began, a bevy of handsomely dressed younger members were all over the place, showing other Junior Leaguers to their tables. Miss Juliet Dulany, who was in charge of the little group wearing usher badges, had on her committee Miss Dorothea Sowers, Miss Cassie Parker, Miss Alice Barry, Mrs. Mason Raynsford, Miss Alice Jewett, Miss Louise Burke, Mrs. Thatcher Winslow, Miss Barbara Bradley and Miss Leone McCoy.

IMPRESSIONS: The entire assembly presented a crowded picture of some of the most trimly turned out women you can ever hope to see in Washington on a rainy day—or any other, for that matter. . . . Mrs. McKenney Malon had on a smart black and gray pink striped suit with a black pillbox turban, set off with streamers. . . . Stunning was the word for Mrs. E. Cortland Parker's ensemble, featuring a simply cut black frock, a silver fox cape and a small, snap-brimmed black hat, set o ffwith a veil. . . . Gray tweeds and a matching beret were worn by Mrs. William Barron Kerkham. . . . Mrs. Claude L'Anglais had on a becoming navy blue ensemble; while just across the table from her was Mrs. Atherton Macondray, wearing an all-black outfit, with an off-the-face wide-brimmed black hat.

Lady Pascoe-Rutter Among Those Present

A center of attention was Lady Pascoe-Rutter, of England, who had on a mavue tweed suit with a hat crowned with same shade and brimmed with purple to match her tailored blouse . . . Mrs. George Maurice Morris was glimpsed deep in tlak with Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin . . . And at the same table was Mrs. Edward Warren Sturdevant, whose green frock was a gay splash of color in the group.

Miss Gertrude Pearson, whose engagement was recently announced, and her sister, Miss Katherine Pearson, both on the luncheon committee, were at the ticket table until a split second before the event began . . . Still others at the luncheon—to mention but a few familiar faces in the throng—Miss Barbara Bolling, Mrs. Crosby Boyd, Mrs. Howard Davidson, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Samuel Tilden Ansell, jr., Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, in a smart crushed raspberry ensemble, and Mrs. Curtis Shears, whose gray frock was brightened with a becoming red turban.

Among this year's crop of "transfers" present were Mrs. John Hanley, of Omaha; Mrs. Henry W. Harris, of Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Paul Macdonald, of Mount Clair, N. J.; Miss Sara Tyler Meigs, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Edwin Tribble, of Macon, Ga., and Mrs. Lewis Lind, of Omaha. Among out-of-towners on hand for the party were Mrs. Willia Hall, of Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Vernon Pritchard, of Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Neville Bowers, of Oklahoma City, and Mrs. M. M. Blakeney, jr., of Dallas, Tex.

Quantico Marines Renew Use of Steel Helmets

Special Dispatch to The Post

Quantico, Va., Oct. 31.—Steel helmets, neglected since 1918, are being "rejuvenated" by United States Marines stationed here. Several units of the Fleet Marine Force have ordered new helmets; but in general old ones are being issued—with new linings. The men replace the linings themselves.

Simultaneously an order has been issued allowing men to wear the straps on theid helmets under their chins instead of in back of their heads at all times except when underfire. This order is designed to make the men more comfortable during manuevers, yet protect them i ntime of actual battle.

The order requiring that helmet straps be worn in back originated durin gthe World War, when it was discovered that straps under chins caused heads to be snapped off when bullets struck helmets at the right angle.

Gambrill Park At Frederick Given to State

1,100-Acre Playspot Formally Accepted By O'Conor

By the Associated Press

Frederick, Md., Oct. 31.—The City of Frederick formally transferred Gambrill Park, at High Knob, to the State of Maryland today at ceremonies which, due to a day-long downpour of rain, were held indoors at the Francis Scott Key Hotel.

Approximately 150 persons, attending a luncheon there, also saw the unveiling of a tablet to James H. Gambrill, jr., prominent Frederick citizen for whom the park is named.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor accepted deeds from the city which bring the park's total acreage to approximately 1,100. The Governor praised Gambrill for his interest in conservation and declared dedication of the park marked the start of a greater conservation program for the future.

Mayor Lloyd C. Culler traced the history of the park, located 7 miles from here, pointing out that the first 450 acres were presented to the city by a group of citizens in 1934. The city gradually has acquired additional acreage since that time, finally passing the 1,000-acre mark today.

James J. McEntee, assistant director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, paid tribute to members of the Fishing Creek CCC amp for improvements they made on the property. State Forester F. Besley acted as toastmaster at the luncheon and the Rev. Malcolm S. Tayloe, pastor of All Saints Episcopal hurch, was a speaker.

Rain Delays Parade in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 31.—The annual mummers' parade, sponsored by the Alsatic Club and scheduled for tonight, was called off this afternoon when there was no prospect of the rain, which had been falling continuously since yesterdya, ceasing.

The committee anounced that the parade will be held tomorrow night.

Weather permitting, the Chambersburg (Pa.) parade committee, upon learning of the decision to postpone the parade here, announced that its parade scheduled for Wednesday night would be held Thursday. Parade committee members spent most of the afternoon notifying 30 bands and drum corps of the postponement.

Slayer Loses 55th Attempt To Free Self

Making Farce of Law, Jail-Trained 'Lawyer' Told by Judge

Baltimore, Oct. 31.—Louis Berman, convicted slayer and prison-trained "lawyer," lost today his fifty-fifth attempt to win freedom by means of habeas corpus proceedings.

Berman's application fora hearing was denied by Judge Charles Lee Cobourn, of the Harford County Circuit Court. Judge Cobourn added, "your practice . . . is making a farce of a very salutary provision of the law.

Convicted more than ten years ago and sentenced to life for the murder of his attorney in a dispute over a $2,500 fee, Berman has studied law and has prepared all his own applications for habeas corpus hearings.

Under Maryland law, he is permitted to appeal ot each judge at least once. Every time a new jurist is seated, Berman gets another opportunity to apply for a hearing.

Birthday Banquet To Be Held Nov. 14 By Sigma Kappa

The sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Sigma Kappa Sorority will be celebrated at a banquet on November 14 at the Highlands. Members of the collegiate chapter at George Washington University and the Alumnae Association will take part in the program, which has been arranged by Mrs. Edwin B. Lawless, jr., chairman. The toastmistress will be Mrs. De Witt Bennett.

Founded in 1874 by the first five women who entered Colby College, Waterville, Me., the sorority now has 45 college chapters and 58 alumnae organizations with a total membership of over 10,000.

Of the five founders, one is still living—Miss Louise Helen Coburn, of Skowhegan, Me., whose sister, the late Mrs. George Otis Smith, former grand president of the sorority, was a resident of Washington for many years. Miss Coburn is a trustee of Colby College and is well known as a poet.

Rev. Gilkeson's Rites Are Held At Winchester

Veteran Mission Head To Be Buried Today In Augusta

By the Associated Press

Winchester, Va., Oct. 31 Ministers of the Winchester Presbytery conducted funeral services this afternoon for the Rev. Dr. Charles D. Gilkeson, of the Southern Presbyterian Church, who died from a heart attack yesterday at the age of 77.

Intermit will be at Tinkling Springs, Augusta County, at 11 a. m. Wednesday.

Dr. Kilkeson retired two years ago as superintendent of the Home Missions of the Winchester Presbytery because of ill health. He had filled the office for 20 years.

Previously, he had served pastorates in Beverley, Norfolk, Richlands and Moorefield, W. Va.

His widow, Mrs. Margaret Leyburn Gilkeson, of Winchester, and a son, Charles L. Gilkeson, of New York, survive.

Howard Jones

Winchester, Va., Oct. 31.—Funeral services for Howard Jones, Winchester businessman, were conducted at the residence here this afternoon. Mr. Jones, who died after a major operation, was prominently identified with Braddock Street Methodist Church; was a member of the Rouss Fire Company and of the Woodmen Lodge.

William R. Bodine

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 31.—Services will be held tomorrow morning at the Episcopal Church in Hedgesville for William Richard Bodine, 70, former member of the city council of Hedgesville, this county, active in the Episcopal church there. Surviving is the widow, formerly Miss Jeanette Drenner, at the home.

William P. Gleason

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31.—Funeral rites for William P. Gleason, 59, former merchant and city constable, who died yesterday at his home, were held this afternoon at the residence of his brother, H. Cooper Gleason. He married Miss Beulah E. Burgess, who survives, with six children—William A. Gleason, of Hollywood, Calif.; John A. Gleason, of Long Beach, Calif.; Kenneth W., James E., Louis M. and Robert M. Gleason, all residents of Charlottesville.

Samuel L. Cloud

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 31.—Services will be held at Winchester Avenue Church here tomorrow afternoon for Samuel L. Cloud, 37, a prominent baseball figure here, who died Sunday at his home. He was manager of the Blair Limestone Company baseball team, had been associated with amateur teams for some years and for a part of one season was a catcher with the Martinsburg club of the old Blue Ridge League. Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Mildred Mitchell, to whom he was married in February; one daughter by a former marriage, Doris, this city.

Mrs. George F. Glascock

Upperville, Va., Oct. 31.—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Mrs. George F. Glascock, 87, who died Saturday, her birthday, at the home of her son, Waugh Glascock, on the Llangollen estate, near Upperville. Two sons survive, Waugh, at Upperville, and Hoffman Glascock, of Boston.

J. Bailey Buckner

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31.—J. Bailey Buckner, 85-year-old retired engineer, died yesterday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs Marshall B. Baker, near the university, after an extended illness.

He married Miss Laura Pannill, who survives. Besides his daughter, he also leaves two sisters, Mrs. W. George Brown and Miss Loulie C. Buckner, both residents of Orange County. The funeral will be held Wednesday morning from the residence.

P.E.O. Luncheon Tomorrow

The monthly reciprocity luncheon of the P. E. O. Sisterhood will be held at Woodward and Lothrop tearoom tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. Chapter C will be hostess and in the absence of the president, Mrs. Jason Waterman, the vice president, Mrs. Mary Carroll Greathouse, will preside. Reservations are in charge of Mrs. Greathouse, 2023 R street. All unaffiliated P. E. O.'s are invited.

Art Fair

Students Put Works on Sale

Elizabeth Ogilby, of Chevy Chase, Md., with her painting, "Sunflower Motif," painted on burlap

It may be traditional, if not fashionable, for budding artists to starve in garrets, but an exhibition opening tomorrow at the Corcoran Gallery of Art indicates that at least a few of them like to eat.

One hundred and eighteen oils, watercolors, drawings, sculptures, and ceramics, all by alumni of the Corcoran Art School, will go on display. At a press preview yesterday, Principal Richard Lahey expressed confidence that many of the art works will find buyers at prices ranging from $5 to $50.

There is a wide variety of subjects—landscapes, portraits, still lifes, Washington scenes, and whatnot. The artists themselves run the gamut from rich men's daughters to ambitious youths who worked in delicatessens and carried newspapers to finance their training.

Many exhibited in the Corcoran's first alumni show last year but a good number are going before the public for the first time. One of the latter is petite Catherine Vagnoni. Her entry is "Pears and Apples."

"I was a nuisance to the family while working on it," she confessed. "The fruit sat on the diningroom table and for many, many meals my parents and six brothers and sisters had to eat in the kitchen."

Aida Prencipe, who is an expert fencer as well as a promising artist, climbed to the roof of her apartment house, got a good view of St. Matthew's Church and did a pen and ink drawing. She thinks it is timely, since St. Matthew's has now become a cathedral, with the creation of a Washington archdiocese.

Elizabeth Ogilby's "Sunflower Motif" is an unique entry, because it is the only oil painting in the show done on burlap.

"It certainly drank up a lot of paint," she laughed.

Gustav Trois, who had three oils, a watercolor and an etching chosen for exhibition, has worked at almost every sort of job to pay for his art lessons. He earned a fair piece of change when the King and Queen were here in June, turning out a rush job of a painting—ordered by a Western newspaper—depicting an artist's conception of the White House reception.

The Corcoran alumni sales exhibition will continue through November 23.

Montgomery Bus Service Alters Today

Passengers to Halt At District Line to Proceed Downtown By Streetcars

Through bus service between downtown Washington, Bethesda, Rockville, Gaithersburg and Washington Grove, Md., will be discontinued this morning by the Capital Transit Co., Dean J. Locke, chief engineer of the transit company, announced yesterday.

Buses from Maryland will halt at the District Line, where passengers will transfer to street cars for downtown. The new schedule of fares approved by the Maryland public service commission become effective today. The new rates provide slight decreases in areas near the District Line, but increases for most points beyond Bethesda.

Eugene B. Van Veen, of Bethesda, has filed a protest with the Interstate Commerce Commission claiming that the commission has the right to halt abandonment of the through service.

Meanwhile, the Rockville Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups were pushing negotiations with the Blue Ridge bus lines for through service by buses of the company, which operates from Pennsylvania and farther points in Maryland. The bus company announced ten days ago that it might add several buses if the transit company abandoned through service, but no further commitment has been made.

Wider Underpass Wins Approval

Silver Spring's No. 1 traffic menace moved another step toward correction yesterday when the Montgomery County commissioners approved a plan for widening of the Georgia avenue underpass.

The plan, sponsored by the Silver Spring Business Men't Association and local civic groups, provides for six traffic lanes divided by a parkway. The widening will be confined to the western side of the existing underpass, with disturbing the grade of the present intersection of Georgia avenue, Sligo avenue and Philadelphia avenue just north of the underpass.

Estimated cost of the widening, which is to be financed from Federal grade crossing elimination funds of the State roads commission, is $400,000.

Letter Sent to Whitman

A letter announcing the choice of the commissioners was sent yesterday to Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the Maryland State roads commission, who recently announced that his commission was awaiting recommendation from the county board before proceeding with the proposed widening.

The present viaduct, planned for combined street car and vehicular traffic, presents a bottleneck on Georgia avenue and has the added menace of iron uprights, which have caused many accidents. Bus traffic must veer from the eastern side to go through the double lane on the western side thus facing oncoming traffic. Nearly every heavy rain floods the underpass and necessitates rerouting of traffic.

2 Bandits Take $4,000 From Virginia Bank

Third Waits in Auto At Stuart's Draft; Flee to Mountains

By the Associated Press

Stuart's Draft, Va., Oct. 31.—Two men entered the Bank of Stuart's Draft this afternoon, locked two employes in a vault, and escaped with currency estimated by Cashier W. A. Duffy to be between $4,000 and $5,000.

A third man waited outside in an automobile. The trio fled toward the mountainous country to the West, State Trooper A. R. Bryant reported.

The two men entered the bank through a back door, the trooper said, and locked the cashier and another bank employe named Shelton in the vault.

The bank employes were released from the vault by J. A. Weaver, who entered sometime later. The bank was held up at about 2:40 p. m.

State tropers were ordered to surround the area. An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Richmond was ordered here.

Two Badly Hurt In Highway Crash Near Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Oct. 31.—Two men hovered near death at the Washington County Hospital as a result of an automobile collision early today on the National highway 14 miles west of here. If either should die it will break a three months' record of no fatalities from motor vehicle accidents in Washington County.

The injured men are Harry and James Miller, both of Hagerstown, whose conditions were reported critical. Mrs. Julia Miller sustained less serious injuries.

The automobile in which the Millers were traveling crashed into the rear of the truck owned by A. S. Van Dyke, Rising Sun, Md., and driven by his son, Glenn.

Motor Vehicle Commissioner W. Lee Elginfi spending the week-end at his home here, had remarked yesterday that Washington County had until midnight tonight to establish a no-fatal-accident record for three months.

Court Summons Face Va. Autoists Sans Safety Tags

Richmond, Vt., Oct. 31 (AP).—Virginia motorists who are unable to display tomorrow the new semi-annual inspection stickers will be subject to court summons, the division of motor vehicles pointed uot today.

Bradford Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Arlie Bradford, 25, who died at Garfield Hospital Monday, will be held from the Dranesville Methodist Church today at 2:30 p. m. The Rev. W. Boyd Bryant, pastor, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Chestnut Grove Cemetery, Herndon, Va.

Surviving are a husband, Howard G. Bradford; one son, Howard, jr.; a daughter, Eulane; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Poole; one sister, Jeane Poole, and one brother, James Poole, of Dranesville.

Md. Guardsmen To Train for Week At Camp Ritchie

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Oct. 31.—The 1,300 troops of the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard, have been ordered to report to Camp Ritchie, Cascade, Md., the week of November 12 for seven days of field training, Brig. Gen. D. John Markey, commanding officer of the regiment, announced at his headquarters here today.

Plans to hold the camp a week earlier were abandoned yesterday, Gen. Markey said, because of a shortage of trucks and absence of bids for supplies to be furnished the camp. The new encampment is in addition to the two weeks spent last summer in maneuvers at Manassas, Va.

Gen. Markey said guardsmen will live in their respective mess halls instead of tents which are considered impractical for this season. Each unit has been completely equipped with new overcoats, leggings and three blankets per man.

Units from the eastern shore and Cumberland will be moved to the camp by train and the others will go by bus and truck. The First Regiment includes all units in Maryland outside Baltimore City.

Chest Drive Opens Today In Fairfax

Reports Indicate Goal of $13,650 Will Be Reached

The Fairfax County Community Chest drive opens today, to continue through November 13, Director Proctor announced yesterday.

Advance reports indicate this year's drive, the first undertaken separately from the Washington campaign, will reach its goal of 113,650.

Proctor said that he has received a letter from Coleman Jennings, president of the Washington Chest, saying "no attempt will be made by solicitors in Washington to persuade donors to give the entire amount of their 1940 contribution to one community, to the exclusion of another."

The first report rally will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, in the Falls Church Baptist Church.

Herndon P.-T. A. Adopts Budget

The Herdon Parent-Teacher Association has adopted a budget of $350 for the year. Of this amount, $30 will go to the library for books, $25 for Christian education, $7.80 for chairs and tables for the home economic cottage. Others items are a telephone in the school, 3,750 towels and 10 gallons of soap, landscaping the grounds, equipment for a new kitchen, a drinking fountain and wash basin.

The president, Mrs. Frnak Wickers, has appointed Mrs. Ethel Ramey Mongel, Mrs. Richard Mahoney, Mrs. Richard Mahoney, Mrs. J. Updike and Mrs. J. H. Younger as a committee in charge of kitchen; Mrs. D. I. Detwiler and Mrs. Tullus Fleming, membership drive; Mrs. Ernest Gib? son, Mrs. Bentley Harrison, Mrs. F. W. Robinson and Mrs. J. H. Rice, music.

The association voted to sponsor the National Youth Association survey, with the following members assisting a representative from Blacksburg, Va.: Mrs. Frank Wickers, Mrs. Mack Crippen, Mrs. Mark Turner, Miss Edith Rogers and Mrs. John Middleton.

St. Michael's P-TA Hear Discussion On Adolescents

Problems of school children during the adolescent age were discussed by the Rev. Ferdinand Gruen, of the education department of Catholic University of America, at the October meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association of St. Michael's Parochial School.

Mrs. Matt A. Doetsch announced the annual benefit dinner for the school will be held November 8 and 9 from 5 until 8 p. m. in the school auditorium, Montgomery avenue. Mrs. Edgar Gans is co-chairman with Mrs. Doetsch.

Parents at the meeting suggested that the association launch a movement for the transportation of school children in the county school busses. Parochial school children are not elligible for the busses.

The Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, pastor of St. Michael's Church, asked the parents to sign a petition favoring the establishment of a building in the rear of the Silver Spring Armory to house the community's public library.

Sadd to Address Takoma Chamber

Victor Sadd, manager of the Washington field office of the Social Security Board will address the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce today at a meeting at 8 p. m. at Nick's restaurant, Carroll avenue.

There will be a buffet supper after the session. Plans will be completed for the annual fall dinner dance November 13 at the Manor Country Club, Sorbeck, Md., when Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland will speak.

Firemen to Nominate

Nomination of officers and members of the board of directors will feature a meeting of Arlington County fire company No. 1 at the firehouse, South England street, tonight at 8.

1,000 Baptists To Convene In Alexandria

Virginia Association To Open 116th Annual Convention Nov. 13

The First Baptist Church of Alexandria will be host to the 116th annual convention of the Baptist General Association of Virginia November 13, when 1,000 church members will arrive for a four-day session. A program for the convention is now being arranged under the direction of Dr. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor.

The convention sessions will be led by Dr. F. W. Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond, also president of the State association. Other officers are Dr. F. W. Putney, Newport News, vice president; the Rev. E. D. Poe, Roanoke, vice president; the Rev. E. T. Clark, Winchester, recording secretary; the Rev. J. S. Bosher, Richmond, statistical secretary; the Rev. K. E. Burke, Norfolk, assistant recording secretary; Frank T. Crump, Richmond, treasurer, and Jess F. Wood, Richmond, auditor.

Dr. Ellis has appointed these committee chairmen to assist in making plans for the program: Mrs. M. F. Barrett, registration; Mrs. C. N. Amos, information; W. C. Cunningham, transportation; M. P. Pitts, entertainment; B. G. Edwards, ushers; Mrs. Paul Finks, nursery, and Mrs. T. R. Fones, luncheon.

Several churches in the northern Virginia area are cooperating with the host church in convention plans. Among those to be represented on the general committees are Temple and Del Ray, of Alexandria; Mount Vernon, of Arlington County, and Beulah and Woodlawn, of Fairfax County.

Chest Clinics To Open Today

The monthly chest clinics of the Alexandria Tuberculosis Association will be held today and tomorrow at the city health office from 3 until 5 p. m. Examinations today will be conducted for white persons. Colored applicants will be examined tomorrow.

The association is completing plans for its annual seal sale campaign, under the direction of Mrs. John M. Cook, general chairman. These subcommittee heads have been appointed for the 1939 drive: Mrs. C. C. Leadbeater, booths; Mrs. R. E. McGahey, publicity; Mrs. Charles Biondi, schools; Mrs. M. E. Burchell, bond sales, and Mrs. F. T. Cain, early orders.

The seals will be placed in the mails on December 1, but Alexandria merchants will be given an opportunity to obtain their supplies earlier, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Doris Tompkins, secretary of the association.

Alexandria Shriners To Fete Ladies

Approximately 125 Alexandria Shrine Club members and guests will attend the annual ladies' night program of the club tomorrow at the George Mason Hotel at 7:30. A dinner, dance and floor show will comprise entertainment.

Harry H. Newton is general chairman of the committee, which includes Roger C. Sullivan, Earle Sullivan, Riley W. Nixon, S. Tufton Dove, Jack Tulloch and Leonard J. Miller.

Frank Gould Heads Telephone Association

Staunton, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Frank A. Gould, of Harrisonburg, was elected President today of the Virginia Independent Telephone Association at the organization's annual convention.

Board members included F. T. Prufer, retiring president, Staunton; Charles C. Ward, Charlottesville, and Dr. George B. Cooke, of Manassas.

Montgomery Completes Reassessing

Hearings to Begin Nov. 13 on New Rural Section Realty Evaluations

Completion of the general reassessment of real estate in rural election distrcts was reported to the Montgomery County commissioners yesterday. Wilton T. Allen, supervisor of assessments, said S. M. Hamilton, chief clerk of the reassessment force, said. Districts 1, 2, 3, 10, 11 and 12 had been completed and were ready for hearings.

The commissioners directed public hearngs on the new assessments be held, beginning November 13, at the commissioner's hearing room in the courthouse at Rockville, Md. Property owners are to be sent notices at least ten days in advance.

Hearings were ordered as follows: November 13, second or Clarksburg district, 10 a. m. to noon; eleventh or Barnesville district, 2 to 4 p. m. November 16, third or Poolesville district, 10 a. m. to noon; tenth or Potomac district, 2 to 4 p. m. November 20, first or Laytonsville district, 10 a. m. to noon; twelfth or Damascus district, 2 to 4 p. m.

Police Examinations Asked

B. Peyton Whalen, police civil service commissioner, recommended mental examinations for the police force eligible list to be held December 15. Application blanks may be obtained from Commissioner Whalen or from any police substation next week. Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, recommended physical requirements for the prospective policemen be patterned after those of the Baltimore police department.

William C. Westlake, scoutmaster, asked if a projected Boy Scout cabin in Martin's second addition to Chevy Chase, Md., would violate zoning regulations and whether it would be subject to taxes. The zoning question was referred to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the tax question to Simpson & Simpson, attorneys to the commissioners.

The Liquor Control Board reported net profits of $23,337.92 for the quarter ended September 30, an increase of $6,421.07 as compared to the 1938 quarter.

Dog Tag Designs Offered

The commissioners approved designs for new dog tags after Commissioner Walter Johnson had been asked to state his preference since he is a dog fancier. The new tags are to go on sale January 1 and must be obtained before April 1.

The commissioners rezoned lots 14 and 15, block 3, of J. H. Cissel's addition to Silver Spring, at Thayer and Sligo avenues from residential to commercial.

It was announced that J. Oland Harvey and Francis O. Day, formerly State roads supervisors, had been transferred to the county pay roll on a per diem basis.

Art Exhibit Opens At Laurel Today

The third annual art exhibit sponsored by the Woman's Club of Laurel, Md., will be held today from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., at the Elementary School. There will be no admission charge.

The 360 entries include oil paintings, water colors; pen, crayon and charcoal sketches; photographs; chairs and stools upholstered with needlepoint, crochet work, rugs, afghans, table cloths, luncheon sets, samplers, embroidered pictures, dresses, etc.

Crippled Clinic Set for Tomorrow

Gambler's Clock, Alexandria's 68-Year-Old-Timer, to Be Fixed

Barritt Arrives to Begin Face-Lifting On Historic Markers

"Gambler's Clock," Alexandria's 68-year-old time-chimer, is undergoing a thorough beauty treatment and renovation this week, the first in more than 30 years.

John Willard Barritt, Charlottesville clockmaker, who two years ago started Jefferson's famous clock at Monticello ticking again after a long silence, arrived in Alexandria yesterday to begin the face-lifting and rejuvenation process.

To the passerby the venerable city hall timepiece appears unchanged, but its mellow chimes are missing, for the mechanism has already been removed to Charlottesville.

The overhauling, to cost approximately $300, was decided upon by City Manager Carl Budwesky after citizens complained that the clock was getting prankish of late, running too fast, or too slow, and sometimes not at all.

The ticker, installed when the City Hall was restored in 1871 after having been burned by Union troops in the Civil War, has had a commendable record for accuracy and consistency. There are residents in Alexandria, however, who still remember when the huge timepiece went on a spree, ringing out 118 chimes. There have been occasions, too, when the mercury dropped to near-freezing levels and the mechanism stopped in protest.

There seems to be no agreement as to how the clock happened to be placed in the belfry when the City Hall was restored. According to Charles Davis, veteran City Hall caretaker, the chimer is called the "Gambler's Clock" because it was purchased with fines assessed on gamblers. But Commissioner of Revenue Charles H. Callahan, an authority on Alexandria's early history, asserts that the clock was the gift of an Alexandria citizen.

"Gamblers Clock"

The timepiece will be out of service for approximately three weeks. Besides general repairs, the project calls for reburnishing the dials and a scouring of the face.

Trailer Executive Kills Self In Old Rock Spring Church

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 31.—In old Rock Spring Church alongside the cemetery where members of the Hanway family lie buried, a man identified by State police as William C. Hanway, Detroit corporation executive, was found shot to death today.

Dr. J. H. Ramsey, Harford County medical examiner, said he had committed suicide. A new shotgun was found beside the body. Police said the man had aimed the weapon at his chest and pressed the trigger with a bit of stick.

Charles J. Michael of Bel Air, whose wife is Hanway's cousin, corroborated the State police identification, but said neither he nor his wife knew their relative had come to Harford County.

In Detroit, officials of the Freuhauf Trailer Co., said Hanway resigned yesterday as treasurer of the firm and left the city, leaving no word as to his destination. He had been ill for some time and recently underwent an operation.

In Washington, D. C., Mrs. Hector McCallister, Hanway's sister, said she supposed he was in Chicago or Detroit traveling for his firm.

A colored sexton of the church told Sheriff Walter Bennington he saw a new automobile with Michigan license tags drive into the church yard late in the afternoon. Shortly afterwards, noting the car still there, he investigated and discovered the body in the rear of the building.

Mrs. Michael said the man left no note. Neither she or other relatives could give any reason for his suicide.

Late Music Opposed in Nearby Town

Colmar Manor Group Wants Tunes Banned After Midnight in Restaurants, Stands

Complaints of too much night life in Colmar Manor, Md., will be presented at a hearing tonight on a proposed ordinance to stop music in restaurants and barbecue stands after midnight.

The ordinance was drawn after residents had protested to Mayor John N. Torvestad and the town council against loud music.

The only restrictions at present are imposed by the State, prohibiting the sale of liquor after midnight and beer after 2 a. m. The proposed ordinance could not change these regulations. Proponents of the measure say it could require patrons to do their drinking without music.

The ordinance would apply to coin music boxes as well as dance orchestras.

The hearing will start in the town hall at 7:30.

Spirit of Halloween Is Alive in 'Cat and Canary'

Spooky Film Play Is Full of 'Ha'nts'; Playwrights' Company Donates to Relief; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT SHOULD have been the Halloween booking.

What I mean is that "The Cat and the Canary," what with its spooky, "old dark house" in the Louisiana bayous, its secret panels, mysterious hidden tunnels, blinking family oil portraits, murder, attempted mayhems and all, seems to have been made to order to aggravate the cold shivers and gooseflesh that form so important a part of every observance of All Saints Eve. Perhaps the fact that the rains came and last night's outdoor activities were canceled will adjust the whole thing to everybody's satisfaction.

BELL

At any rate, "The Cat and the Canary" is a pretty elegant dose of hair-raising mystery, as it has been picturized by Paramount with a cast that is nicely adapted to this sort of eerie business. With the exception of Elizabeth Patterson, George Zucco, John Wray and a few others of lesser importance in the working out of an eccentric old codger's last will and testament, likenesses of the principals in the serio-comic goings-on appear on this page today—or should. It was the consensus of the sensitive souls who attended yesterday afternoon's preview that, individually and collectively, they did the fantastic tale ample justice.

Bob Hope lends a new note to this quivering brand of charade by wise-cracking his way through the role of a brave young man who is practically scared stiff. Paulette Goddard, opposite, in the character of chief heir—provided she doesn't go crazy before she can get her hands on all that coin and the fabulous family necklace—is both decorative and, in the more stressful moments, appropriately delirious. "The Cat" is a homicidal genius whose alliance with "Miss Lou" and the evil spirits that haunt the house are not at all what you think they are.

"The Cat and the Canary" is a screen item that might reasonably be relied upon to curl the bangs and freeze the veins under any circumstances, but on an actual Halloween night it would have been what is colloquially referred to as the nerts. But as I say, in view of the Jupiter Pluvian postponement, there may be enough of the Halloween spirit left over to knock the customers right out of their chairs when "The Cat" opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow.

A first-aid suggestion would be that you lug along the smelling salts.

That makes two. In a brief chat between the acts of "Leave It To Me," at the National Theater Monday night, Claire Trevor, making a flying, one-day tour of Washington, joined Ann Rutherford, last week's visitor, in enthusiasm over the fascinations of the National Capital to one who never has been here before. Like Miss Rutherford, Miss Trevor vowed that the first real vacation she gets from the arduous labors of climbing the cinema's ladder to stardom will be spent in this city, getting something approaching full comprehension of the things she only glimpsed during a frantic 24 hours. Her immediate concern, of course, is "Allegheny Uprising" in which there is slight doubt she will be found to have matched the sterling performance she gave in "Stage Coach." In the new picture she again is featured with John Wayne. The screen, incidentally, does not do Miss Trevor justice. Set off by a black gown and a cascade of silver fox furs, her blonde beauty hit Monday night's lobby crowds smack in both eyes. It will be nice if she keeps her promise and comes back sometime to stay long enough to catch her breath.

Speaking of "Leave It to Me," as everyone will be this week if the best musical comedy in years retains any power to inspire cackling conversation, an important role in the Spewack-Cole Porter masquerade is played by Edward H. Robins. The tried and true of the theater will recall Mr. Robins as a former leading man of the old Columbia Players, probably the most popular stock company in the annals of the Washington theater. He will be recalled, too, as one of the leading members of the cast with Frances Starr and the late Joseph Kilgour in the David Belasco production of "The Easiest Way." It was Mr. Robins, if memory serves Manager Eddie Plohn of the National and me, who didn't have a key to the apartment when Mr. Kilgour did. That was the genesis of that heart-rending wail with which Miss Starr brought down the final curtain.

But the point is that Mr. Robins pays no tribute to the passing of time. Except that his fine thatch of hair has done a Paul McNutt, he hasn't changed a minute.

If you can do with a little more of the same, Madeleine Cameron, who in private life is Mrs. William Gaxton, co-star with Victor Moore and Sophie Tucker in "Leave It to Me," will steal a march on the rest of Washington by previewing Greta Garbo's latest picture, "Ninotchka," with a party of friends tomorrow afternoon as guests of Rudy Berger, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. And please don't ask me for passes! (That goes for "Leave It to Me," as well—the National is selling out and my printing press has burned out a bearing.)

The producing group of the Washington Civic Theater will entertain itself and its friends tomorrow night at a party in the new headquarters at 918 Fourteenth street. The entertainment committee promises that there will be no speeches. It is just a party for old members, new members and prospective members who may care to see for themselves what the new combination office and studio really is like as a spawning place of new Civic productions. The revelry is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock; closing hour when the last guest has left—if he ever leaves!

The American Friends' Service Committee, acting as an agency for Polish relief, will be the beneficiary of the Armistice Night performances of the three productions of the Playwrights' Company, playing at various points on tour on that date. The entire profits from the performance of Paul Muni in "Key Largo," in Buffalo; Katharine Cornell in "No Time for Comedy," in Chicago, and Raymond Massey in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," in Philadelphia, on Saturday night, November 11, will be made available to relief agents in Poland.

PRINCIPALS IN "THE CAT AND THE CANARY"

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 31 (INS).—The acting plum of the year, Katharine Hepburn's role in "A Bill of Divorcement," goes to Maureen O'Hara, Charles Laughton's protege. In the opinion of those who have seen her in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," she has a good chance of being Hollywood's top 1940 actress. Her history is interesting. Discovered by Laughton and Erich Pommer, she made her debut in "Jamaica Inn" and so well did Laughton think of her, that he brought her to R. K. O. for "The Hunchback." Just before Maureen left for America she was secretly married to George Moore, who, I understand, is writing her frantic letters hoping that he may either join her or that she can come back to England.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The new "Bill of Divorcement" has an interesting case. Adolphe Menjou plays John Barrymore's role of the father, with Fay Bainter as the mother. John Farrow will direct. This is his first "A" picture and it is also Bob Sisk's biggest assignment as a producer. If it does for O'Hara what it did for Katy Hepburn, there will be not stopping the little Irisher.

Elisabeth Bergner sails Saturday from London with her entire company to open in New York in Sir James Barrie's play, "The Boy David," in the role she created. As we said, John Stein and Rowland Leigh bought the American rights but when two months went by without word of Freddie Bartholomew, whom they wanted to play David, they relinquished their option. Miss Bergner will be seen in the Biblical character in a fantasy in which David fights Goliath. If it is a hit, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will buy it for Mickey Rooney. Some way it takes a great stretch of the imagination to see Monsieur Rooney as the spiritual David.

Snapshots of Hollywood, collected at random: Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond have leased the Malibu House where once Lilyan Tashman hostessed so many parties; Bob Taylor returns from Mexico tomorrow and Barbara Stanwyck couldn't be happier; Lana Turner won't be able to keep that date with Dan Topping unless her mother gets better. She was reported very sick today; Patric Knowles is taking out his first citizenship papers and plans to bring up his son and heir as a 100 per cent American; Mickey Rooney is the newest member of the Lakeside Golf Club; Binnie Barnes rented her house to Alice Faye and Tony Martin because she expected to make a picture in New York; now the movie will be made here and Binnie is homeless.

Helen Morgan stopped en route with her troupe from San Francisco to Texas and made merry at the It Cafe, singing torch songs; who was the unknown beauty with Cesar Romeo at the Cafe LaMaze last night; Charlie Winninger played all the musical instruments at the LaMaze last eve and gave the paying customers a swell evening; Dolores Del Rio

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

". . . and I don't think you should go out, if you've got laryngitis . . . Well, how'll you get any news, if you can't ask questions? . . . What dear? You still can hear? . . . Well, let's see—I want a fur coat . . . I said I want a fur coat . . . I said I want a fur coat . . . Stop shaking your head. I was only testing your hearing.

12 P. M.: "The next big shake-up in Washington," a Federal official assures at Moore's, "will be in the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The changes will happen shortly" . . . "I just came from the fair in a taxicab," Elaine Barrie confides at the Tavern. "The hackie let me drive the cab all the way. For once I had my revenge—skirting pillars and squeezing between cars, just the way cab drivers always have driven me" . . . "Broderick Crawford flew to Hollywood for retakes in the movie, 'City for Sale,'" a producer informs at Sardi's. "He had laryngitis—and so they put nitrate of silver in his throat, cured the laryngitis—but, as a result, Brod is back in N. Y. now and will submit to a major operation to remove the cyst which grew there."

1 A. M.: Burgess Meredith is introduced to Ed Reilly, the lawyer, at El Morocco. "By the way," Meredith asks Reilly, "whatever became of Bruno Hauptmann?" . . . "I saw Henry Ford in Detroit regarding the Edison movie," Spencer Tracy tells Norma Shearer. "He has one employee who worked for Edison—and who gave me one of the skull-caps Edison used to wear" . . . "Van Heflin disrupted Katharine Hepburn's performance last week," a member of the cast relates at the Rainbow Room. "Van wears a tie Katharine doesn't like. He wore it in the first act. In the second act another actor wore it and in the last act a third actor wore that same tie" . . .

2 A. M.: "Jim Preston, of the National Archives, who went to Hollywood as technical adviser for 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington,' had trouble with an English actor," a producer reports at the Cotton Club. "The actor complained about the language in the Declaration of Independence. 'When that was written,' Preston told him, 'we cared as little about the King's English as we cared about the English King'" . . . "I cabled my children in London to go to our country place in Sussex, where it's safer," the Ranee of Sadawak declares at Leon & Eddie's. "So look at their reply—they'll remain in London until they see their first air raid" . . . "Simone Simon would like to talk to you Wednesday night," John Gunther is told at the Stork. "Wednesday night?" Gunther repeats. "Tell Simone Simon I can't make it—because I have a date with Nicholas Murray Butler."

3 A. M.: "Eddie Cantor saw the President last week-end," a director reports at Mon Paris. "He visited the White House to submit a slogan for the Warm Springs drive next year. The slogan is 'Let's Not Be Neutral—In Our Fight Against Paralysis.' Later Eddie posed for photos with Speaker Bankhead. Cantor held the gavel while Bankhead popped his eyes. 'Say, you're a good actor,' Eddie told the Speaker of the House—who answered: 'Of course. Where in hell do you think Tallulah gets her talent?'" . . . "Col. Lindbergh has learned one bitter lesson," an editor states at the Game Cock Cafe. "His son now attends a public school in Long Island and is brought there in a school bus. It's safer that way" . . . "Well, I'm on my way back to Miami," announces Mother Kelly, whose N. Y. cafe venture flopped. "Here's my baggage—just toothpaste; no brush."

4 A. M.: "A clothier mentioned in Elizabeth Hawes' 'Men Can Take It' brought suit because she mentioned 'racket,'" an attorney reports at the Village Barn. "She offered to settle by placing an explanatory ad in Men's Wear. The clothier wanted it in the New Yorker, but finally agreed to Men's Wear. So Miss Hawes switched, put the ad in the current New Yorker—but placed a mourning box around it" . . .

5 A. M.: "Don't look now," Frankie Hyers tells Leo Durocher at the 18 Club, "but your wife's stolen home, quietly" . . . "If she stole home," the Brooklyn manager replies, "I can use her on my ball club" . . . "My orchestra," Hal Kemp informs at La Conga, "will play at the Atlanta premiere of 'Gone With the Wind.'"

6 A. M.: ". . . and your nephew phoned. He wants you to get him back to Scotland to complete his studies . . . What dear? . . . Of course. I told him that if three years of study abroad hasn't as yet taught him that America's the place for him, there's no use of his continuing. Okay?"

Play Water Polo

Ray Milland, star of "Untamed," and Fred McMurray, who plays the leading role in "Remember the Night," have become water polo addicts. With a group of neighboring actors they engage in the aquatic sport on nearly every week-end in MacMurray's big pool.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 31.

Last time I flew in from New York I chatted with one of their crack pilots. He was full of woe. Among other things he told me about the troubles he'd had with Hollywood actresses who threw fits because their pet pooches weren't permitted to sleep with them during a night flight. Not long ago Lupe Velez tore her ticket to bits, and stamped out of the office because her tiny Mexican Chihuahua was ordered to the baggage department. She raised such a fuss they finally gave in; heck, the dog only weighs 1½ pounds, anyway. Then along came Connie Bennettt with her French poodle. She declared he was 14 inches long, so they said: "Ok, he can stay in your berth." But to their horror they discovered he was 40 inches long! Marion Davies tucks her pet dachshund, Gandhi, into a muff, and nobody even knows he's in the plane. The reason for all the fuss, so the pilot explained, is that dogs are far more susceptible to air sickness than humans, to say nothing of the the fact that once a dog bit a pilot and he got rabies!

But the most interesting incident was when Hazel Hurst, the blind girl with the seeing-eye dog, was given permission to have her dog accompany her on a flight. She had to go to the ladies' room, but her companion wouldn't leave her for even a moment. So she placed her purse on her seat, and said: "Now—guard this!" And the dog never moved an inch until courageous Hazel Hurst returned to her seat.

At the Warner ranch, with the "Fighting 69th:" "Hey, you dead man," Director William Keighley shouts, "Get back in your hole!" . . . While Spencer Tracy stands by enviously watching Pat O'Brien do Father Duffy. Spencer nisists he doesn't want to do any more priest roles for fear of being typed . . . On the same set Harry Warner was greeting the press gang. He was standing in line with a tray just like all the other fighters for a hot supper on a shivering night while brother Jack and wife were listening to the applause of the New York blue bookers (what's left of them) at a party where the Bette Davis picture, "Elizabeth and Essex," was shown. Some of these dressed to the teeth and splittting their white gloves were the Duff-Coopers from England, the Hal Talbets, Harbert Bayard Swope, the Barclay Douglas, jrs., the John Schiffs and Mrs. Bryan Foy, that Miss Chrysler fashion plate, Peter Arno, sitting next to Brenda Frazier, with Freddie Lonsdale saying "It couldn't have been better if I'd written it myself." . . . But I'm rambling. We're supposed to be sightseeing behind the gates of the studios and I'm in New York already. Let's get back . . . On the "Dr. Ehrlich" set a special prop boy follows Ed Robinson around dropping cigar ashes on the floor, ink blots on papers—doing everything possible to make things look untidy—for history shows that Dr. Ehrlich was a very untidy genius. I thought Paul Muni had returned to town—you won't recognize Robinson. I didn't .

Hit Revival Tops Incoming Theater Bills

'Outward Bound,' With Star Cast, at National; Other New Programs

RKO-Keith's

"FIRST LOVE." Deanna Durbin's latest film will have its world premiere this morning at RKO-Keith's Theater. As its title indicates, this film will present the young singer in her first romantic screen role. It is the sixth of the Durbin pictures and its cast includes Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy, Lewis Howard, Marcia May Jones, June Storey and Charles Coleman. Also on the Keith screen will be the latest issue of the "March of Time," "Uncle Sam—The Farmer," which discusses the livelihood of 32 million Americans.

Palace

"HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE." Filmland looks back at its early days through the eye of Technicolor. Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Al Jolson are the stars, and Mack Sennett bathing beauties, Keystone Cops, custard-pie comedies and other institutions of early Hollywood form the background for this film panorama. Featured in the cast are J. Edward Bromberg, Alan Curtis, Stuart Erwin, Jed Prouty, Buster Keaton, Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Donald Meek, George Givot and Eddie Collins, under the direction of Irving Cummings. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE ROARING TWENTIES." The turbulent day of the flapper, the speakeasy and mob rule form the setting for this story by Mark Hellinger, which costars James Cagney and Priscilla Lane, with Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George, Frank McHugh and Jeffrey Lynn. Three headliners cavort in the Earle's stage revue: Jack Haley, most recently seen as the Tin Woodman in "The Wizard of Oz," Mary Carlisle, a partner of Bing Crosby in many of his musicals, and Jack Teagarden and his orchestra. Other entertainers will include Howard Nichols, Roberts and Martin and Tiny Ann and Tony Small. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY." Clownish Bob Hope stars in this Paramount adaptation of the stage thriller in a cast that includes Paulette Goddard, John Beal, Douglass Montgomery, Gale Sondergaard, Nydia Westman, Elizabeth Patterson, George Zucco and John Wray. Shrieks of laughter and terror in an old, dark house are inspired by this attraction. Jackie Heller, the diminutive but dynamic tenor, headlines the Capitol's stage revue, in which Jack Cole's Ballet Intime, from New York's Rainbow Room, is another leading attraction. The Four Franks and the Twenty Rythm Rockets complete the list of stage performers. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"U-BOAT 29." This timely film of a German submarine squad in the English North Sea will continue through tomorrow evening. Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson and Sebastian Shaw are in the cast. An as yet unannounced attraction will open on Friday morning.

Columbia

"THE RAINS CAME." After a two-week engagement at the Palace, this adaptation of the Louis Bromfield novel returns to F street. Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Maria Ouspenskaya, Nigel Bruce, Joseph Schildkraut, Mary Nash and Henry Travers head the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"THIS MAN IS NEWS." This English mystery comedy shares the screen with "The City," an American documentary film on housing. Valerie Hobson and Barry K. Barnes head the all-British company in the feature, while the accompanying film is devoted to a statement of the urban problem in America, with scenes from the nearby Greenbelt experiment. Opens this morning.

Trans-Lux

"THE BATTLE FLEETS OF ENGLAND." The "March of Time's" timely subject on British war precautions is the central short subject at the newsreel theater for the coming week. "Good Skates," a sports short on ice skating, and a Donald Duck comedy are the other supporting features. Opens Friday morning.

"TOO HOT FOR PARIS." Valerie Parks, a national burlesque favorite, stars in the new production opening Sunday afternoon. Al Schenck is making his burlesque debut as the leading comedian of the revue and with him in the comedy contingent are Billy Ainsley, Murray Briscoe, Ed DeVelde and John Ensley. Jean Caton, Jean Carter and Reggie Du Van are the leading feminine principals. The second amateur contest will be held at this Saturday's midnight performance.

Atlas

GAYE DIXON, a swing songstress whose air following is a growing one, headlines the incoming vaudeville bill at the Atlas Theater. The Novelle Brothers, film funsters; Sally Joy and Bobo and Leon Brusiloff's orchestra are the other acts. "Golden Boy" and "Lady of the Tropics" form the twin film features. Opens Sunday afternoon.

Civil War Winer

The Civil War type of locomotive seen in "The Runaway" hauled a modern electric locomotive to its roundhouse when the 1939 machine broke down.

Arriving Friday

MARY CARLISLE, who, with Jack Haley and Jack Teagarden's Orchestra, will illuminate the three-star stage bill, opening at the Earle Theater on Friday of this week

Dancer Drops Identity in Climb to Top

Margarita Cansino, as Rita Hayworth, Has Own Success Rules

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Oct. 31.—Let's consider today the case of Miss Margarita Cansino—and we'll bet you a dollar right now you think you never heard of her. Think hard.

Four years ago, in any event, the 17-year-old Miss Cansino was the pretty half of the team of Cansino and Cansino, the ballroom dancers who made the movie moguls sit up and take notice at Agua Caliente.

Caliente then was perhaps the gayest and most luxurious gambling palace on the North American continent. It had a horse race track, a roulette room, an elaborate dining hall and genuine Scotch whisky, with which the West Coast Al Capones hadn't tampered.

It also had Cansino and Cansino, the dancers who made the customers' blood tingle. A movie producer, Winfield Sheehan, asked Miss Cansino if she'd like to go to Hollywood and be a movie actress. He said her dancing would give the movies something they'd never had before.

Yes—With Proviso

Miss Cansino said she'd like Hollywood, all right, but there was one small promise she'd have to exact.

She would do her best as an actress, but she said she would stay in Mexico before she would dance a single step before the cameras. This floored Sheehan, but Miss Cansino was a mighty pretty girl. He said all right and she came north.

She changed her name, and the first thing she knew she was leading lady to the late Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan in Egypt." That typed her. She was the girl with horror on her face in such items as "Meet Nero Wolf," "Criminals of the Air," "The Game That Killed" and many others. She switched her allegiance to Columbia Studios and appeared in dozens more of the same.

A few months back she appeared in "Angels Have Wings." She was the beauty Cary Grant doused with a bucket of water. If you haven't guessed who she is, her screen name is Rita Hayworth.

Changes Her Mind

She is the star currently to the Joseph Santley picture, "Passport to Happiness." It's a grade A production, with Tony Martin doing the singing and Alan Mowbray providing the fun. In it Miss Hayworth is doing what she said she wouldn't.

She's dancing the rhumba, exactly as she did before the Mexican government confiscated the Agua Caliente Casino and turned it into a schoolhouse. Nobody ever has done the rhumba as Miss Hayworth does it. Her dancing is graduating her from the "B's," it appears, and all we can say is that it's about time.

Miss Hayworth, whose mother was Irish and whose father came from Seville, was awarded the title the other day of "Hollywood's best dressed woman." We asked her about the method she used to obtain this distinction.

All she did, she said, was to spend most of her money for clothes. She figured fancy dresses were the best investment a girl could make while she was on the way up. Apparently, she was right.

She buys two new wardrobes every year, one for summer, the other for winter, and gives the old ones away. She hasn't any dresses with bustles or wasp waists. She said she liked severe lines.

'Leave It to Me' Makes a Hit At National

"LEAVE IT TO ME. Vinton Freedley presents William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Sophie Tucker in the musical comedy in two acts and 14 scenes, by Bella and Samuel Spewack, with music and lyrics by Cole Porter. Staged by Samuel Spewack; dances and ensembles by Robert Alton. Settings by Albert Johnson; costumes designed by Raoul Pene du Bois. At the National Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell

It seems just a little futile to write a review of "Leave It to Me." Any Washington appraisal of the Vinton Freedley production of the musical comedy by Bella and Samuel Spewack, with tunes and lyrics by that inimitable jingler, Cole Porter, necessarily must sound like an echo of the encomiums that were heaped upon this smash hit during its season's run as one of Broadway's hyper-super-ultra exhibits of last year. A titillated, roaring, cheering, capacity audience in the National Theater last night gave ample evidence that the Capital knew what it was getting when it snapped up the last piece of pasteboard in the house. It got it.

"Leave It to Me" is the well-nigh perfect combination of comedy, melody, beauty, speed and excitement that comes along only occasionally in the life of any theater enthusiast. It relates a coherent and utterly ridiculous fable of a shrinking little man from Topeka, Kans., who is given the portfolio of Ambassador to Russia and would rather be dogcatcher at home. A conniving young high-pressure American newspaper man, with a wisp of romance on his mind, seeks to render first aid to Alonzo P. Goodhue by dreaming up Machiavellian violations of the diplomatic code, any one of which should be more than enough to cause the Ambassador's recall by an irate and outraged government. Each perversely serves only to increase Ambassador Goodhue's high standing among his associates in Moscow and with the State Department at home. Kicking the German Ambassador in the belly at their first formal meeting is widely applauded. An attempted "winging" of a Russian subject by carefully rehearsed pistol fire, miscarries and makes a hero of the homesick emissary, when his bullet kills the fanatic bent on assassinating the Commissar. And that is the way it goes. It goes that way, that is, until the perfectly sane "Goodhue Plan" for a United States of Europe is promulgated. That recalls him in the twinkling of an eye!

Pulls No Punches

All this, needless to say, affords fine fodder for biting political satire. The prolific and versatile Spewacks have fed it into their script in allopathic doses, many of their most telling jibes mentioning by name dignitaries of the Government who occupied down-front orchestra chairs last evening. Leavening this purely topical aspect of the story are the romantic adventures and misadventures of Mr. Buckley Joyce Thomas, the high-voltage correspondent, and the ambitious schemes of Mrs. Goodhue and her five graduated daughters and Les Girls, her dancers who are "taking the steps to Russia." Give all this a heavy coating of Cole Porter's sprightly songs and peppery lyrics and you really have something—something that tickles the funny-bone, taps the toes and whips up the pulse.

This is the sort of merry business that suits William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Sophie Tucker right down to the ground and performs the same happy service for those out front. The electric Mr. Gaxton has never pulsated more effectively to the inspiration of faultless lines, lyrics and songs, nor has Victor Moore ever been more deliciously droll than in the character of Vice President Throttlebottom transferred to the diplomatic corps. Miss Tucker, as Mrs. Goodhue, completes a stellar triumvirate that is ne plus ultra, e pluribus unum and all-around swell.

Is All in Fun

They are bulwarked in everything they do by a singing and dancing cast and ensemble that maintains the swift pace they set. Christina Lind is a facile and pleasantly vocal blonde foil for Mr. Gaxton's flirtatious enterprises and Mildred Fenton is a more than adequate successor to the role created by Mary Martin and made famous by the song, "My Heart Belong, to Daddy," illuminated by the celebrated Arctic travesty on the "strip-tease" facet of revelatory art.

The songs scattered through the two acts and 14 scenes you already know. What you do not know is how infinitely better they are in their proper setting than coming over the loudspeaker. Claire Trevor, visiting Hollywood star, was among last evening's boxholders who found out. It is something distinctly worth discovering for yourself—if you can beg, borrow or steal a ticket.

Experts Name Judith Barrett Telegenic Girl

Hollywood's first "Telegenic Girl" was brought out of the laboratory and into the spotlight recently.

She is Judith Barrett, pretty and blonde film actress, and the appellation stands for near perfection as a subject for television.

Selected after months of exhaustive tests by television experts, sound engineers, photographers and make-up specialists, Miss Barrett becomes Paramount Studio's television test girl and will figure prominently in future experiments as the company proceeds with its announced plan of being the first motion picture company in the television field.

As the first step in advancing the "Telegenic Girl" with the medium of the future, the studio is featuring the actress in a television picture titled "Television Spy," which deals with the greatest problem facing engineers today, that of televising over great distances.

In connection with the selection of Miss Barrett, Loren Ryder, director of recording said: "Our major task is providing television entertainment using motion picture talent. In the preliminary television experiments close-ups will be used." Ryder pointed out that vocal and visual charm of an intimate nature would be the qualifications for the television star of tomorrow.

Maxwell Smith, one of the country's foremost television engineers and manufacturers, unhesitatingly qualified Miss Barrett as absolutely "telegenic" after tests had been completed.

Afterthought

Adding $50,000 to the budget after the picture had supposedly been finished, Paramount sent a location expedition to Texas to film a new and more spectacular ending for "Geronimo," story of the Indian wars, featuring Preston Foster, Ellen Drew and Andy Devine.

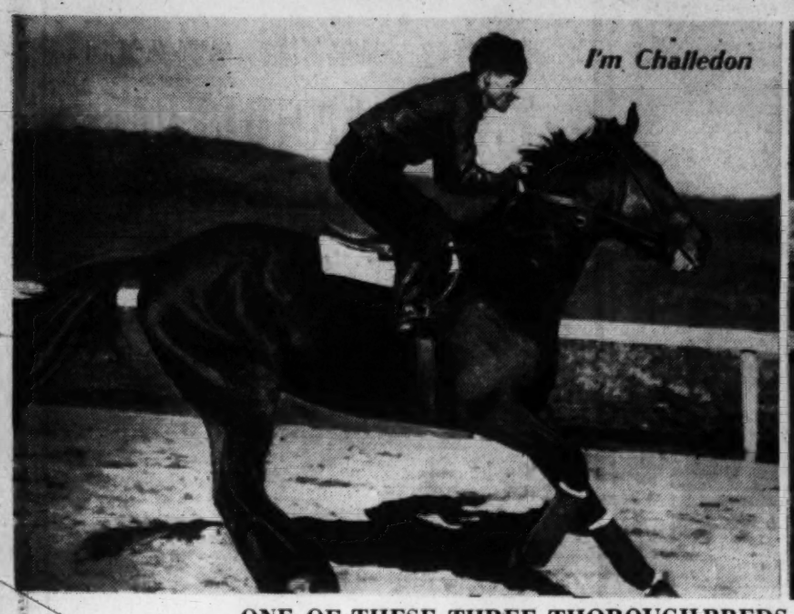
Challedon Still Favored in Pimlico Special Today



ONE OF THESE THREE THOROUGHBREDS WILL BE CROWNED "HORSE OF THE YEAR" TODAY AT FINISH OF PIMLICO'S $10,000 SPECIAL Associated Press Photos.

Brann Star Draws No. 2 Post Position For $10,000 Winner-Take-All Event; Three of Original Field of 7 to Start

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 31.—W. L. Brann's mighty Challedon drew No. 2 post position in tomorrow's Pimlico Special, but backers of the son of Challenger II and Laura Gal will bet that he isn't in the middle at the finish. When the three stars break at 3:15 p. m., it will be Cravat on the rail, Kayak II on the outside and Challedon between his rivals.

Tonight the ghosts of Tom Ochiltree, Survivor, Cloverbrook, Duke of Magenta and other Preakness winners emerged from the cobwebs under the ancient stands to shag and Susie-Q with the Halloween goblins while Challedon, Kayak II and Cravat slept in their heavily guarded stalls, but regardless of their assignments, come tomorrow, it is probably dollars to doughnuts that their dreams were of knee-high grass and red apples and not mutuel tickets or cashiers' windows.

Challedon Favored

The majority of experts and turf regulars contend the finish will be Challedon, Kayak II and Cravat.

The rains came. But rain or snow, wind or blow, horses go at Pimlico.

At least, the Maryland Jockey Club has made it plain that the show must go on and, regardless of weather conditions, probably a 25,000 to 30,000 throng will see the three-way battle for more glory than gold, although $10,000, on a winner-take-all basis is not exactly hay.

The three aces, survivors of the original seven invited to the Pimlico Special, today made their last appearance on the track until they start to parade toward Starter Milton at the top of the stretch, where begins Pimlico's famous mile and three-sixteenths course.

Cravat, owned by Townsend B. Martin, of Westbury, N. Y., turned in the nearest approach to a workout. With Jockey Basil James, who will ride him tomorrow, Carvat ran along with Brown Moth and was clocked in 0:24 1-5 for the quarter, 0:36 2-5 for three-eights and 0:50 for a half.

Challedon Koes Half in 0:52.

Challedon, owned by W. L. Brann, of Glade Valley Farm, Frederick, Md., came o nthe muddy oval with Jockey Eddie Arcaro in the saddle. The Bran Bombshell was out for the feel of the track and to give Arcaro a change to get used to him. The boy breezed the 3-year-old champion a half in :52.

Kyak II, owned by Charles S. Howard, of San Francisco, Calif., galloped once around. Held in check, he fought for his head, but the boy's heavy grip siad, "No, big boy! Wait until tomorrow!"

As it should have been, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, president of the Marylnad Jockey Club and the young man who developed the "Special" idea, drew the pills for the post position of the three rivals as the trainers stood by to see that there wa sa good shake.

Carries 120 Pounds

Under the rules, at weight for age, Challedon carries 120 pounds to 126 each for Cravat and Kayak II, older horses. This fact has drawn many backers to Challedon, who are not affected by the "Challedon, My Challedon," and "Maryland, My Maryland" angles.

The concensus of pricemakers puts Challedon in the favorite brakets at 4 to 5, with Kayak II held at 8 to 5 and Cravat the nearest thing to a long shot that the limited field allows, at odds of 7 to 2. As already announced, there will be only straight or win betting on the Special.

This is the third running of the Pimlico Special, which began in 937 when Vanderbilt and his associates sought a suitable race for

Derby Purse To Be Shared First Time

Part of $75,000 Added Will Go to Breeders, Trainers; Race May 4

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 31 (AP).—Breeders and trainers, for the first time in a stake race in this country, will share in the $75,000 purse for the 1940 Kentucky Derby to be run May 4.

Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf Association, controlling Churchill Downs Track, in announcing division of the $75,000 added, an increase of $25,000 over 1939, said today that breeders and trainers had not shared in purses in the United States except futurities.

Division of Purse

The $75,000 purse next year, the colonel said, will be divided:

$53,500 plus nomination and post fees, plus a $5,000 Gold Cup, for the owner of the winning horse.

$8,000, an increase of $2,000 over other years, for the second horse.

$3,000, third horse, and $1,000 for the fourth horse, as in 1939.

$3,000 for the trainer of the winning horse, $2,000 for the trainer of the second and $1,000 to the trainer of the third horse.

$2,000 for the breeder of the winner, $1,000 for breeder of the second and $500 to the breeder of third horse.

Matter of Speculation

"It is a matter for speculation as to just how much money will go to the owner of the Derby winner in 1940," the colonel added. "It costs $25 to nominate a horse. There is no other fee until Derby day, when it costs $500 to start. Taking a line on the nominating and starting fields for the past 15 years it is reasonable to assume that there will be at least 140 entries and about 18 starters.

"Based on this, the nominating money will be $3,500, the starting money $9,000, which, added to the 53,500 donated by the Downs would mean $66,000 cash for the winner, plus the $5,000 gold cup.

"With the second horse getting $8,000, third 3,000, and fourth 1,000, and with 6,000 for successful trainers and $3,500 for the successful breeders, that would make the 1940 Derby worth $87,500 and a 5,000 gold cup."

Bobby Brownell Honored at Duke

Bobby Brownell, top-ranking amateur golfer of the District, was elected to membership in Tombs, honorary athletic fraternity at Duke University. Brownell is a junior, and was one of 46 athletes named to the fraternity yesterday.

Brownell was a member of Duke's undefeated Southern Conference golf champions, and he went through the schedule without a defeat. He is a member of the Manor Club.

Vols' Lead Shortened In A.P. Poll

Michigan, Cornell Lessen Tennessee's Advantage; Schedule Weaknesses Blamed

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 31.—The field is starting to close in on Tennessee's powerhouse in the fight for the Nation's football honors, and apparently it's the schedule-maker's fault.

Maj. Neyland.

Although the Vols received 67 of the 128 first-place votes cast in the Associated Press' third weekly poll of the season, and compiled a total of 1,120 points, to lead the pack, they had no such overwhelming majority as put them on top a week ago.

Both Michigan, which climbed into second place, and Cornell, whose victory over Ohio State boosted it from seventh to third, were a lot closer to the Vols than the rupper-up and "show" teams of last week. Tennessee, like the rest of the top five outfits in the poll, is undefeated, but the Vols have played only one major game in their five outings—whipping Alabama.

Wolverines 115 Behind

Michigan, receiving 20 first place votes and a total of 1,005 points, has four straight victories to its credit, and Cornell, with 18 first-place selections and 933 points, has rolled over Syracuse, Princeton, Penn State and Ohio State. Notre Dame, which has won five in a row, two by one-point margins, dropped from second to fourth in the latest rankings, with 858 points, followed by the last of the "unbeatens," Texas A. and M., with 714 points.

The rest of the top ten is made up of five unbeaten but tied outfits—

Tom Harmon Hurt In Michigan Drill

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 31 (AP).—Coach Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler overhauled Michigan's pass defense today in preparation for the the Western conference game with Illinois. Crisler said he expected the Illini to take to the air for their major gains in the contest Saturday at Champaign.

Tom Harmon, sensational junior halfback, gave the coaching staff some anxious moments when he twisted his ankle by stepping in a hole during signal drill. Trainer Ray Roberts said he did not believe the injury would keep the crack back on the sidelines. A week ago Harmon turned the ankle in a similar workout.

BILL BENNINGS SAYS: Mud at Pimlico Points To Kayak II Victory

SELECTIONS, MUDDY TRACK

1. Kayak by Two
2. Cravat by 1½
3. Challedon

Tell the truth, it looks like "Mutiny on the Typewriter" for me, a Challedon rooter from way back, to be placing the 3-year-old champion in last position, but a close study of the off-track performances of the three horses brings me to the conclusion that the son of Challenger II will bring up the rear if the track is muddy or heavy.

Under either of those conditions, I expect Kayak II to lead every step of the way, with Cravat closing fast to overtake Challedon, if he doesn't make it hot for Kayak II.

First, let me explain why Challedon's chances will be slim in the mud. In this year's Preakness on an off track, Challedon was straight as a string to defeat Volitant by four lengths. Considering that this effort was the best of each horse, we check back on Volitant and find that in the mud in the 1938 Walden Stakes he lost by a head to Inscoelda.

In another mud race, the 1938 Spalding Lowe Jenkins, Volitant was "all out" to win by half a length from Tin Devil, now a $1,500 plater. Challedon cannot take much mud prestige from beating Volitant.

Logic Continues

More recently, in the Thornton Memorial Handicap at Narragansett Park, Challedon took a length and a half beating from Porter's Mite. In this event, Challedon was unable to keep up and when put to a drive could not gain ground on Porter's Mite. The track condition was heavy.

It is rather difficult to explain away Challedon's mud viotory in the Havre de Grace Handicap last September, for in this event, Porter's Mite was behind the Brann ace. However, Porter's Mite was beginning the slip that forced him on the shelf, while Challedon was at his best and there was not a Kayak II or a Cravat, for that matter, in the field.

The only direct chance for a handicap pivot on the mud ability of Challedon and Cravat comes from Fighting Fox. In the 1938 Preakness, run in the mud, Cravat finished second to Dauber and 14

SELECTIONS FOR FAST TRACK

1. Challedon by 1½
2. Kayak II by 5
3. Cravat

If the track is fast for the Special I believe the folks up in Challedon's native Frederick can light the bonfires early. It will be a "hot time in the old town tonight" because Challedon should take down the chief dough and the main reason he figures on top is the weight-for-age provisions of the race which allow him to march postward with 120 pounds to 126 for Kayak II.

On a strict handicap basis, Kayak II figures about 3 pounds better than Challedon at even weights. With a 6-pound shift, this leaves Challedon 3 pounds the best for this race.

It is possible to get a better line on the three Special horses on a fast track than in mud. Between Challedon and Kayak II we can use Hash as a pivot. In the recent Keeneland Park appearance of the two, Challedon won by four lengths from Hash when the Brann star definitely was driving at the finish. The world record he set proves that. In this race Challedon was carrying 120 pounds to Hash's 116.

Kayak Beat Hash

At Jamaica, later in the month, Kayak II met Hash and in this race the South American star defeated Hash by a length. Observers say that Kayak II was not ridden out. Kayak II carried 128 pounds to 118 pounds for Hash.

The Narragansett Special allows for a direct comparison of Challedon and Kayak II. In this event Challedon was the winner, under a drive, by three lengths with a 10-pound shift in his favor. With the difference in poundage cut to 6 in the Special, the figures still point to Challedon to lead his rival to the wire.

Again, through the use of Hash, we can get a line on Cravat's fast track ability. However, it is necessary to figure him on his two races with Isolater. Cravat and Isolater have met twice. On September 23 Cravat was second and Isolater was third behind Sorteado. In this race Cravat finished a head in front of Isolater. Cravat carried 120 pounds to Isolater's 118.

On October 7 Cravat defeated Isolater at 2 miles at equal weights.

Cravat Chance Slim

When it is considered that Hash defeated Isolater by 6½ lengths while getting only 3 pounds from his rival, the comparisons do not speak well for Cravat's fast-track chances.

Some track regulars are swinging to Kayak II as the fast-track horse due to the fact that George Woolf will ride the Howard horse. Woolf has been successful with both Kayak II and Challedon. However, by Woolf's own admission, Challedon is an easy horse to ride and Eddie Ar-

Whole Mack Team On 'Auction Block'

Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (AP).—Connie Mack, 76-year-old manager of the Athletics, said today his whole team—with the exception of Catcher Frankie Hayes and Outfielder Bob Johnson—is "on the auction block."

Preparing for the annual meeting of major and minor league owners at Cincinnati in December, Mack said that with the two exceptions "I will trade any player if we can gain young, enthusiastic players who, though not necessarily stars, possess a bright future."

Redskins Get Anti-Fumble Drill in Rain

Wet Weather Gives Flaherty Chance to Improve Faulty Handling of Ball

Thankful for the day-long rain, Coach Ray Flaherty assembled his Redskins at Griffith Stadium for a long workout yesterday in an attempt to improve his club's handlin of a wet ball.

RESET FOR REDSKINS S MAIL—Davie O'Brien

It was the Redskins' damaging fumbles with a slippery ball that that preciptated their defeat at Milwaukee Sunday, and Flaherty welcomed the opportunity to practice in the rain yesterday on the possibility of wet weather Sunday, when the Philadelphia Eagles invade Griffith Stadium.

The Redskins are anticipating no set-up in the Eagles despite the lowly position of the Philadelphia club in the league standings. In a lecture to the team last night, Flaherty reminded his athletes that they barely defeated the Eagles, 7-to-0, in the season's opener, thanks to a long pass from Sammy Baugh to Charley Malone.

Air Defense Accented

The keynote of the Redskins' practice continues to be pass defense. Green Bay passes figured in all three touchdowns scored against the Redskins at Milwaukee, and the Eagles will be presenting a dangerous aerial threat in Davey O'Brien.

Little O'Brien has been no startling success in the professional league, but he has been no op, either, and the Redskins have a wholesome respect for his throwing arm. They have a respect, too, for O'Brien's tragets, chiey the veteran ends Joe Carter and Bill Hewitt.

Jimmy German, sensational rookie back of the Redskins who was withheld from the Packer game on account of the wet field which minimized his ability as a ground-gaining threat, is destined to see much action if the field is dry on Sunday.

Baugh Fully Recovered

Sammy Baugh revealed in the Packer game that he has recovered from his knee injury. Baugh will play at least one-half of the game, Flaherty has indicated. He will operate in a backfield that will comprise, besides himself, Andy Farkas, Ernie Pinckert and Jimmy Johnston.

Empire Trainers Are Penalized

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 31 (AP).—The stewards gave out two rulings with penalties for trainers here this afternoon.

Trainer J. Hastie was suspended and his case referred to the stewards of the jockey club, for failure to properly register the ownership of the horses racing in his charge. The further entry of all horses in his care is denied.

Trainer W. E. Coburn was fined $25 for not having Shoeless Joe in the paddock on time for the fifth race of Monday. Shoeless Joe won the event.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 31.—In the same spirit that any self-respecting kid of the community would accept a double dare, a hoss race will be staged here tomorrow. It's the Pimlico Special and the principals are a rich automobile agency owner from California, a retired advertising executive from Indiana, a socialite investment banker from New York, and their steeds.

POVICH

They aren't racing for the money that's in it. The $10,000 the Pimlico track is posting for the race is a paltry sum as far as purse money for big stakes go. The gentlemen who are racing their horses may spend that much getting their steeds in shape for the race. Mr. C. S. Howard, Mr. William L. Brann and Mr. Townsend B. Martin are declaring a moratorium on the crass commercialism of horse racing for the day.

Boiled down, the facts are that Mr. Brann, the Indianan who owns Challedon; Mr. Howard, the Californian who owns Kayak II, and Mr. Martin, owner of Cravat, each believes he has the best horse and is willing to try to prove it. The $10,000 is scarcely a consideration. They'd probably be willing to race for a ham sandwich.

Bettors Can't Hedge, Either

It's winner take all, you know. There isn't any second money or third money. They're all going for the jackpot at the end of the mile and three-sixteenths. They're turning back the clock to the days when people raced their horses for the satisfaction of producing a winner.

The Pimlico track people are encouraging that sort of racing. Tomorrow, the wagering aspect will be no consideration of the track operators. A cheap field with more horses would produce a larger betting total with larger profits for the tarck, but the day is being given over to deciding the best horse in America. The wagering on the Special tomorrow will lose the slot-machine aspect of the ordinary betting race. Only win tickets will be sold. The public, too, must go for the jack-pot. It can't hedge with place or show bets.

And the public apparently likes that sort of racing. Last year it responded to a sporting gesture when the owners of War Admiral and Seabiscuit agreed to a match race in the Special. Pimlico scheduled that race for a Tuesday when any selfish operator of a horse track would have booked it for a Saturday to lure the biggest crowd. But 40,000 fans piled into Pimlico on a Tuesday to see the race.

Horses With Personalities

It's a swell race because it brings together horses with personalities—Challedon, the Maryland-bred which came along to burst the Johnstown bubble; Kayak II, the invader from Argentina which won the $100,000 Santa Anita, and Cravat, the game plodder whom race track folk fancy and like because he is the kind that "can run all night" and is never to be discounted in any race.

Two minutes and a couple of seconds after the starter's flag falls, the Horse of the Year will flash across the finish line as the winner tomorrow, and its trainer will be richer by $1,500. Pimlico thinks the trainer of a great horse should be rewarded as well as the owner and is tossing in that extra grand and a half. And for his permanent possession the winning owner will have the Maryland Jockey Club's Gold Cup, a $2,500 sample of the workmanship of Cartier's.

Pimlico is loftily idealistic about this race. They honestly regard breeding and racing as an integral part of the Maryland agricultural scene and the improvement of the breed is a serious affair with them. The race track, they maintain, is the laboratory of the breeding farms and only in a race can the results of their painstaking breeding be satisfatorily shown.

That is one of the reasons why the race is scheduled for the respectable distance of a mile and three-sixteenths. Breeders secretly are ashamed of the sprinters they breed, are satisfied only when they produce a horse that can win at more than a mile in good company. They'll tell you there is too much sprint racing in this country and that they deplore the tendency to run short races, get them over with and start another one for the sake of a quick turnover in the mutuels. Not counting 2-year-old races at 4 and 5 furlongs, the average distance of races run in America is only 7½ furlongs.

Weight-for-Age Is Proven Theory

They want those horses that can win at a mile and a quarter and a mile and three-sixteenths or more. It's axiomatic that sprinters beget sprinters and routers beget routers. The horse that wins tomorrow's Special won't sire any mere sprinter. He'll produce something that will bring glory to his name over a distance of ground.

He may not need it, but Challedon is getting a 6-pound weight concession from Kayak II and Cravat tomorrow, because he's a 3-year-old and his rivals are four. Challedon will carry 120 pounds to the others' 126. That is a handicap not haphazardly arrived at, if we may be permitted to almost end a sentence with a preposition and in so doing split an infinitive. The scale of weights for age is a theory borne out in hundreds of years of racing. Older horses are nominally 6 pounds better than 3-year-olds. And if a 2-year-old were in tomorrow's race he would carry only 100 pounds by that proven system of handicaps.

But the salient feature of this race is that Pimlico has not been forced to bribe these horses or their owners to enter. They didn't put up a staggering purse. They simply put it on a basis of three gentleman owning three great horses and would they like to run a race? It's bound to do horse racing a heap of good.

Reserves Keep Cornell Unbeaten

Coach Snavely Says Everyone on Team 'Likes to Block'

By the Associated Press

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The train carrying Cornell's big Red footballers back from their upset victory over Ohio State last Saturday was speeding across New York State, heading for home, and a celebration was in progress.

Off in a corner, a little away from the noise, sat one of the linemen, forgotten by the fans, but well remembered by the fellows for whom he opened holes all afternoon. The lineman was thinking. "We," he suddenly philosophized, "are just a bunch of guys named Joe."

And, oddly enough, there, in words of one syllable, you have the reason everyone around Cornell's campus is giving for the gridiron comeback of the big Red—for the fact that after four tough games Carl Snavely's young men of Ithaca are undefeated, untied, and, at the moment, unchallenged for Eastern football honors.

Snavely, naturally, explained it somewhat differently, but it all amounted to the same thing. There are no outstanding stars, or it may be every one on the club is a star.

"Why," Snavely pointed out today, "all the fellows even like to block."

CARL SNAVELY

One Player Explains, We're All Just a Bunch Of Fellows Named Joe

This is like saying your little boy likes to give all his candy to the kid next door and never have any itself.

"For the first time, too," Snavely went on, "we have substitutes we can take a chance on. And if a substitute doesn't do his job, we put in a third stringer right quick.

Long runs have been the rule just about every Saturday for this team. Pretty nearly each week it's someone different going off on those touchdown gallops. In one game it's Whit Baker; in another it's Hal Mccullough, and last week, another rabbit popped out of the hat when unheralded Walt Scholl, a little fellow who has a lot of trouble making 160 pounds, got well into Ohio State's hair.

"Yes, sir," Snavely said, "we've been lucky enough to get off a couple of long runs for touchdowns in each game. You see, with the fellows liking to block, once they get a play started the runner is able to pick up interference. That helps."

Terp-Washington and Lee 'Thanksgiving' Game Canceled

President's Order Brings Cancellation

'Turkey Day' Date Shift Leads Officials To Call Off Baltimore Contest Until 1940

The University of Maryland's football relations with Washington and Lee University yesterday halted temporarily at the 13-game mark as it was announced that this year's annual game, scheduled for Baltimore, had come a cropper over President Roosevelt's proclamation changing the date of Thanksgiving.

Announcement of cancellation of this year's game came from Washington and Lee authorities in Lexington, as agreed upon by athletic officials of both schools immediately after the collegiate gridiron "hysteria" which followed the Thanksgiving date change had subsided.

Although 1939 becomes the first year since 1929 that football relations have been interrupted, athletic officials have brighter hopes for 1940.

Play Again in 1940

"It is definitely under stood that Washington and Lee and Maryland are to play in Baltimore next Thanksgiving," Richard A. Smith, W. and L. director of athletics, said.

A similar note of optimism was sounded by Gary Eppley, Maryland's athletic director.

Nevertheless, he admitted that the date agreed upon by the two schools for the 1940 Thanksgiving game is the last Thursday in November.

It was the same way this year—the two teams were to meet November 30, the last Thursday in the month, in Baltimore. But when the President's proclamation moved the date up to November 23, near chaos resulted because Maryland already had a game scheduled with Syracuse November 25. Washington and Lee had a game November 18 and did not want to wait until December 2 for the Maryland affair.

W. and L. Makes Decision

"Maryland very kindly consented to allow Washington and Lee to make the decision whether the game should be played this year, and our committee felt that in view of the fact that we would be unable to get a game November 25 they did not feel it would be proper to prolong our season to December 2 in order to keep the Maryland game on this year's schedule," Smith said.

"I can't imagine conditions like this existing next year," Epply said at College Park. "It seems that the people of the United States are big enough to get together on at least one date. Maybe the congress of Governors will get together and suggest a date to the President and halt confusion caused by some States observing one date, while others celebrate another."

Cancellation of the game between the two schools, which have been playing every year since 1924—with exception of an interruption in 1929—means W. and L. will end their season against William and Mary at Williamsburg November 18, and that Maryland's game with Syracuse will close the season at College Park.

V. M. I. Preps For Richmond

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lexington, Va., Oct. 31.—Three sophomore backs who performed gallantly in V. M. I.'s losing battle against Columbia last week, will join Capt. Paul Shu in the starting line-up against Richmond Saturday.

[illegible]n" Pritchard, the 160-pound Hopewell speedster, whose 95-yard scoring return of a punt highlighted last week's game, will be at quarterback. Nelson Catlett and Jimmy Matthews, Hampton lads, will be the halfbacks, and Shu, who is at home in any backfield berth, will be at fullback.

At some time during the crucial Southern Conference and Big Six game with the Spiders, Coach Allison (Pooley) Hubert is likely to call another versatile Cadet back. Frank Carney, a junior from Churchland, is a triple threat like the members of the starting backfield. He did everything well at Baker Field though not matching the brilliance of Shu and Pritchard.

Billy Walker, 185-pound guard from Richmond, and Bill Nugent, 172-pound end from Petersburg, are a pair of Sophomores who are due for starting jobs in the line. Veterans will fill the other slots—George Atkison, center; Ray Reutt, guard; Andy Nelson and Neil Brown, tackles, and Luther Sexton on the opposite wing from Nugent.

Omaha U. Players Ask 'Release' Of Coach Hartman

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 31 (AP).—President Rowland Haynes of Omaha University said today a group of football players have asked for the release of Coach Cecil "Sed" Hartman "in time for us to decide where we will enroll next semester."

The group charged, Haynes said, that Hartman has played men who were suffering from injuries, that he teaches an out-of-date system, that he manages the team "poorly" and that he shows favoritism.

Hartman said he had no statement to issue immediately.

Haynes asserted the players' requests for action before the semester's end would not be granted as the "charges are too important for any immediate decision and must be investigated."

Pro Grid Champions Play at Los Angeles

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The National Football League champions will compete in a special postseason game at Los Angeles yearly for the next five years, Carl L. Storck, league president announced today.

"The league has just consummated a five-year contract with a Los Angeles paper for the series," he said.

Lady Golfers Take Up Bowling—Din Ensues

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

That shrieking noise out Silver Spring way yesterday morning wasn't the fire siren atop the enginehouse. It merely heralded the first strike of the season in the Ladies Country Club Bowling League, 18 teams strong.

Just four days after they racked up their clubs following the heaviest competitive golf season in the city's history, more than 100 of the women golfers started play in their pin league at Hugh Arbaugh's Silver Spring pin plant, that will extend through April 11.

If you think the ladies are enthusiastic about their golf, you should see, and hear, them in action on the alleys. Ten out in a box is the sign for smiles all around, a spare causes general applause and a strike is comparable to inheriting a $1,000,000. The din is terrific.

President of the league is Mrs. K. S. Giles, the best southpaw golfer in this section, who uses the right arm method while bowling for Indian Spring No. 1. Mrs. A. C. Paul, of Congressional No. 1, started the circuit in 1937 with eight teams. Last year it expanded to a 12-team league and now this season they have 18 teams one of the six biggest bowling circuits in the city.

Trophy to Winners

Mrs. Paul worked with Manager Earle Stocking and Arbaugh in organizing the golfing women bowlers, and the latter donated a trophy known as the "Gertrude M. Paul" trophy that goes to tre winning team.

Best golfing bowler in the league is Mrs. George S. Ford, of Congressional, the District and national all-events champion in 1931, and a winner of many other pin titles. The best bowling golfer is Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the Middle Atlantic champion from Indian Spring.

The names of the 100-odd players and subs are familiar in the score of more tournaments of the District Women's Golf Association. Only a scattered few are not golfers, among them Mrs. Ford, who confines her links activities to an occasional round.

Other officers include Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, Manor captain of the inter-city golf team, as vice president, Mrs. W. H. Warren, Army and Navy, secretary-treasurer and Mrs. C. E. Slawson, official scorer.

Good golf and good bowling are synonomous, as proved by Indian Spring No. 1, which has won the team title each year, and whose same five players were on their

Terp Squad Sees Mistakes In Celluloid

Faces Double Dilemma In Penn State Saturday, Georgetown Next Week

Maryland's football men went to the movies again yesterday, but it wasn't to see Heddy LaMarr—they were there to see the mistakes they made in their 14-0 loss to Florida last week and to plot the downfall of Penn State, whom they play Saturday at State College, Pa.

The Terps face two dilemmas this week-end—getting by Penn State and holding out enough to give the powerful Georgetown University eleven trouble November 11 in Griffith Stadium.

Although they expect to be in better physical shape than they were for the Florida game, it is uncertain as to whether Merle DuVall, passing halfback, and the throwing arm of Pershing Mondorff, fullback, will be in shape to put Maryland's potent air attack back in working order by Saturday. George Lawrence, star guard who missed action last week, is expected to be back in form.

Coach Frank Dobson announced that Ralph Albarano, senior lineman from Lilly, Pa., will captain the team on the trip to State.

Pirates Buy 1st Minor League Club

Pittsburgh, Oct. 31 (AP).—President William E. Benswanger tonight announced the Pittsburgh Pirates—for the first time—had made an outright purchase of a minor league baseball club. It is the Western Association club at Hutchinson, Kans., which has had a working agreement with the Bucs for several years. Manager Jimmy Jordan will remain in charge. The price was not disclosed.

Turner Threatens Mat Opponents With Suspension

The idle habit of various performers to grind peanut hulls and such oddities into the eyes of their opponents brought Promoter Joe Turner up in arms to such a height yesterday that he threatened both sides of his headline bout tomorrow night in the W street arena with suspension if they indulge in said habits.

Jack Hader and The Golden Terror were the objects of Turner's ire. Hurling baleful glances at the two groan artists with the rapidity of a "tommy gun," Joe issued orders that screened attack on optics of opponents are hereafter outlawed. Hader was charged with rubbing wintergreen oil in Don Evans' eyes last week.

Alan Eustace and Hans Kampfer, Abie Coleman and Steve Bartes, John Katan and Ed Newman, and Louis Bacigalupi and Rudy Strongberg will provide supporting sound effects tomorrow.

Marty Gallagher To Box Monday

Marty Gallagher, "maturing" warrior of Foggy Bottom, will make his second local comeback appearance Monday night at Turner's Arena in a 10-round headline bout with Abe Simon, 240-pound New York heavy who holds the dubious distinction of a knockout victory over Al Hart, Washington Barracks colored fighter.

His battle cry that Irish fighters do not reach maturity until they are 30 years old held Marty in good stead last summer when he decisioned Jim Robinson in Griffith Stadium, but the New York battler will come to town a heavy favorite to tear down this theory.

Square Deal Meets

Square Deal Liquor Store football team will meet tonight at 8:30 at Third and North Carolina avenue southeast, in preparation for their game with Warrenton, Va., Sunday.

G. W. Plans Homecoming Celebration

Bonfire, Rally, Dance Augment Game With Clemson on Friday

George Washington University's homecoming this week-end will not start and stop with the gridiron clash with Clemson Friday night, it was indicated last night. The program will start tomorrow night and wind up Saturday with the annual homecoming ball.

First event in celebration of the return of Colonial alumni is the mammoth bonfire to be held on the university parking lot, Twenty-second and G streets northwest. Coach Bill Reinhart and members of the football squad will be introduced and Reinhart will deliver a short address.

Friday afternoon at 4:45 there will be a special football rally in the university yard. Formality of introducing team members will be handled by Freshman Coach Ray Hanken. A special homecoming feature of the between-halves celebration Friday night will be the skit, "Football in the Gay Nineties." This will be supplimented by a parade of Clemson's crack R. O. T. C. drill squad of 90 men. Last year's Queen of Homecoming, Eleanor Sherburne, will attend the grid game Friday along with the coed candidates for this year's honor.

Tickets have gone on sale at the G. W. football office, the A. A. A. and the Sports Center. Good grandstand and general admission seats are still available.

U. S. Court of Claims Clerk Puzzled by Clemson-G. W. Game

Graduate and Former Player at Both Schools, W. S. Hart Divides Loyalty

Willard S. Hart, clerk of the U. S. Court of Claims, will be in a quandry this week when George Washington University entertains Clemson at Griffith Stadium. And to further confuse matters, it's homecoming for G. W.

Hart is a graduate of both institutions and in fact played football for both teams. He graduated from Clemson in 1919, where he had played two seasons on the gridiron. Since there were no transfer rules in those days he played at G. W. also, when he matriculated here two years later. He received his L. L. B. from the G. W. Law School in 1926.

He is an active member of the alumni association of both schools and is a member of the homecoming committee at G. W., which is making plans for the celebration this week-end. He is also a member of the Clemson alumni committee here which is having its own celebration in connection with the game.

Hart is very tactful. He won't say whom he's supporting in this game.

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 31 (AP).—Paul Christman and Bill Cunningham, recovered from minor leg injuries, returned to duty on the University of Missouri's fist team in today's football parctice.

Army Holds Last Scrimmage Before Notre Dame Tilt

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 31 (AP).—Army held its last scrimmage before the Notre Dame game—a half-hour affair on the big field house—after a long workout on assignments today.

Coach Bill Wood covered all the plays that the Cadets may use against the Irish Saturday in the assignment drill, and not until they had run through their entire repertory to his satisfaction did he call for contact work.

There was no change in the lineup. Jim Dubuisson again running at wingback in place of Jere Maupin, kept on the sidelines by bruises. There is doubt whether Maupin will be able to play Saturday.

Seven Hold Tickets on $1,361.50 Daily Double at Laurel

Helen Gleason Wins Opener, Pays $254.10

Quatredom Captures Third Event; Maiden Steeplechase Won By Night Heron

By a Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 31.—Halloween night began this afternoon out here on the Washington boulevard. The 5,000 customers believed they saw a ghost in the first race when Helen Gleason, an obscure 2-year-old filly, took a notion to run with less than $100 bet on her. She paid a $254.10 mutuel to win, $152.70 to place and $67 to show.

Seven persons in the crowd held tickets on the daily double and they each carted away $1,361.50 for the usual deuce. Of course they had to wait until Quatredom, a daughter of the sire, Quatre Bras II, sold for $38,000 at the Audley Farm sale, won the third race.

In addition, the maiden steeplechase race proved a chart caller's dream. F. Ambrose Clark's Night Heron proved the winner and her margin was 100 lengths. Scurry Along had been setting the pace and was close to the winner, but lost rider at the fourteenth and final jump. With Scurry Along thus eliminated, Jaybeejay, about an eighth of a mile back, gained second money by default. Hygea was an equally lucky third.

Among the other long shots on the program was Sneaky Henry, racing in the colors of Mrs. John Hay Whitney and trained by Dion Kerr, former gentleman jockey and a Washingtonian. Sneaky Henry came out of the pack to defeat, among others, Dorothy Pomp and Seed. Sneaky Henry paid a juicy $68.60 mutuel.

The closest thing to a feature race on the closing day program was the fifth event. This proved a romp for the favorite players, Teddy Patic, owned and trained by Guy Bedwell, romped to the wire with speed to spare over Air Win and Light Chatter. The winner paid $4.80.

The month-long session here ended in the rain and with the track a sea of mud.

lengths ahead of Fighting Fox. This year, in the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk, Fighting Fox ran away from Challedon to win by six lengths in mud. In finishing a head in front of Menow in that Preakness, Cravat led a horse that later, in the Massachusetts Handicap of 1938, defeated War Admiral in mud.

It is more difficult to get a mud line on Kayak II than on his rivals. Then why do I put him on top? The only mud race available on the South American scene is a performance last year in which he was beaten a length by Sun Alexandria.

Due to having been foaled in the other hemisphere, Kayak II was a good six months younger than our 3-year-olds. Thus he was giving considerable in age to his rival. The race indicates that he favors the going and his general good form makes him a better pick than Cravat.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HELEN GLEASON, $254.10, $152.70, $67.00; GRANICUS, $5.10, $4.10; TINY TRICK, $20.50.

HELEN GLEASON, forced to front in opening furlong, drew clear of MADAM CAPET and held sway thereafter to win under drive. GRANICUS, forwardly placed from beginning, was hard ridden, but could not threaten winner seriously and was tiring at end. TINY TRICK saved ground from start and came with bold rush along rail approaching finish. MADAM CAPET broke alertly, but could not keep up.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:00. Off 2:01. Winner, F. A. Clark's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT HERON, $6.70, $5.20, $5.00; JAY BEE JAY, $9.20, $4.60; HYGEIA, $5.70.

NIGHT HERON, steadied along close to SCURRY ALONG'S pace, took command briefly after three-quarters of mile, made bad landing at tenth fence, recovered to retain lead and was far out when SCURRY ALONG lost rider. JAY BEE JAY showed nothing and was a tired second. HYGEIA was always outrun. AUTUMN QUEST was close up for turn of field and weakened after making bad landing at fourth fence. MEETING HOUSE was well placed when he fell at sixth fence; jockey remounted and then pulled up. SCURRY ALONG set and pressed pace for 13 fences and lost rider at fourteenth while tiring badly.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start bad from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:31½. Winner, W. H. Lipscomb's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUATREDOM, $12.40, $6.80, $4.80; DAMAGED GOODS, $6.00, $3.10; LONELY ROAD, $5.60.

QUATREDOM, first away and vigorously handled from start, drew far out, but weakened in closing sixteenth. DAMAGED GOODS, off in tangle and allowed to lag for half, rallied gamely when placed to drive, but hung under punishment in final 50 yards. LONELY ROAD gained gradually from a slow beginning. HIGH LANCE went evenly. TRYSTATE ran a dull race.

Daily Double, HELEN GLEASON and QUATREDOM, Paid $1,361.50.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:58. Off 2:58. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UVALDE, $8.40, $5.30, $3.60; MON DOIT, $4.10, $2.90; HIT AND RUN, $5.00.

UVALDE sprinted into lead at once, set good pace and held MON DOIT safe in closing test. MON DOIT was closest to pace and held on gamely at end. HIT AND RUN gained to midstretch and weakened when put to pressure. ROCKY MEADOW went evenly and could not threaten. CLARION CALL went well placed to stretch and tired.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:25. Off 3:25½. Winner, G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY PATIC, $4.80, $3.20, $2.60; AIR WIN, $10.70, $4.60; LIGHT CHATTER, $3.40.

TEDDY PATIC, under restraint while closest to pace of LIGHT CHATTER, came around pacemaker to take command when placed to drive leaving backstretch and drew out to win with speed in reserve. AIR WIN saved ground when shuffled back going to first turn, came through on inside entering stretch and closed willingly. LIGHT CHATTER saved ground at first turn to get to front, but weakened in stretch run. THE THRUSH could not reach serious contention.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:51. Off 3:53½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SNEAKY HENRY, $68.60, $24.40, $11.50; DOROTHY POMP, $5.70, $4.70; SEED, $6.60.

SNEAKY HENRY went to contention boldly leaving backstretch and withstood long drive to keep going away. DOROTHY POMP came to outside of leaders to get to front, but could not resist winner and held on gamely. SEED sailed brief lead at midstretch after being keen forward factor, but weakened right at end. FICTITIOUS set and forced pace for half and tired. SLUMP was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:20. Off 4:25. Winner, M. J. Schmitt's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR LINA, $15.30, $8.30, $5.50; HADNOGAL, $3.30, $2.70; KNIGHT'S SOX, $3.60.

STAR LINA, rated while closest to pace of HADNOGAL, forged to front when asked, drew out and had to be placed to drive while tiring nearing end. HADNOGAL was hustled to front, opened a long lead and closed willingly. KNIGHT'S SOX was forwardly placed from start and was tiring at close. ADORESS was off poorly and closed full of run.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:51. Off 4:53. Winner, G. Keeton's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAR PLAY, $7.10, $3.40, $2.60; SPARTAN LADY, $7.10, $4.40; MAHLETTE, $5.10.

BAR PLAY, steadied along while within striking distance, went to top with bold rush entering stretch and drew out in easy fashion. SPARTAN LADY saved ground while close up, but weakened when put to pressure is closing drive. MAHLETTE, slow to begin, closed full of run. FRANK BROOKE raced wide and showed good effort. DAYTONIAN was used up forcing pace and tired.

Hockenberry, Clark to Lead Mountaineers Against Hoyas

Halfbacks To Be Scouted By Redskins

Junior and Senior Combination Holds W. Va.'s Chances of Ending G. U. Streak

Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Washington Redskins, will be an interested spectator at Griffith Stadium Saturday afternoon when Georgetown University's football team entertains Dr. Marshall ("Little Sleepy") Glenn's University of West Virginia Mountaineers at 2 o'clock.

The Redskins' coach, with an eye to future talent, will be centering his attention on halfbacks Harry Clark and Charley Hockenberry, two of West Virginia's greatest backs of recent years.

Clark, a senior, is considering a fling at professional football following his graduation from West Virginia in June. He stands 6 feet, weighs 175 pounds and is an elusive broken field runner with an amazing change of pace.

1,000 Yards Gained

Two seasons ago, Clark gained over 1,000 yards while scoring ten touchdowns for the Mountaineers and then proceeded to steal the show as West Virginia defeated Texas Tech in El Paso's Sun Bowl.

Hockenberry, a junior, is a combination running and punting back who is experiencing his finest year. Prior to last week-end's 6-to-6 tie with South Carolina, Hockenberry had gained 210 yards in 49 attempts and lark 207 yards in 44 attempts.

Hockenberry, a rangy six-footer who also weighs a well-distributed 175 pounds, must decide between a professional football and baseball career upon graduation from West Virginia. A great propect as a baseball catcher, he already has been approached by several big league scouts and also has been scouted by any number of professional football authorities who consider him a fine prospect.

Both Important Factors

Both Clark and Hockenberry played important rolls in West Virginia's early season 44-to-0 rout of West Virginia Wesleyan, and himself in West Virginia's 20-to-0 Hockenberry also distinguished fall before mighty Pitt.

Clark, though handicapped by a slight injury in the South Carolina game, was sent into action for several minutes and stole the show with his elusive, twisting runs.

The Hoyas remained indoors for a gymnasium workout yesterday as a cold rain blanketed the Hilltop. Every man on the squad is in fine physical shape for the West Virginia test and Coach Hagerty yesterday indicated that he will make free use of all his players against the Mountaineers.

Bucknell Stresses Ofense in Drill

Lewisburg, Pa., Oct. 31.—Lengthy and intensive offensive drills in preparation for their game with Western Maryland were on the schedule this week for the battered and still punchless Bucknell Bisons, who have scored but three touchdowns this season. Their 16-0 defeat at Temple last Friday night represented the second shut-out reverse and the fourth '39 setback for the Bisons, who meet the Green Terrors from Westminster, Md., in a Father's Day tilt here Saturday.

Coach Humphreys and his assistant, Line Coach Bus Blum, are concentrating upon developing the Bucknell running attack, which suddenly stalled after the Albright game—lone bright spot on the current B. U. record.

Only Frank "King" Funair, who sustained a slight head injury at Philadelphia, gained consistently against the Owls last Friday night. Despite inept Bison blocking, Funair reeled off two 20-yard gains, and might have gone further had his mates blocked for him.

Funair and Co-Capt. George Kilck, consistently good, did practically all the ball-carrying at Philadelphia, but Coach Humphreys will groom Sophomore Walt Wenrick, Royersford and Frank Serrao for heavy attacking duty against the Green Terrors here on Saturday.

W. Va. Punter and Passer Sharpen Aim for Georgetown

20 High Schools Accept Bids To Hoya Game

Special Section Set Aside at W. Virginia Engagement Saturday

"Georgetown Day" was an assured success yesterday as 20 local and suburban private and public high schools accepted invitations tendered their students to attend Saturday's football game involving Georgetown and West Virginia Universities at Griffith Stadium.

Many more schools are expected to be enrolled prior to the deadline at noon Friday.

Students will be admitted to $1.65 grandstand seats upon payment of a 10 cent Federal and 15 cent service tax and a special section will be reserved for each school. Tickets will be distributed through the schools and must be claimed by noon Friday.

Every school in the public high system had accepted yesterday.

Gallaudet College, which does not have a football team this season, likewise has accepted the invitation and is expected to turn out virtually its entire student body for this game.

Bands of the various schools are expected to join in with the 60-piece Georgetown University band at game time and pre-game and between the halves features are planned.

N. B. A. Can't Act On 'Fix' Charges Unless 'Notified'

Unless the Illinois Boxing Commission, which has closed that State's rings to Fight Managers Nate Lewis and Joe Jacobs and Heavyweights Max Schmeling and Tony Galento on charges of being parties to "fixes," notifies the National Boxing Association of their action officially nothing will be done by the N. B. A. to bar the five named nationally, Heinie Miller, N. B. A. president, said here yesterday.

"The National Boxing Association is not a punitive body. It acts only when a member body initiates the action," Miller said. "If the Illinois commission reports their action to N. B. A. headquarters, we will notify all member States that the men in question are barred."

C. U. Fetes Golden Jubilee In Tulsa Game

Radio Broadcasts, Other Events Listed as Cards Nurse 5-Game Streak

The greatest homecoming in Catholic University's history is planned this week-end and one of the largest turnouts of old grads ever assembled is expected to congregate for the C. U.-Tulsa game at the Brookland Stadium Saturday.

This is C. U.'s golden jubilee year and the event has taken on added significance because of the fine record compiled by the Cardinals this year. Tulsa will be no setup for the Cards. As a matter of fact, Coach Dutch Bergman is genuinely worried over the outcome of this game.

The Golden Hurricane is known as a passing team and that has been C. U.'s one weakness this year. However, Bergman is encouraged by the showing the Cards made against Miami. Only 5 of 17 passes attempted by the Southerners were completed and the C. U. backs looked to be much improved over previous games.

The Cardinals' string of five straight apparently has attracted city-wide interest. The advance sale is the heavies this season and the many events scheduled are expected to make the public Catholic University-conscious.

Tonight, over WMAL a special Catholic University night will be broadcast. Coach Bergman is hopeful of getting Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, as one of the guests, together with Father Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the School of Philosophy at Catholic University.

Still another broadcast is scheduled for Friday night over WRC. On Friday, the annual C. U. smoker will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel, and a novel program is being arranged for intermission at the game Saturday. Following the game, the alumni-student dance will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel, and both Catholic University and Tulsa's football teams will be guests.

Women Golfers Try Bowling

top golf team that won the first team cup last year and was second by a point this season. The players are Mrs. Giles, Mrs. C. P. Medley, Mrs. Stokes, Mrs. C. S. Stern and Mrs. Ora Emgre, one of the top bowlers in town who replaces Mrs. Hope Wilkinson this yera.

Mrs. Ford showed the way yesterday with a 118 game and 336 set, tops for the day and it led Congressional No. 1 to an odd game triumph over Indian Spring No. 1. Manor No. 1 had high team game, 511, with Mrs. H. J. Cooper's 114 showing the way.

Washington Golf and Country Club and Manor each entered three teams, Indian Spring, Army-Navy, Congressional, Woodmont and Beaver Dam two each, Kenwood and Columbia one. Chevy Chase, capital and Argyle did not enter quintets.

The date is every Tuesday, from now until the first golf tournament sheet puts in an appearance in the spring, the time is 10 a. m., the place Silver Spring Bowling Alleys, with the action furnished by the District's women golfers, bowlers for the time being. And in the meantime, you'll probably spot them riding, shooting (not their husbands) or with time for a game or two of ping pong.

Challedon Favored In Pimlico Special

War Admiral. The son of Man o' War won it. Last year, the Special became a fixture with the memorable clash of Seabiscuit and War Admiral, in which the Howard ace tied the Riddle hope to the three-eighths pole.

The "World Series of racing" is the hope of Vanderbilt and company. Henceforth the outstanding horses of each year will be drawn together for this big final battle of the East.

Although Pimlico has a "quick-drying" track, those who saw the strip, which resembled a canal this morning, were of the opinion that it will be plenty off at post time for the Special. The rival owners and trainers are not perturbed, however. The "mud mark," eagerly noted by persons who study the past performance, is up on each of the three.

For Challedon, mud will be his meat; they say, because it was over this same track and distance that Challedon won the reakness last May. However, chart callers differed on the track condition. Although it was raining, some contend that the track was "somewhere between good and slow."

Kayak II at "Peak"

Kayak II, bred in South America, has shown good form in his few and far-between races on off tracks. However, his stable, from which Seabiscuit emerged last year to shock the turf world, is satisfied he will be at his best.

Regardless of the outcome of the race, Challedon will retain his position as the leading money winner of the year. Challedon has taken down $174,535 this year, which, added to his $67,700 last year, makes his a prospect to break the all-time winning mark held by Sun Beau if he wins the $10,000 purse.

Kayak II stands second on the 1939 winning list, with $161,025, but in 1938, his first year of competition, the Howard star won only $4,180. In three years of camaigning Cravat has amassed $120,705.

Seeking Ninth Victory

Challedon will be seeking his ninth victory in 15 starts this year. Kayak II, winner of five of his seven 1938 starts, will be out to make it eight out of ten this year. Cravat has won four races this year in 14 starts.

The field will be started from the Bahr gate, the one in use at Maryland tracks for many years.

Post time for the first race is 1 p. m. tomorrow and 1:15 for the remainder of the "stake-a-day" program.

Vols' Lead Shortened

Oklahoma, Southern California, Tulane, North Carolina and Nebraska.

Four of the first ten teams, Tennessee, Notre Dame, Southern California and Nebraska—are going to have their hands full this Saturday staying up there. The Vols tangle with Louisiana State, which has won five games in a row since dropping its opener to Mississippi. Notre Dame meets up with Army, and, although the Cadets are a weaker-than-usual West Point outfit this season, they always manage to make it hot for the Irish. Southern California faces unbeaten Oregon State, which wound up in eleventh place in this week's poll, and Nebraska tries to stop Missouri's three-game winning streak.

Ohio State Dropped Out

The only team to drop out of the first ten this week was Ohio State, by its loss to Cornell. In the Buckeyes' place, North Carolina moved up to the select set.

The standings of the teams (points figured on basis of 10-9-8-7-6, etc., for first, second, third, fourth, etc., place votes):

Team.	First-Place Votes.	Points
Tennessee	47	1,120
Michigan	20	1,005
Cornell	18	933
Notre Dame	12	858
Texas A. & M.	6	714
Oklahoma	2	605½
Southern California	1	598
Tulane	1	419
North Carolina	1	314
Nebraska	0	180½

The second ten—Eleventh, Oregon State, 76 points; twelfth, Duke, 46; thirteenth, Duquesne, 44; fourteenth, Ohio State, 25; fifteenth, Kentucky, 22; sixteenth, Southern Methodist, 21; seventeenth, New York University, 20; eighteenth, Louisiana State, 17; nineteenth, Clemson, 16; twentieth, tie between Alabama and U. C. L. A., 14 each. The others—Santa Clara, 12; Minnesota, 6; Holy Cross, 3; Dartmouth, 2.

Navy Rebuilds For Penn Game Saturday

Stiff Workout in Mud Finds 2 Sets of Backs in Action; Opp Replaced

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 31.—Navy gridders resembled a school of chocolate porpoises disporting in a sea of lubricating oil tonight as they slogged through a hard practice on a rain-soaked field where the footing was the consistency of waffle batter.

There were new faces in Navy's varsity lineup in the brief period before they all got muddy. Coach Swere Larson replaced Dick Opp, rookie tackle, with Bill Chewning, the Virginia boy who plugged a bad hole Saturday against Clemson and won himself a probable starting berth.

The first line tonight had Dick Foster and Lou Burke at the ends, Capt. Al Bergner and Chewing at tackle, Al Feldmeier and Tom McGrath at guards and Hal Harwood at center.

Larson and End Coach Oscar Hageberg agreed that Swede Hansen just wasn't an end, and moved him "back home" to the backfield, a spot the 227-pounder held down against Army last year.

Larson also decided to build two backfields, as interchangeable units, in his effort to sustain the continuity of the Navy offensive.

One set of backs included Everett Malcolm, Lou Mayo, Ralph Boyer and either Wes Gebert or Bob Leonard, the passing ace. The second unit had Cliff Lenz, Pat Gray, Monty Whitehead or Butch Werner and Hansen or Sammy Boothe.

Werner is still the white hope of the squad, for all that he hasn't been in a varsity game this year. He is the best kicker on the squad, and was groomed for action against Notre Dame but was hurt in practice. He'll see plenty of action against Penn Saturday if physically right.

Ohio State Star to Coach W. & L. Cagers

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Oct. 31.—Harold B. Cunningham, former Ohio State University basketball and football star, was named basketball coach at Washington and Lee today to succeed Harry K. (Cy) Young, who resigned to become W. and L.'s full-time alumni secretary.

Richard A. Smith, W. and L. athletic director, announced the appointment after approval of a one-year contract by the university's recently-formed joint committee on athletics. Cunningham will report here immediately.

He is a former football star and was an All-Conference basketball man at Ohio State. He played center on Ohio's quintet for three years and was rated third in scoring during that time. Ohio State had a championship team, it was recalled here, durnig the 1923-24 season when Cunningham was playing.

The new W. and L. coach played varsity football three years and captained the team in 1925. He was selected as an All-Conference end.

After he was graduated from Ohio State in 1926 with the bachelor of science degree in business administration, he played professional football with the Chicago Bears, New York and Cleveland.

He played professional basketball three years with the New York Celtics and then played with a Cleveland professional team.

Lorenz to Captain Wisconsin Eleven

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31 (AP).—Coach Harry Stuhldreher today nominated Al Lorenz, junior end from Oak Park, Ill., as captain of the University of Wisconsin football team for its game against Illinois a week from Saturday. It was the first time this year a junior has been selected to captain the team.

Cox Signed as Coach

Wichita, Kans., Oct. 31 (AP).—Danny Cox, of Port Arthur, Ontario, former center for the Philadelphia Rangers, was signed today by the Wichita Skyhawks as playing coach, Mrs. Ella B. Wible, club owner, announced.

On the Line With Considine

The dope is that Sam Breadon wants to sell Medwick and that Brench Rickey doesn't . . . Thus, owners who confer with Breadon come away with visions of getting the guy, and those who listen to Rickey know that the Cards expect to get another pennant out of him before they sell him.

Speaking of football attendances, how about the Giants? . . . They drew 58,000 Sunday a week ago, 34,000 last Sunday and expect to play to 50,000 Sunday at Briggs Stadium, in Detroit . . . Tad Wieman, scholarly Princeton coach, asked the New York Football Writers Association not to call him scholarly hereafter . . . How about Butch, Fats, Slug, Pug, Mugg, Go-Gettem, Brass Knuckles or Bo?

Tomorrow's Pimlico Special is a phenomenon in turf history . . . It has become famous without the two prime ingredients which make races famous—tradition or a huge purse . . . This is only its third year, but it is already an iron-clad fixture on the racing scene . . . It has been lucky in that each previous race supplied tons of post-race debate . . . In 1937 War Admiral, then in the midst of a long winning streak, won the Inaugural Special only after Masked General, who led the Riddle colt from the start, bolted and bore out badly on the stretch turn . . . Last year's special was the incomparable Seabiscuit-War Admiral race, which convinced few of the Admiral's adherents that the Biscuit was better.

Special Looks Like Challedon's Homecoming

This year the race looks like a great homecoming party for Challedon . . . Yet the supporters of Kayak II are yelling that the only reason Challedon beat the imported star in the Narragansett Special was that Yayak II hurt himself during the race and carried 10 more pounds . . . He'll carry six more than Challedon tomorrow.

Speaking of Seabiscuit, that certainly is a self-effacing little movie short which Charles Howard has put out, about Charles Howard and Seabiscuit . . . And, not meaning to be rude, the first half is alarmingly like a piece of ours called "Derby Winner" . . . Dan Topping, a good fellow, was so upset when a Brooklyn cop clawed his way into the stands last Sunday to rescue a football which had been kicked in there that he has put in a rule whereby any fan who catches a ball during a game gets a season's pass . . .

Detroit would be a fine spot for them, but the Olmpics won't go anywhere if they aren't run off in Helsinki . . . Runyon's suggestion for a Pan-American Olympics at the World Fair is the best substitute plan . . . Pro ball's greatest contribution to College football is reflected in the unbeaten Georgetown team . . . The Hoyas are coached by Jack Hagerty, Mush Dubofsky and George Mortagh, former member of the Giants . . . They haven't lost a game since they scrimmaged with the Washington Redskins in 1937 . . . Sammy Baugh had only 11 passes intercepted all last season; and five last Sunday by the Packers.

Lou Little Considering Proboscis Alteration

Jack Dempsey, Benny Leonard, Jim Braddock, Tony Galento and many other sports celebrities are on the committee working for the election of Louis de Salvio to the city council in Manhattan . . . If the Schmeling-Thomas fight was a fake, then so was Gettysburg . . . Army is really gunning for Notre Dame this Saturday . . . The plastic surgeons did such a good job remaking the mashed nose of Les Stanczyk that Lou Little says he is thinking of having his own bobbed . . . The pro league should add two more teams, preferably from Los Angeles and San Francisco, and arrange the schedule so that each club plays every other club in the league . . . Mel Hein, greatest lineman of them all, quits pro ball at the end of the season, as does Bob MacLeod, of the Bears, and Don Hutson, of the Packers . . . I have it directly from his manager, Max Waxman, that Red Burman is one second-rater who isn't ducking Pat Comiskey . . . "The fans know their fighters," Max writes, "and they know that Red can whip all them phoney bums."

Chicago Seen Real Threat To Cavaliers

Virginians Fear Shaughnessys Team After Shake-up

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31.—The University of Chicago team which Coach Clark Shaughnessy is revising and pointing for Virginia looms as a real threat to the Cavaliers here Saturday in the State's feature intersectional clash.

Idle last week, the Maroons will have had two weeks to make ready for their visit to Charlottesville, which will be their only game away from Stagg Field this season. Recent additions to the squad give Shaughnessy a 192-pound line and a fleet set of veteran backs to begin the second phase of their schedule.

Slated for his first starting assignment of the season is Hugh Rendleman, 215-pound veteran attackle, who rejoined the Maroon squad two weeks ago. Playing next to hi mat left guard will be Walter Maurovich, 210-pound junior letterman.

Power at center is furnished by Dick Wheeler, 194-pound veteran of last season, backed by Morrie Grinbarg, 217-pounder, who was a varsity squad member two years ago, and Milton Weiss, 200-pound sophomore.

Chicago's wide-open offensive system has the benefit of two towering ends in Dick Lounsbury and Ralph Richardson, each of whom has an altitude of 6 feet 4 inches. Although in their grst season of varsity football, both are crack basketball players and are developing into great pass catchers.

Maroon backfield speed centers around Co-captains John Davenport and Bob Wasem, the Big Ten track stars.

Roll Call Here Sets Record For Red Cross

Morris Congratulated On All-Time High of 116,476 Members

The Red Cross roll call set an all-time record here this year and committees convened yesterday to congratulate Edgar Morris, general chairman.

The memberships totaled 116,476, surpassing the previous high, 114,465 of the last fiscal year. In turn, the 1938 total was 20,448 in excess of the 1937 enrollment.

Despite the success, Morris said his committees would continue efforts until the 125,000 goal fixed for the campaign is reached. Roll call headquarters will stay open this week to receive late returns. Standings were issued, as of October 31, as follows:

Government, 73,486; financial, 4,079; professional, 6,539; utilities, 5,857; general business, 18,251; residential, 3,373; special gifts, 191; booths, 4,352, and Takoma Park branch, 350.

Autos Aid Weeding Of the Unfit Deer

The predatory automobile is only a mechanical mountain lion to wildlife experts of the National Park Service, the Department of the Interior revealed yesterday.

Wild animals, chiefly deer, attracted by headlights, walk onto the highways and stand there blinded in the path of slaughter, park superintendents in the West report.

Only the fittest will survive the automobile, and by this natural selection the strain of park deer will improve, they say. The race, softened by its park existence, would degenerate, the wildlife men point out, if the automobile did not fill the predatory mountain lion's role in "nature's superbly balanced scheme."

Dispatcher 30 Years Recalls Thrills Delivering The Post

Chief of World-Wide Addressing System Proud His Papers Always Go Through Like Uncle Sam's Mail Service

Richard L. Carne today celebrates his thirtieth anniversary as a man sons accounts of the world's happenings, who addresses to thousands of perpenings, glamor, excitements and sadness.

Quiet, bespectacled, and with a "great memory," Carne, who has charge of the Nation-wide and world-wide addressing system for The Washington Post, turns the anniversary with the thought that he was something like a postman—back in his circulation days. If the mails went through so did his papers. And there hangs the "great memory."

A blizzard came in January, 1922, piling snow 3 or 4 feet deep in Alexandria, where Carne had charge of the circulation. On the heels of this came the Knickerbocker Theater tragedy. People were frantic for news of the disaster.

"The Post was the only paper that got through into my territory," remembers Carne. It was his high-point of service to his paper. A special bus sent out on his delivery route bucked the deep drifts and soon tore its gearing loose.

Carne rused to Washington, put another bus into the service, and got his papers through.

Carne is a native of Alexandria and became associated with The Post on November 1, 1909. For 20 years of the 30, he has worked in The Post Building. For 10 years he handled all of the Alexandria circulation there.

At his addressing and routing machines his fingers continue to guide the delivery men with the world's tidings to doors in Washington and other doors in far-places of the world.

Labor Dispute Closes Dodge Truck Plant

Detroit, Oct. 31 (AP).—Another Chrysler Corporation unit, the Dodge truck plant, closed today as negotiations in a dispute with the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers remained at a standstill.

The truck plant has been operating at approximately half its capacity, employing 1,000 men, for three weeks because of the dispute that has made idle nearly 100,000 workers in automobile and allied industries.

A Chrysler spokesman said that starting at 10 a. m. today production on the heavy duty Dodge truck line was cut down to 50 per cent of normal. By 2 p. m. work was so disrupted in the plant that normal operations could not continue.

R. J. Thomas, U. A. W.-C. I. O. president, said that "the employes were locked out."

Red Cross Sends Soap, Sheeting to Refugees

The American Red Cross yesterday announced shipment of 60,000 6-ounce cakes of soap and 25,000 yards of cotton sheeting to Europe for distribution among Polish refugees in Hungary and Rumania. The soap and cotton shipments follow cargoes of drugs, underwear, blankets and muslin sent already.

Request for these supplies was cabled by the American Red Cross delegation now visiting refugee camps in central Europe.

Fall Injures Woman

250 CCC Enrollees Will Take Course On Training Ship

By the Associated Press

Maritime Commission officials said yesterday plans were being perfected for enrollment of about 250 outstanding Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees fir a course of training aboard the commission training vessel "American Seaman."

Invitations went out from the commission, officials said, to corps area headquarters and heads of CCC camps to nominate fitted and interested enrollees for the course, and as a result it was expected about 250 of the "cream" of the corps would be assembled shortly at Fort Dix, N. J., for embarkation.

Plans also are under way, officials said, for the establishment of a third merchant marine training school somewhere on the gulfcoast. Surveys have been completed of possible sites for the school from Key West, Fla., to Brownsville, Texas.

'Go-See' Tour Today to Stop At Boys' Club

2 Branches to Hold Open House for Community Chest

The Boys Club of Washington is a stop today on the Community Chest "Go-and-See Tours." Open house will be held at the Central Branch 230 C street northwest, and at the Southeast Branch, Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast.

Visiting hours will be from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 7 to 9:30 p. m. when the clubs will be in normal operation with the regular games and activities going on. A large oil painting by Peter De Anna, characterizing American boyhood, will be exhibited in the main lobby of the Southeast Branch. Young De Anna is a member of the club.

Guests expected at the Southeast branch include Eddie Cantor, screen star; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Jack Hagerty, head football coach at Georgetown University; William Reinhart, head football coach at George Washington University; Mrs. Henry Gratton Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Lewis R. Barrett, director of public recreation; Birch Bayh, director of physical and health education for public schools; Roland Lund, head football coach at Anacostia High School, and Charles Guyon, director of athletics at Eastern High School.

Other stops today on the "tour," which includes organizations receiving funds from the Community Chest, are Garfield Memorial Hospital, Tenth street and Florida avenue northwest, from 2:30 to 5 p. m., and the Juanita K. Nye Council House, 609 Sixth street southwest, from 3 to 5:30 p. m.

Rail Plan to Quit Service May Spur New Va. Highway

Newport News, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Plans for a modern military highway connecting Fort Monroe and Langley Field with Routes 60 and 168 north of Newport News are under consideration by the War Department in Washington as a result of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's move to abandon its present service to Fort Monroe, Army officials have revealed.

The highway would utilize the railway trestle across Mill Creek from Fort Monroe to Phoebus, if the Interstate Commerce Commission approves the C. & O.'s abandonment application. From Phoebus the highway would connect with the new East Hampton Bridge across Hampton Creek, continue along Mallory avenue, and extend westward through Elizabeth City County to connect with Route 168. The connection would be at the C. & O. overpass north of Newport News, which would give the military highway further outlets to Route 60 and to the James River Bridge.

Methodists Form Peninsula Group, Name New Heads

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 31 (AP).—Methodism's three branches on the Delmarva Peninsula, formerly made up of four distinct conferences, were formally united in the peninsula conference today.

"Let this be union and not absorption," Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of the Washington area, told 900 clerical and lay delegates to the first session of the new organization.

Permanent officers of the new peninsula conference, elected at the afternoon meeting, were:

The Rev. J. R. Bicking, Crisfield, secretary; assistants, the Rev. O. A. Bradley, Newark, Del.; the Rev. John S. Townsend, Snow Hill, and the Rev. Raymond Hallman, Preston.

The Rev. W. H. Revelle, Sudlersville, treasurer.

The Rev. G. E. Lister, Pocomoke, statistician; assistant, the Rev. J. W. Wooten, Pocomoke.

The Rev. H. B. Kelso, East New Market, auditor.

The Rev. L. E. Wimbrow, Denton, registrar.

Man Found Slain In Church Cellar

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 31 (AP).—A well-dressed man, about 45, was found shot to death today in the basement of the Rock Spring Church 3 miles from here. A new shotgun lay beside the body.

Cards in the victim's pocket bore the name of W. C. Hanway, Detroit, Mich., and identified Hanway as treasurer of a motor truck trailer corporation there.

The "Six Whirlwinds" in arrested motion. These cyclonic lasses are the current star attraction at Bamboo Gardens

RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR AT TROIKA. No, we don't mean Mr. Oumansky. But lovable old Victor Moore of the National's "Leave It to Me," who, with blues queen Sophie Tucker and G-Man Edgar Hoover, visited Troika, signed the guest book as "Russian Ambassador." Sleuth Hoover appended the postscript, "Russia can be proud of this representative."—Newest news from Troika is that the "Sharmanca" skit (Organ Grinder) is back in the revue with handsome Vanya playing the aged organ grinder in a make-up that it takes an hour to apply, transforms him so completely that no one guesses it's Vanya behind the grease paint. Also, Ballerina Bielenskaya is doing a Chinese dance to music from Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite."

CHANGE IN CAPRICE. Eddie Whitesell, one of the town's favorite accordionists, also probably that talented pianist, Grace Shannon, will begin an engagement in the Cafe Caprice on next Wednesday.

TWO-PIANO KAIN. When Paul Kain's always fiery orchestra opens at the Club Lafayette on Saturday, it will be glorified by two pianos and alternating accordion, a new Kain novelty. The rest of the Kain set-up includes three sax players, all of whom will blossom out on other instruments from time to time (listen for Paul's clarinetting!) trumpet and drums. "Pretty Peggy" Le Baron, a polished trouper, will sing and beautify the bandstand.

FAT BUT LOVELY, is Evelyn Scott (top center in picture above) of the Six Whirlwinds at Bamboo Gardens. Folks' eyes pop when Evelyn comes bouncing out. She's built like a butter-ball, but light as a feather on her tootsies, does trick cartwheels as well as fancy stepping. You lasses who think you're overweight had better take a look at Evelyn before going on a diet. Maybe you'll reconsider.

SHINING NEW SONGAGE. Mayflower Lounge. The realistic osculation of "I Must Have One More Kiss, Kiss, Kiss," as done by "Ha-Cha" Gardner. Advertising, huh, "Ha-Cha?"

Metronome. "Stop, You're wonderful" from Penn's new Mask and Wig show. To be done for the first time tomorrow by the King's Jesters as the result of a signed request by 150 Penn undergrads.

Rainbow Room. "I Didn't Know What Time It Was," beautiful newie being done by Milton Davis and his orchestra. Milton vows it'll make the top of the hit parade.

King Cole Room. "Dark Eyes" as warbled by Evelyn Knight. (Yes, we know it isn't new, but it sounds new the way it's been rearranged for Eve.)

Mayfair. "If I Knew Then What I Know Now" as carried straight by Gwen Gary, Mayfair's new prima donna, possessor of a lovely lyric soprano, and winner of a New York scholarship for voice training.

CATCH LINE WANTED. How are you on thinking up snappy phrases? Bill McCune of the Shar-Zad Room is looking for one to use on his band broadcast. It must be descriptive of the McCune music. That calls for a couple of superlatives, we'd say.

EDIBLES DE LUXY- LUXE. Medrillon. Peter Borras has just invented a new dessert—a pumpkin custard. It's a delish, seasoned with Spanish inspiration. We know. Because we ate one and didn't pay for it. Which made it taste even better.

Neptune Room. For your sake we hope that jellied breast of chicken a la Livingstone is on the menu when you call at Neptune. The price is so low that it seems incredible for such a luxury item.

El Morrocco. Those tricky continental dishes that are a daily surprise in both El Morocco and the upstairs Trans-Lux- Hour Glass. Credit to that clever chef, Miquel Rua.

Dick's Grill. All sorts of fine fish and sea food specialties. Owner Dick Ashby shops personally for finny and shelled citizenry of the sea, takes only the finest.

IDEAL DANCING PARTNERS are Peg-Leg and Tubby Dynamite of the Pirates' Den. Peg-Leg waltzes beautifully despite his timber limb. Tubby's chubby, but light as goose down, always in demand as a dance partner.

STRICKLAND PHILOSOPHY. "Two people can live as cheaply as one, but one of 'em is going to be awfully skinny," says Bill Strickland, maestor and emcee at the Lotus. Bill is performing three "swing weddings" a day in Lotus "Swing Revue" and his conscience is beginning to ache.

HANDWRITING. The Shoreham's Roma Reid can tell you uncanny things about yourself by looking at your handwriting. But we sure would admire to hear an analysis of Roma's own handwriting. We have a litle note from her in the most dashing and heavily shaded writing we've ever seen.

BUSTLING BUSTLES are in order in the Pall Mall Room's nightly "Boompsa-Daisey" seance. The Pall management kinly furnishes ruffled paper bustles to ladies who want to "Boompsa-Daisy" while Mis Ethel Fistere sings "I Like a Bustle That Bends." Funt, but in quantity! But not if you bruise easily.

RIVIERA PICTURE. Pete Macias and the boys going patriotic in red, white and blue striped cravats . . . Charles Gaines of the State De-partment . . . Style Expert Marshall Adams, very radiant . . . The Cassini Co. (Oleg and Igor) dispensing continental charm by the bucketfull . . . That zazzuzazz music that is Riviera's inimitable trademark.

SKIMMING AROUND DEPARTMENT. Brown Derby. Those two new singing wafters are Bob Preble of Boston and Gordon Nichols of Cleveland. They refuse to tell why they adopted such careers.

Hi Hat. Manager Oscar is a connoisseur of countryside dining. If you want to know where to stop when out Sunday driving just ask Oscar. He's tried them all, can tell you the best.

Anchor Room. Matt Windsor's song, "Open Up Your Heart" has spread unobtrusively but effectively all over the country. It's being played by all the big orchestras, is due for a coast-to-coast broadcast.

SURBURBAN TRIPPING. Nightingale. Prize rendezvous for jitter-steppers. Room for hundreds to dance. Music by Bill Downer's big 12-piece orchestra, noted for swing that swings right up to the ceiling.

A. T. & S. Barbecue. You'll always reap a harvest of good times down there. Just head down toward Alexandria and you'll find the A. T. & S. on the way. Dance music nad steaming, by Bill Warwick and his boys.

Hill Top Tavern. Big, attractive and bright with an excellent dance oor and well appointed bar. Once you get on the road to Marlboro, anyone will tell you where to find Hill Top. It's a short drive with a big time waiting for you at the end.

Home Loans Set New Top In August

Far Ahead of 1938, Volume Shows Gain Over Record Period

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Augmenting the increasing array of prosperity statistics is the latest report to the District of Columbia Building and Loan League from the National League showing $95,038,000 loaned to home owners by savings, building and loan during August, an all-time high month for the post-depression period.

This was the third consecutive month in which loan volume was greater than it had been in the same months of 1937, previous year of greatest activity by these institutions. August loans were 27 per cent ahead of those of the month in 1938, and 23 per cent in advance of these of August, 1937.

An important difference in the purposes for which these record-breaking loan volumes were being consummated two years ago and now is reported by George W. West, Atlanta, president of the United States Building and Loan League. Loans for the building of new houses exceeded the dollar volume placed for this purpose in August, 1937, by 41 per cent. In the entire year of 1937 construction loans constituted a little more than one-fourth of all loans made by the thrift and home financing institutions, whereas for the past three months they have been nearly one-third of the total.

"With the sole exception of July, there has been a steady upward sweep, month by month in the volume of construction loans by associations since February of this year," Mr. West reports. "Financing of home building from this source has been $190,400,000 so far in 1939. Assuming that these loans were for an average 75 per cent of the cost of the house, we can say that the associations financed $254,000,000 of new home building since the beginning of the year, and this is equivalent to 29 per cent of all the residential building contracts awarded with both public and private financing the first eight months, according to F. W. Dodge figures."

Convention Date Set

President Ord Preston, of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and president of Union Trust Co., announces that the twenty-second annual convention of the bankers' association will be held at the Homestead, Hot Springs, June 5-9.

Fleming on A. B. A. Council

Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank and a past president of the American Bankers Association, has been appointed by President Robert M. Hanes, of the latter organization, to membership-at-large in the association's executive council, and George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of Riggs National Bank, has been named a member of the public relations council.

Both local financiers were in attendance at the recent national convention of the association at Seattle. Mr. Fleming has served on the executive council ever since he was chief executive of the association, and Mr. Vass has been a leader in the highly successful public relations program of the Riggs institution.

Fiduciaries Organize

The executive council of the fiduciaries section, District of Columbia Bankers' Association, under Chairman Bernard L. Amiss, an assistant trust officer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., has organized for the year 1939-40. In addition to Mr. Amiss, the council consists of Harold A. Kertz, an assistant trust officer, National Metropolitan Bank, vice chairman; Henry K. Dierkoph, an assistant trust officer, Riggs National Bank, secretary; J. Wesley Clampitt, jr., an assistant trust officer, Union Trust Co., and Aubrey O. Dooley, an assistant trust officer, Hamilton National Bank.

Price Restores Civil Rights of Mayor Forsyth

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Gov. Price restored today the civil rights of Mayor J. Frank Forsyth of Front Royal, who was fined $1,200 last week in Federal District Court at Harrisonburg on a charge of conspiring to obstruct justice.

Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, who represented orsyth in the conspiracy case, said before sentence was passed last Thursday that in his opinion the mayor would have to vacate the office. Senator Weaver visited the Governor's office today before the executive action was announced.

Mayor Forsyth was convicted with three colored women of attempting to influence witnesses who were to have appeared a Federal grand jury.

Yacht's Radio Call Brings Aid Galore To Gassed Family

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—John MacCauley's family was overcome by fumes from a charcoal heater aboard his yacht tied up in Curtis Creek here tonight, and the Lake Worth, Fla., yachtsman tried out his new radio transmitter to ask for first-aid information. His new transmitter works just fine, and this is what happened:

Within 10 minutes two ambulances, three police radio cars and a United States Quarantine physician were at the scene, and a police boat was heading up Curtis Creek full speed. Police were swamped with calls from excited radio amateurs, some from out-of-State. The Coast Guard at Cape May called. So did somebody from Massachusettes.

The Quarantine physician looked over the family—Mrs. John MacCauley, 25, Donald, 8, and Ardis 4—and pronounced them out of danger.

MacCauley didn't know there was a telephone within 100 yards of the boat.

U. S. Steel Net At $10,420,445 In 3d Quarter

Equals 47c a Share On Common, First Profit Since 1937

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 31.—Unite States Steel Corporation reported today for the September quarter net profit of $10,420,445, compared with net loss of $5,847,791 in the September quarter of 1938. Net income in the June quarter of 1939 was $1,300,761.

The September quarter earnings were equal to 47 cents a common share after provision for preferred dividends.

This was the first quarterly period in which the corporation had reported a profit for the common stock above preferred dividend requirements since the September quarter of 1937.

Contrasts With Loss

For the first nine months of this year net profit was $12,390,756, compared with net loss of $12,150,368 in the three quarters last year.

Third-quarter operations averaged 54.6 per cent of capacity, against 34.6 per cent of capacity in the September quarter of 1938.

Directors authorized the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the preferred stock, payable November 20 to stock of record November 3.

Similar dividends have been paid through 1938 and in the first two quarters this year. Arrears on the issue were cleared in 1937.

Edward R. Stettinius, chairman of the board, said in a statement accompanying the report:

Shipments Gain 14 Per Cent

"Shipments of finished steel products during the third quarter were approximately 14 2-10 per cent greater than the second quarter. This reflects the higher level in the Nation's volume of business in the third quarter of 1939 as compared with the second as indicated by numerous indexes of business activity. The demand for all types of steel increased.

"Due to both general improvement in business and to seasonal factors the earnings for the third quarter showed improvement over the second quarter of the year. Prices realized for steel products shipped during the third quarter remained at substantially the levels that prevailed during the early part of the year.

"Following the usual slowing down of operations over the Labor Day holiday the rate of production has advanced to levels better than those prevailing during the first six months of the year. Shipments are keeping pace with production and except for the seasonable accumulation of iron ore and other stocks, there has been no general increase in inventories."

Pennsylvania Water & Power Co.

Pennsylvania Water & Power Co. reported net income for the first nine months of 1939 of $1,687,901, or $3.69 a common share, compared with $1,906,310, or $4.24 a share, in the like 1938 period.

American Rolling Mill Co.

The American Rolling Mill Co. reported for the three months ended September 30 consolidated net profit of $600,793, equal to 3 cents a share on the common stock, compared with a net loss of $556,994 in the like 1938 period. For nine months the net profit was $2,369,944, equal to 26 cents a share; against a loss of $1,280,159 in the 1938 period.

White Rock Mineral Springs Co.

White Rock Mineral Springs Co. for nine months ended September 30 showed net profit of $157,885, equal to 38 cents a share on the common stock, compared with profit of $164,046, or 41 cents a common share in the 1938 period.

Commercial Credit Co.

Commercial Credit Co. reported for the third quarter net earnings of $1,993,771, equal to $1.01 a share on the common stock, against $2,066,393, or $1.06 a share, in the like 1938 period.

Savage Arms

Savage Arms reported net profit for the September quarter of $155,185, or 92 cents a common share, compared with $109,746, or 65 cents a share, in the like 1938 period.

Celanese Corporation

Celanese Corporation of America reported net profit for the September quarter of $1,234,035 after charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 62 cents a common share, compared with $1,325,098, or 70 cents a common share in the like 1938 period.

Celanese Corporation

Directors of Celanese Corporation of America declared a dividend of one share of common stock for each 40 shares of common stock in addition to a cash dividend of 50 cents a common share. The stock dividend will be paid December 22 to holders of record November 17. The cash dividend will be paid December 1 to holders of record November 17. The last previous dividend paid on the common stock was January 1, 1938. The directors also voted the regular dividends on the preferred stock.

Douglas Aircraft Co.

Directors of Douglas Aircraft Co. voted a dividend of $3 per share, payable November 20 to stockholders of record November 10.

Rail Asks $1,800,000 Equipment Issue

Charles M. Thomson, trustee of the Chicago & North Western Railway, applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $1,800,000 of 2½ per cent equipment trust certificates.

The railway said it intended to purchase 800 freight cars costing about $2,362,500, paying 20 per cent of the cost from its own funds.

Cotton Slumps; Loan Program Reported Lost

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Cotton futures dropped 4 to 6 points today. Heavy security prices were a bearish influence, brokers said. Combined with this were reports from Washington the Budget Bureau had turned thumbs down on the 1939-40 cotton loan program. A concerted selling movement carried prices down as much as 60 cents a bail before a halt was called, due mostly to pressure by local professionals and short covering. At the same time the fast morning action slowed down to a walk.

Farm Prices Down After Sharp Rise On War Outbreak

With prices of grain and meat animals reacting after a spectacular rise following outbreak of the war, the average level of prices received by farmers in mid-October was one point lower than a month earlier, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

At 97 per cent of the 1910-14 level, the mid-October index of farm prices was two points higher, however, than in mid-October last year.

The Department said grains and meat animals lost about one third of their "war-boom" gains between September 15 and October 15. Chickens and eggs and dairy products, however, made substantial seasonal advances and held the all-commodity index fairly close to the September figure.

Experts Fear Unparalleled Dust Storms

Predicted Unless Drought in 29 States Is Broken Soon

A drought of such severity that it has already increased the Nation's needy farm population by more than 25 per cent has struck 29 States throughout the Nation, alarmed Agriculture Department experts admitted yesterday. Unless heavy rains fall this month, officials forecast, the dust storms unparalleled in recent years will sweep out of the great plains next spring.

In recent months more than 115,000 farm families have been added to the 400,000 needy rural families already under the care of the Farm Security Administration, "with several times that many more to be added in the spring" unless the drought is broken, an informed FSA officer said yesterday.

In its total effect, it was explained, the drought may not be as severe as those of 1934 or 1936, since its pattern is "spotty" or "patchwork" rather than solidly covering large areas. Where it has struck, however, notably in western Kansas and the surrounding "Dust Bowl" center, it is "very, very serious," Agriculture officials said.

Driest Summer in eYars

A eWather Bureau forecast of crop conditions, to appear today, will show that western Kansas has had the driest summer in many years, it was learned. Rainfall in all Kansas during August was only 43 per cent of normal, with even less in the western part of the state. In September the rainfall was only 10 per cent of normal, and last month only 7 per cent. Normal rainfall itself is very light, the Weather Bureau said.

The fact that the European war and America's neutrality problems have crowded notice o fthe drought from public attention is making the situation even more difficult, an FSA spokesman said. He added that until Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, enlisted the attention of his colleagues to the problem, many Senators were unaware of drought conditions in their own States.

Although the FSA has $120,000,000 for loans and grants to spend in the fiscal year, this amount is adequate only for the 400,000 farm families already needing aid, he added. Only $9,000,000 in reserve is available for the new problem, he indicated, although conferences are now in progress to escure other funds.

Outright Grants

The major part of whatever money is made available will be used for loans to farmers for seed and forage to keep livestock alive until next year. In cases of complete destitution, however, outright grants will be made.

The possibility that the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation may be able to distribute food will cut down the need for grants, it was asserted.

Soil Conservation Service and Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials said they believed their program of the last few years would serve to mitigate some of the severity of the drought's impact, but emphasized that their work was largely to prevent soil erosion and that their organizations could do little to help in the face of actual drought conditions.

Ritchie Highway Filling Stations Action Deferred

Annapolis, Oct. 31 (AP).—County commissioners took no action today on two applications to build service stations on the new Ritchie highway near Arnold, protested by half a hundred civic groups and individual property holders.

The commissioners, on motion of Third District Commissioner Weems R. Duvall, whose district embraces the proposed service stations sites, voted to defer action on the applications until November 7.

Alleged commercialization of property along the Ritchie highway is currently under investigation by the county grand jury. Erection of any commercial structures along the newly-landscaped road has been widely protested by garden, automobile and civic club groups.

Fast Thief Gets $190 From CCC; Overlookks $$1,371

A thief who was abue within 30 minutes to open and relock the safe and office doors in Civilian Conservation Corps Camp A-3, Prince Georges County, last night escaped with $790. He left $1,371, the rest of the month's payroll, in the safe.

Lieut. H. R. Allen, commanding officer of the camp, 2 miles from Beltsville, reported the theft must have been during the evening meal. Returning to the office to prepare distribution of the payroll, Allen said, he checked the money as a matter of routine to discover 38 five-dollar bills missing.

Lieut. Irving Mendelsohi, junior officer, reported several minor thefts at the camp recently.

Farmer Arraigned Against Mother in Battle Over Will

Annapolis, Oct. 31 (AP).—Son was ranged against mother in a Court of Appeals action today over property left by the late Henry D. Dowell, prosperous Calvert County farmer.

Maryland's 240-year-old "widow's third" law giving a surviving widow one-third of her husband's estate, no matter what his will devised, was the basic law involved in the appeal of H. Wilson Dowell from a Calvert Court decision favoring his mother and other surviving kin.

Henry Dowell left the 466-acre Owings farm near Chanyeville to Wilson Dowell. Five other parcels of land went to his wife and other five surviving children.

Mrs. Dowell renounced the will and elected to take her statutory one-third share of the estate, including the farm bequeathed her son, Wilson Dowell.

The younger Dowell pleaded that he had managed the farm, that his father had entered an implied contract that was to give him the farm free and clear, and that the contract took precedence over the venerable "widow's third" statute.

NOW LOOKA HERE DELL I AINT A GOIN' T'JEST BE—BYE BYE—
BUT IT'S SIMPLY GORGEOUS AND TOO TOO DEE-VOON.
I'LL TAKE THIS. CHARGE IT TO MR. KNOBBY WALSH—AT THE END OF THE MONTH.
OF COURSE MISS DURFEE.
OH YOU LUCKY, LUCKY GIRL.
I THINK I'LL TAKE IT. CHARGE IT WITH THE OTHER THINGS.
YES MISS DURFEE.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Most West players could feel confident of doubling the optimistic reach for six spades made by North and South of today's deal, but the adversary of C. W. Churchill, of Detroit, lived to regret it.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable

South Dealer

	♠ A 7 5 ♡ K J 4 ◇ Q 10 ♣ K 9 4 3 2
♠ K 4 3 2 ♡ Q 8 3 ◇ 3 ♣ Q 10 8 7 5	NORTH	♠ none ♡ 10 7 6 5 ◇ K J 9 8 7 5 4 2 ♣ J
	♠ Q J 10 9 8 6 ♡ A 9 3 ◇ A 6 ♣ A 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	3 ◇
3 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: 3 ◇

West opened the three of diamonds, which declarer won with the ace. He immediately set about drawing trumps, taking the first finesse with the queen. It held, but East's discard revealed the bad break. Declarer took one more round with the jack and then switching to clubs. He played the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a low one. When East also discarded on this play, his chances of winning the contract looked bad.

However, he did not give up, but tried a new tack. He played a low heart to dummy and finessed the jack, which he held. He returned a club and ruffed. He cashed the ace and king of hearts, and these were the cards that were left:

	♠ A ♡ none ◇ Q ♣ 9
♠ K 4 ♡ none ◇ none ♣ Q	NORTH	♠ none ♡ 8 ◇ K J ♣ none
	♠ 10 9 ♡ none ◇ 6 ♣ none

Churchill led the six of diamonds. West was doomed. If he discarded the queen of clubs, East would win and would have to lead another diamond or a heart. South would trump with the nine and West's king with the nine and West's king would be trapped. If he trumped with the king, dummy's ace would overtrump, and the ten of spades would take the last trick. If West trumped instead of discarding the club queen, he could win one trump trick but no diamonds.

Chapter 39

THE TURN of that phrase made him, unashamed of his homely male materialism, think of the savory food that Susan had put on his table the day when they celebrated Miss Peck's birthday by giving her at the principal's house a meal she had neither planned nor prepared. That had been a feast for the eye, the heart, the palate. Aunt Lavinia was in a new dress, a pretty one of lavender wool, without a grease spot on it, her white hair neatly brushed, her whole person exhaling the washed, well-cared-for decency which Susan alone could produce. Susan had been flushed, bright-eyed, anxious, watching Miss Peck as she tasted critically, and elated to naive strutting when Miss Peck admitted, "Not bad. Not what a person would really call bad at all." What coffee they had had that day! Timothy had marveled aloud at the miracle which had produced coffee like that in his kitchen.

It occurred to him now, remembering the nectar that Susan's coffee had been, that perhaps it was all part of the astonishingly vivid keenness with which he lived whenever he was with Susan. All his senses were sharpened, accurate, alert; not only to her in every smallest detail, but to that part of the world where she stood. His eyes took in the soft Luini-like morbidezza of her fine-textured skin as intimately as if his hands had already stroked it. And the smoke-lightness of her hair—would his mortal hands ever caress that hair, even untie the knot of ribbon that held it back, and let it float free like a cloud? He knew as if he had kissed them, her lovely eyebrows, sensitive, mobile, expressive as another woman's mouth, her eyes—he always lost his head when he looked into those gray eyes, honest, tender, attentive, miraculously unconscious of their beauty. But it was not only of these infinitely familiar, ever-new aspects of her face that he was newly aware when with her, it was to everything around her. He could close his eyes—he did now, dreamily—and see the steep-sloping hill, its grasses grayed by frost, see the glitter of sun reflected from the ice on which she glided, see the very grain in the wood of the table on which she leaned with both brown young hands, looking down at photographs of Chartres and the Medici Chapel. He passed them in review now, the well-remembered backgrounds of every time when he had seen her, marveling at the heaping up of such wealth in his bare life.

Far behind it, almost invisible, Canby awkwardly lumbered about on the ice, sprawled gracelessly in a chair, leaned against a wall, hot, sweaty, defeated, commonplace, and flinging his wet mittens down on the stairs with the spiteful gesture of a bad-mannered boy.

And with how absurd in alacrity—he laughed aloud at another memory—did the visible world and its meaning transform itself when she looked at it, as on the day when, to please Fred Kirby, he had stepped in to see Saint Andrew's being hung with its annual Christmas decorations. He had been in one of his soured, barren moods, and had thought, "They'd better be doing something useful," as he went through the vestibule of the church filled with heaped-up branches of hemlock and spruce, where the women of the parish toiled to shape them into wreaths and ropes. Inside the half-decorated nave, where tall boys stood tip-toe on stepladders to hang the wreaths on the same old nails, he had glowered ungraciously about him, finding the Christmas greens shaggy, formless, depressing. If you were going to decorate in winter, why choose one of the darkest, gloomiest colors in nature? What senseless conservation and slavery to tradition it was to keep laboriously on with a custom the meaning of which had long since been forgotten by everyone.

Then Susan had come in, rosy from the cold, her eyes shining, and had smiled at him—good heavens! what could it be about her smile that threw him into such foolish glowing bliss?—had smiled around her at the decorations, had said they were "just lovely," and what fun it had been to go to the woods for them, and the church looked sweeter every Christmas, didn't it? And his eyes were opened; he saw that the greens were vibrant with vitality, that they alone of all the winter world had held out against the worst that cold could do, that they were—how could he not have seen it before?—a beatiful, time-worn symbol of life enduring, all the more perfect as folk-poetry because its meaning no longer lay on the surface for the literal-minded to see.

A BELL WAS being rung, he heard its clang faintly in the distance. What bell could that be? Not the doorbell. Its clatter quickened, as if it were being rung in impatience. Could it possibly be lunch time! He looked at his watch, and laughing delightedly over his morning, ran downstairs to be scolded by Aunt Lavinia. "You work too hard in vacation time! You've got as good a right as anybody to have a rest. Sitting up there, slaving over their stupid letters! Let them go! What do you care? You fuss too much about the people here, anyhow."

He nodded absently, serving the hash which was Lottie's almost unvarying offering for lunch. There was a silence. Then looking at the rain, clinging in sibilant sheets to the windowpanes, he said, to make a little talk, "I heard at the garage that this storm is snow on the mountain passes."

"What is that to me?" asked Aunt Lavinia, who detested chat—except when she herself began it.

He fell back contentedly to his dreams.

CANBY HAD not been expected for lunch. But he had not come back by the time Timothy took Aunt Lavinia down to the Peck house for their evening meal. Nobody at the supper table felt concerned. The storm had been violent, even for March. Probably, the older people drinking their tea thought, the skiers had made slow work of finding their way. Perhaps were lost. That would be no more than an amusing adventure for them, since even on the mountain it could not be really cold. It was barely below freezing here in the valley; just enough to turn the rain into sleet and to make trouble with telephone wires, not enough to be noticed by vigorous, warmly-clad young men. Miss Lane thought that they would have taken the short cut down the far end of the mountain into Ashley. They were probably there this minute, she said, unable to telephone home because the storm had broken the wires, unable to get a car to bring them back to Clifford because the road gang had not yet sanded the icy roads.

But Mr. Dewey's opinion was that the young men would not try to get back at all that night, but would make themselves a camp with a big bonfire and take turns sleeping around it. "Why not? 'Tain't cold. A bunch of boys. Do'm good. At their age." He spoke with open envy.

"Do you think, Mr. Dewey," Timothy reverted to his own plans, "that the Highway Department will have the roads cleared by to-morrow? The road over the mountain, I mean."

"Sure thing," said Mr. Dewey. March storms don't amount to a row o' pins for all their hollering. I remember one night when I got caught out on old Hemlock late in March, and a big storm of this wet snow came up. I was all alone but I fixed me up a lean-to of pine branches and a fire, and when I woke up at half past two in the morning, the . . ." He stopped, put his hand to his ear, asked in a startled voice, "What was that? Did you hear something? Seems as though I heard the front door open." They all turned their heads towards the hall, and distinctly heard the front door carefully closed.

"Maybe that's Canby now," said Aunt Lavinia.

But nobody came in. There was no sound from the hall. They looked at each other with eyes dilated in astonishment, in uncertainty. There was something taut and troubling about the silence.

The owner of the house half rose from her chair. Mr. Dewey called peremptorily, "Who's there? Who opened that door?"

FACT WAS THERE—raw elemental fact, not to be ignored by self-control, not to be held at arm's length by reasonableness, stonily had and actual fact, crashing across that ordered rational world like a landslide sweeping away all traces of a well-kept road. Chance it was that had opened the door, senseless incalculable chance, its great wheel mockingly crushing human logic and forethought down to dust. Quick light steps hurrying with a sinister softness down the hall brought melodrama into decent self-contained lives which always muffled and turned a deaf ear to their drama, and resolutely refused to admit—for them—the possibility of melodrama.

Anson Craft, Dr. Anson, towered over them as they sat at the table, gaping up, stricken to paralysis by his words, by his nervous energetic gesture commanding silence. He leaned over the table, speaking in a low voice. "An accident," he told them. "Car tipped over on the mountain. The girl that works here is hurt. Badly. No getting her to the hospital, the roads are so icy." As he spoke he flung off his glistening wet slicker, let it fall in a heap, dropped his hat beside it, looked toward the hall and said, "This way." Turning back to Miss Peck:, "Is that the door to your bedroom? Don't stir—leave it just as it is. My wife has come to take charge of the case. She'll do anything that's needed in the room. Now!—not a sound out of any of you!"

Mrs. Craft as there, swift, noiseless, slipping out of her wraps as she crossed to the door of Miss Peck's bedroom. She opened it, stepped in and turned on the electric light. "Here," she said in her controlled nurse's voice to the man who came shuffling in from the hall, a woman in his arms, her head resting on his shoulder. It was turbaned with white bandages, criss-crossed over the face. Only the mouth and chin showed below the swathing cheesecloth. They were marble white.

At the gasping indrawn breath of horror from those sitting at the table, Dr. Craft motioned again—with savage irritability this time—for silence. Canby, setting one foot before the other with trancelike carefulness, walked slowly across the room, in through the open door, and came out without his burden, his face broken and quivering. Dr. Craft went in, turned to lay a stern finger on his lips. The door closed.

MISS PECK, rising, motioned them away from the table, out through the swinging doors toward the kitchen. They followed her through the big pantry, turned, passed through other swinging doors into the dish-closet, and came out into the kitchen. Miss Peck closed the door after them, and Canby burst out, in a hoarse whisper, "Gimmie a drink somebody. For God's sake, I want a drink."

But there was no alcohol in that house. He glared around him as if ready to tear his drink out of them, standing gaping and aghast. Miss Peck turned, ladled up some soup from the kettle on the stove, and pushed him down before a full plate. He flung away the offered spoon, lifted the plate in both hands and drank down the steaming soup in three or four noisy gulps, holding out his plate for more with one hand, pushing his visored skiing cap from his head with the other. His thick hair was matted densely to his head. He had lost his glasses. A dark smear of blood crossed his forehead and ran down one cheek. There were three unshaded high-powered bulbs in the big kitchen. They all went on from one switch and they were all on now, pouring a brutal white glare down on the red-eyed haggard man at the table, and on the set, unnatural, paled faces of the people leaning over him, straining to catch what he told them in that loud insistent whisper, as he tried to eat, snatching at the food offered him as if he were famished, but pushing it away sickly, unable to swallow it—beside himself as if he were as drunk as he would have liked to be.

It did not take long for them to learn what had happened. At about noon Canby and the three academy seniors with him had just finished their sandwich lunch. "I guess we were up near the top of Wolf Hollow," he explained to Mr. Dewey. They had a drink all around out of the flask, which had emptied it—"me without any whisky!" he groaned, striking his hand angrily on the table, "me without the smallest damn drop left in the flask!" They were starting the trip back, but in the wild smother of snow they did not keep to their course very well—"just loping along wherever the going was good. It didn't make any real dif where we came out; we knew we'd have to cross the over-the-mountain road somewhere, and when we struck that we'd know where we were." It had stopped snowing—when, after a long quiet, gliding along a traverse course through the woods, they saw that, some distance before the, the road crossed their course, and that farther up, half covered with snow, a car lay on its side in the ditch. They called to each other, pointed it out, took for granted it had been abandoned and were about to turn and tack back along the slope they were on, when near it they saw something moving. With a rush they started up the hill, poling themselves as fast as they could, but slowly at that, for the slope was steep. "God I thought we'd never get there!" As they climbed, panting, driving themselves to breathlessness, they could see a recurrent stir near the car, but could not at all make out what it was—a dog? A child? It was low to the ground. A person half-pinned under the car? And then they saw. A woman, her head wrapped around with bloody bandages, was trying to raise the car with the jack. "She'd get up on her knees for a minute, work the lever three or four times and fall down again in the snow—but keeping at it, by God! half dead herself, but keeping at it! All alone there in the snow—not running away, not looking out for herself, not giving up—just gritting her teeth and doing what she could—a girl!" His voice broke on the word.

To Be Continued.

By Florence Osborn.

Most West players could feel confident of doubling the optimistic reach for six spades made by North and South of today's deal, but the adversary of C. W. Churchill, of Detroit, lived to regret it.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable

South Dealer

North: ♠ A 7 5 ♡ K J 4 ◇ Q 10 ♣ K 9 4 3 2

West: ♠ K 4 3 2 ♡ Q 8 3 ◇ 3 ♣ Q 10 8 7 5

East: ♠ none ♡ 10 7 6 5 ◇ K J 9 8 7 5 4 2 ♣ J

South: ♠ Q J 10 9 8 6 ♡ A 9 3 ◇ A 6 ♣ A 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	3 ◇
3 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the three of diamonds, which declarer won with the ace. He immediately set about drawing trumps, taking the first finesse with the queen. It held, but East's discard revealed the bad break. Declarer took one more round with the jack and then switching to clubs. He played the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a low one. When East also discarded on this play, his chances of winning the contract looked bad.

However, he did not give up, but tried a new tack. He played a low heart to dummy and finessed the jack, which he held. He returned a club and ruffed. He cashed the ace and king of hearts, and these were the cards that were left:

North: ♠ A ♡ none ◇ Q ♣ 9

West: ♠ K 4 ♡ none ◇ none ♣ Q

East: ♠ none ♡ 8 ◇ K J ♣ none

South: ♠ 10 9 ♡ none ◇ 6 ♣ none

Churchill led the six of diamonds. West was doomed. If he discarded the queen of clubs, East would win and would have to lead another diamond or a heart. South would trump with the nine and West's king with the nine and West's king would be trapped. If he trumped with the king, dummy's ace would overtrump, and the ten of spades would take the last trick. If West trumped instead of discarding the club queen, he could win one trump trick but no diamonds.

Churchill made six spades, losing one diamond.

U. S. Air Factories To Reach $500,000,000

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Wall Street Journal says potential productive capacity of the Nation's primary aircraft manufacturers will reach $500,000,000 annually by early in 1940 when current plant expansion programs are scheduled to be completed.

Chapter 39

THE TURN of that phrase made him, unashamed of his homely male materialism, think of the savory food that Susan had put on his table the day when they celebrated Miss Peck's birthday by giving her at the principal's house a meal she had neither planned nor prepared. That had been a feast for the eye, the heart, the palate. Aunt Lavinia was in a new dress, a pretty one of lavender wool, without a grease spot on it, her white hair neatly brushed, her whole person exhaling the washed, well-cared-for decency which Susan alone could produce. Susan had been flushed, bright-eyed, anxious, watching Miss Peck as she tasted critically, and elated to naïve strutting when Miss Peck admitted, "Not bad. Not what a person would really call bad at all." What coffee they had had that day! Timothy had marveled aloud at the miracle which had produced coffee like that in his kitchen.

It occurred to him now, remembering the nectar that Susan's coffee had been, that perhaps it was all part of the astonishingly vivid keenness with which he lived whenever he was with Susan. All his senses were sharpened, accurate, alert; not only to her in every smallest detail, but to that part of the world where she stood. His eyes took in the soft Luini-like morbidezza of her fine-textured skin as intimately as if his hands had already stroked it. And the smoke-lightness of her hair—would his mortal hands ever caress that hair, even untie the knot of ribbon that held it back, and let it float free like a cloud? He knew as if he had kissed them, her lovely eyebrows, sensitive, mobile, expressive as another woman's mouth, her eyes—he always lost his head when he looked into those gray eyes, honest, tender, attentive, miraculously unconscious of their beauty. But it was not only of these infinitely familiar, ever-new aspects of her face that he was newly aware when with her, it was to everything around her. He could close his eyes—he did now, dreamily—and see the steep-sloping hill, its grasses grayed by frost, see the glitter of sun reflected from the ice on which she glided, see the very grain in the wood of the table on which she leaned with both brown young hands, looking down at photographs of Chartres and the Medici Chapel. He passed them in review now, the well-remembered backgrounds of every time when he had seen her, marveling at the heaping up of such wealth in his bare life.

Far behind it, almost invisible, Canby awkwardly lumbered about on the ice, sprawled gracelessly in a chair, leaned against a wall, hot, sweaty, defeated, commonplace, and flinging his wet mittens down on the stairs with the spiteful gesture of a bad-mannered boy.

And with how absurd in alacrity—he laughed aloud at another memory—did the visible world and its meaning transform itself when she looked at it, as on the day when, to please Fred Kirby, he had stepped in to see Saint Andrew's being hung with its annual Christmas decorations. He had been in one of his soured, barren moods, and had thought, "They'd better be doing something useful," as he went through the vestibule of the church filled with heaped-up branches of hemlock and spruce, where the women of the parish toiled to shape them into wreaths and ropes. Inside the half-decorated nave, where tall boys stood tip-toe on stepladders to hang the wreaths on the same old nails, he had glowered ungraciously about him, finding the Christmas greens shaggy, formless, depressing. If you were going to decorate in winter, why choose one of the darkest, gloomiest colors in nature? What senseless conservation and slavery to tradition it was to keep laboriously on with a custom the meaning of which had long since been forgotten by everyone.

Then Susan had come in, rosy from the cold, her eyes shining, and had smiled at him—good heavens! what could it be about her smile that threw him into such foolish glowing bliss?—had smiled around her at the decorations, had said they were "just lovely," and what fun it had been to go to the woods for them, and the church looked sweeter every Christmas, didn't it? And his eyes were opened; he saw that the greens were vibrant with vitality, that they alone of all the winter world had held out against the worst that cold could do, that they were—how could he not have seen it before?—a beatiful, time-worn symbol of life enduring, all the more perfect as folk-poetry because its meaning no longer lay on the surface for the literal-minded to see.

A BELL WAS being rung, he heard its clang faintly in the distance. What bell could that be? Not the doorbell. Its clatter quickened, as if it were being rung in impatience. Could it possibly be lunch time! He looked at his watch, and laughing delightedly over his morning, ran downstairs to be scolded by Aunt Lavinia. "You work too hard in vacation time! You've got as good a right as anybody to have a rest. Sitting up there, slaving over their stupid letters! Let them go! What do you care? You fuss too much about the people here, anyhow."

He nodded absently, serving the hash which was Lottie's almost unvarying offering for lunch. There was a silence. Then looking at the rain, clinging in sibilant sheets to the windowpanes, he said, to make a little talk, "I heard at the garage that this storm is snow on the mountain passes."

"What is that to me?" asked Aunt Lavinia, who detested chat—except when she herself began it.

He fell back contentedly to his dreams.

CANBY HAD not been expected for lunch. But he had not come back by the time Timothy took Aunt Lavinia down to the Peck house for their evening meal. Nobody at the supper table felt concerned. The storm had been violent, even for March. Probably, the older people drinking their tea thought, the skiers had made slow work of finding their way. Perhaps were lost. That would be no more than an amusing adventure for them, since even on the mountain it could not be really cold. It was barely below freezing here in the valley; just enough to turn the rain into sleet and to make trouble with telephone wires, not enough to be noticed by vigorous, warmly-clad young men. Miss Lane thought that they would have taken the short cut down the far end of the mountain into Ashley. They were probably there this minute, she said, unable to telephone home because the storm had broken the wires, unable to get a car to bring them back to Clifford because the road gang had not yet sanded the icy roads.

But Mr. Dewey's opinion was that the young men would not try to get back at all that night, but would make themselves a camp with a big bonfire and take turns sleeping around it. "Why not? 'Tain't cold. A bunch of boys. Do'm good. At their age." He spoke with open envy.

"Do you think, Mr. Dewey," Timothy reverted to his own plans, "that the Highway Department will have the roads cleared by to-morrow? The road over the mountain, I mean."

"Sure thing," said Mr. Dewey. March storms don't amount to a row o' pins for all their hollering. I remember one night when I got caught out on old Hemlock late in March, and a big storm of this wet snow came up. I was all alone but I fixed me up a lean-to of pine branches and a fire, and when I woke up at half past two in the morning, the . . ." He stopped, put his hand to his ear, asked in a startled voice, "What was that? Did you hear something? Seems as though I heard the front door open." They all turned their heads towards the hall, and distinctly heard the front door carefully closed.

"Maybe that's Canby now," said Aunt Lavinia.

But nobody came in. There was no sound from the hall. They looked at each other with eyes dilated in astonishment, in uncertainty. There was something taut and troubling about the silence.

The owner of the house half rose from her chair. Mr. Dewey called peremptorily, "Who's there? Who opened that door?"

FACT WAS THERE—raw elemental fact, not to be ignored by self-control, not to be held at arm's length by reasonableness, stonily had and actual fact, crashing across that ordered rational world like a landslide sweeping away all traces of a well-kept road. Chance it was that had opened the door, senseless incalculable chance, its great wheel mockingly crushing human logic and forethought down to dust. Quick light steps hurrying with a sinister softness down the hall brought melodrama into decent self-contained lives which always muffled and turned a deaf ear to their drama, and resolutely refused to admit—for them—the possibility of melodrama.

Anson Craft, Dr. Anson, towered over them as they sat at the table, gaping up, stricken to paralysis by his words, by his nervous energetic gesture commanding silence. He leaned over the table, speaking in a low voice. "An accident," he told them. "Car tipped over on the mountain. The girl that works here is hurt. Badly. No getting her to the hospital, the roads are so icy." As he spoke he flung off his glistening wet slicker, let it fall in a heap, dropped his hat beside it, looked toward the hall and said, "This way." Turning back to Miss Peck, "Is that the door to your bedroom? Don't stir—leave it just as it is. My wife has come to take charge of the case. She'll do anything that's needed in the room. Now!—not a sound out of any of you!"

Mrs. Craft as there, swift, noiseless, slipping out of her wraps as she crossed to the door of Miss Peck's bedroom. She opened it, stepped in and turned on the electric light. "Here," she said in her controlled nurse's voice to the man who came shuffling in from the hall, a woman in his arms, her head resting on his shoulder. It was turbaned with white bandages, criss-crossed over the face. Only the mouth and chin showed below the swathing cheesecloth. They were marble white.

At the gasping indrawn breath of horror from those sitting at the table, Dr. Craft motioned again—with savage irritability this time—for silence. Canby, setting one foot before the other with trancelike carefulness, walked slowly across the room, in through the open door, and came out without his burden, his face broken and quivering. Dr. Craft went in, turned to lay a stern finger on his lips. The door closed.

MISS PECK, rising, motioned them away from the table, out through the swinging doors toward the kitchen. They followed her through the big pantry, turned, passed through other swinging doors into the dish-closet, and came out into the kitchen. Miss Peck closed the door after them, and Canby burst out, in a hoarse whisper, "Gimmie a drink somebody. For God's sake, I want a drink."

But there was no alcohol in that house. He glared around him as if ready to tear his drink out of them, standing gaping and aghast. Miss Peck turned, ladled up some soup from the kettle on the stove, and pushed him down before a full plate. He flung away the offered spoon, lifted the plate in both hands and drank down the steaming soup in three or four noisy gulps, holding out his plate for more with one hand, pushing his visored skiing cap from his head with the other. His thick hair was matted densely to his head. He had lost his glasses. A dark smear of blood crossed his forehead and ran down one cheek. There were three unshaded high-powered bulbs in the big kitchen. They all went on from one switch and they were all on now, pouring a brutal white glare down on the red-eyed haggard man at the table, and on the set, unnatural, paled faces of the people leaning over him, straining to catch what he told them in that loud insistent whisper, as he tried to eat, snatching at the food offered him as if he were famished, but pushing it away sickly, unable to swallow it—beside himself as if he were as drunk as he would have liked to be.

It did not take long for them to learn what had happened. At about noon Canby and the three academy seniors with him had just finished their sandwich lunch. "I guess we were up near the top of Wolf Hollow," he explained to Mr. Dewey. They had a drink all around out of the flask, which had emptied it—"me without any whisky!" he groaned, striking his hand angrily on the table, "me without the smallest damn drop left in the flask!" They were starting the trip back, but in the wild smother of snow they did not keep to their course very well—"just loping along wherever the going was good. It didn't make any real dif where we came out; we knew we'd have to cross the over-the-mountain road somewhere, and when we struck that we'd know where we were." It had stopped snowing—when, after a long quiet, gliding along a traverse course through the woods, they saw that, some distance before the, the road crossed their course, and that farther up, half covered with snow, a car lay on its side in the ditch. They called to each other, pointed it out, took for granted it had been abandoned and were about to turn and tack back along the slope they were on, when near it they saw something moving. With a rush they started up the hill, poling themselves as fast as they could, but slowly at that, for the slope was steep. "God I thought we'd never get there!" As they climbed, panting, driving themselves to breathlessness, they could see a recurrent stir near the car, but could not at all make out what it was—a dog? A child? It was low to the ground. A person half-pinned under the car? And then they saw. A woman, her head wrapped around with bloody bandages, was trying to raise the car with the jack. "She'd get up on her knees for a minute, work the lever three or four times and fall down again in the snow—but keeping at it, by God! half dead herself, but keeping at it! All alone there in the snow—not running away, not looking out for herself, not giving up—just gritting her teeth and doing what she could—a girl!" His voice broke on the word.

To Be Continued.
